Greyhound Pact Union Vote Due

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Officials of Greyhound Bus Lines and the mechanics' representatives reached a tentative agreement last night that is expected to avert a threatened strike which would have left 4,000 Marin County commuters without service.

The agreement was reached about 6 p.m. last night following a 90-minute meeting between the two sides.

Terms of the tenative agreement were not announced, pending approval by the union's 350 members.

K. B. Satrom, director of agency relations for Western Greyhound, said that commuters would know before Monday morning whether the agreement had been accepted and whether bus service would be available.

The 350 members of tthe International Association of Machinists, Local 1305, had threatened to walk off their jobs, leaving some 23,000 Bay Area commuters without service. A strike would also disrupt service in the 11 Western states.

The mechanics, now paid $5.09 an hour, had demanded a new three-year contract that would raise pay $1.50 an hour and liberalize benefits.

Union members gave their negotiators strike authorization last Tuesday after rejecting a Greyhound offer of a three-year contract calling for a wage hike of 67 cents hourly.

Union officials were unavailable today to say when union members would vote on the tentative agreement, if they had not already done so.

The tentative agreement came as somewhat of a surprise. Only hours before Greyhound and union officials had broken off talks and federal mediator Roger Randall said that a strike was imminent.

Ferryboats Still Idle; No Talks

Chances for quick settlement of a strike by 16 marine engineers against Harbor Tours Inc. appeared gloomy today as water taxis, ferry boats and sightseeing boats remained tied up for the fourth day.

No negotiations were scheduled during the weekend between the firm and representatives of the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association.

About 200 Marin residents who commute to jobs in San Francisco on the ferries during the week will again be forced to join freeway traffic Monday unless a settlement is reached.

Lester Bedient, general manager of Harbor Tours, said the ager of Hrbor Tours, said the progress in the dispute.

Tax Reform Bills Face Critical Demo Barrage

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Assembly Democrats refused today to commit themselves to a new tax revision package worked out by a select committee of three Republicans and three Democrats.

One of the Democrats, Assemblyman George Zenovich of Fresno, said there was no concrete agreement — only a consensus toward the type of "a tax reform that might be proposed."

Zenovich, the Democratic caucus chairman, said Assembly Democrats are flexible on tax reform in general and on withholding of state income taxes specifically.

When he announced provisions of the plan, Republican Assemblyman William T. Bagley of San Anselmo said it included compulsory withholding. This almost immediately dimmed its chance of winning approval of Gov. Ronald Reagan, a staunch opponent of mandatory withholding.

Assembly Democrats have voted solidly for withholding in the past, making it a major issue between them and the Republican Reagan. There has been no indication that they have changed their position on the subject.

But Zenovich said, "If any one of us is locked into a firm position, the chances are dimmed for a settlement." He said the position of Democrats on withholding had been "inadvertently misrepresented" by some Republicans.

Democrats have insisted that shaping of a tax revision or reform package be a condition of passing the budget. Although Republicans have a 40-39 edge in seats in the Assembly, Democrats were able to block passage of the budget May 27 since it takes a two-thirds vote of 54 members to approve it.

The program announced by Bagley would boost income and sales taxes in order to provide about $1 billion in various forms of property tax relief. He said the proposals will be put into final form by a Revenue and Taxation subcommittee Monday.

Supervisors Still Facing $2.50 Rate

Frustrated Marin County supervisors wound up a week of budget deliberations last night, facing a record tax rate of $2.50 per $100 assessed valuation for 1969-70, up 23 cents from this year's $2.27. (See other supervisor's stories, page 6.)

Instead of reducing the rate as hoped, the supervisors had their hands full fighting off new demands that threatened to propel the rate even higher.

Yesterday, the board rejected a $15,000 plea for new War on Poverty funds by Dr. Festus Adebonojo, chairman of the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council, and Mrs. Adelaide P. Wilson, a council member.

The funds were sought for a coordinator of the volunteer pediatrics clinic proposed in Marin City and to expand a training program, now limited to clerical instruction to women on welfare, to men.

After a 4-1 vote rejecting the

Tempers Higher Than College Flag

Students played cat and mouse with the American flag at the College of Marin yesterday.

In a bizarre double ceremony, the flag was lowered to half-mast twice, raised to full-mast twice and almost fought over in an altercation between students.

At 1 p.m. a group of students, led by the Gorilla Band of the San Francisco Mime Troupe, marched from the Student Center across the full sweep of lawn to the flagpole.

There Dean of Instruction Irwin P. Diamond announced that the flag, as voted by the Marin Junior College District trustees Thursday night, would be placed at half-mast until the end of final examinations June 19 in memory of former College of Marin students and all those who have lost their lives in war.

Diamond was interrupted with student calls of " . . . and all those who are going to die." And, "How about the Viet Cong?"

Dennis Marnell, a member of the Students for a Democratic Society, said that the board was notorious for lack of interest and lack of action on the part of student needs and demands.

Edward S. Schimberg, SDS co-chairman, said that "besides expressing moral outrage to the war, this is also a protest against all American actions throughout the world and here at home."

The Mimists, who had given a performance at noon on campus disparaging war, then played "The Star Spangled Banner," accenting the lines such as "the rockets red glare" and "the bombs bursting in air."

During the music the flag was lowered to its base, then raised to half-mast.

The troupe quickly displayed four signs reading, "Get Out of Vietnam and Peoples' Park" and the ceremony was over.

Most of the students then returned to the area of the student center to meet on another issue, but a few — apparently disturbed at the ceremony — remained.

Student Michele Kilian told the Independent-Journal that she felt there had been disrespect for the flag because so many people had been seated on the lawn. She also said the flag was not lowered properly.

Val Sabuco, another student, charged that the national anthem had been disgraced.

Student Cathy Cotter of Greenbrae then went to the flagpole and raised the flag to the top. Marnell returned, saying, "That was pretty stupid," and Dean Diamond told Miss Cotter that it was a board action and he lowered the flag again to half-mast.

At this point several students began arguing with Marnell, Miss Cotter saying, "Nobody has the right to lower the flag . . . that's our country."

"If you get to be a man and have to put your --- on the line, then you can come and talk to us about it," countered Marnell, who said he was wounded in Vietnam. Marnell added, "I call it (the flag) a rag. I'd like to burn it."

"Try it," said a youth, angrily.

Marnell urged the students to organize.

Marnell was then told, "If you don't like this country, get out."

"I don't have time to get organized for little wars," said student Greg Garner. "I didn't come here to fight a revolution."

"Organize," said Marnell and he walked off.

Student Loren Swaney said he didn't believe the flag was lowered by "these people" for the same reason that the trustees voted to have it done.

"I'm ashamed of this school,"

White House Expects Midway Parley To Have Good Results In Paris Talks

HONOLULU (AP—President Richard M. Nixon, stopping here today en route to his Vietnam summit conference on Midway Island, believes that the North Vietnamese are ready for serious peace bargaining.

White House sources, speaking with the President's approval, said private talks and indirect contacts with representatives of Hanoi and the Viet Cong have led to a conclusion that the stage is set for active negotiations in Paris.

Nixon flies to Midway tomorrow for five hours of conferences with President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam.

Among other matters, they will talk about the eventual withdrawal of some U.S. troops from South Vietnam as the training of South Vietnamese replacements and the military situation permit.

The sources said public and private North Vietnamese reaction to Nixon's eight-point peace plan May 14 have encouraged official American optimism that substantive bargaining soon will begin in Paris.

They disclosed that the North Vietnamese, through private channels, have been asking legitimate rather than propagandistic questions about details of the Nixon proposals which call for withdrawal of most outside forces from South Vietnam over a 12-month period. These questions, they said, involve such matters as what will happen to remaining American troops after the 12 months, and who will supervise the free elections which Nixon has suggested for all South Vietnamese, Communists included.

It is the administration's feeling that questions about such specifics from the enemy's side augur well for Paris progress.

As Nixon and his party headed toward Midway by way of Honolulu, Thieu was handed resolutions in Saigon yesterday from the South Vietnamese Senate, the National Assembly and

Lost Plane Raft Rumor Unfounded

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Hope was dim that any of the 19 crewmen of a missing Strategic Air Command plane would be found alive as ships and planes continued to search today.

Search planes were grounded in some places because of worsening weather conditions, the Coast Guard said.

One Coast Guard cutter was in the search center area, roughly 200 miles north of Amchitka Island in the Aleutian chain. Four big patrol boats were combing the area and three other ships were closing in on the scene.

Hope rose briefly earlier today when the Japanese Maritime Safety Agency said a Japanese fishing boat reported survivors from a large plane were adrift in a liferaft in the area.

But the North Pacific Rescue Coordination Center here said it knew of no raft in the area. The center said the Japanese boat might have been confused by a request dropped to them by a U.S. plane asking their help in the search.

The missing SAC jet, a military version of the Boeing 707 designated as an RC135, disappeared about 30 minutes after leaving Shemya Island Thursday on a "routine" flight to Eielson Air Force Base near Fairbanks, Alaska. It was about 250 miles east of Shemya, on the end of the Aleutian Island chain, when the last radio report was received from it.

Regents Seek Park Answer; New Troubles

BERKELEY (UP) — A committee of University of California regents held an emergency session today—hours after a police raid on People's Park No. 2—with a plea for understanding between the generations.

The building and grounds committee meeting, attended by 10 regents, was an effort to seek a solution to Berkeley's continuing crisis which produced another 30 arrests during the night.

'PLAN FOR FUTURE'

William K. Coblentz, committee chairman, deplored "violence, mistakes in judgment" but said the purpose today is not "to recount the past but to plan for the future."

"I plea for understanding on both sides of the generation gulf. The young should try to understand that most of us want to improve society, not to destroy it in the transparently unlikely hope of making it better by making it worse," he told a hearing room full of persons waiting to speak.

HITCH SPEAKS

University President Charles J. Hitch told the regents they have four alternatives.

One was to install playing fields but lease a portion of the block to the city which "would use, develop and maintain" it as a park. Another would be divided the area in the same manner but with a park under university auspices.

A third alternative would be to proceed more promptly to erect living residences, now contemplated in about 10 years.

Hitch, who made no recommendation, said a fourth alternative would be to proceed with the original plan to put playing fields on the property but "with some variance for community oriented purposes."

SPONTANEOUS GESTURE — Children and adults attending the memorial mass in Arlington National Cemetery for the late Robert F. Kennedy place lighted candles on the wall leading to the grave of the assassinated senator. An estimated 5,000 attended the mass last night. (AP Wirephoto)

Candles Pay Tribute To Robert F. Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — When it was over they came through the darkness down the slopes of the great cemetery at Arlington to place candles — hundreds of them—on a granite ledge near the foot of Robert Francis Kennedy's grave.

They had come—more than 5,000 persons—to mark the first full year since an assassin's bullet took the New York senator's life.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, in a black suit, stood next to Ethel, his brother's widow. Hatless and waring a simple all-white dress, she was in the center of the long row of Kennedy kin as the memorial folk mass began last night.

Near the end of the line, standing a few paces from Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, was Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, wearing a fitted black dress. A few yards behind her, across a hedge and a marble terrace, was the grave of another American leader, her first husband, President John F. Kennedy

Mrs. Onassis was handed a candle. She bent over and touched it to the flame held by former astronaut John Glenn who was kneeling near her feet, shielding the flickering light against the early evening wind with his hands. Later her candle blew out and she rekindled it from the one held by her son, John F. Kennedy Jr.

The mass, beginning in the glow of sunset, had 15 guitarists and 70 singers and was led by white-robed Terrence Cardinal Cooke, Archbishop of New York.

One of the last songs in the hour-long service used words based on Edward Kennedy's eulogy to his brother a year ago:

"He saw wrong and tried to right it. Saw suffering and tried to heal it. He saw war and tried to stop it . . ."

The service at Arlington, conducted after dark and lit by candles, was strikingly similar to the circumstances under which Robert Kennedy was buried last June 10. Across the nation, other services were held.

The Revitalization Corps, a volunteer group dedicated to the memory of the two assassinated Kennedys, held a 12-hour vigil near the United Nations in New York.

Quotations from Robert Kennedy's speeches on peace, brotherhood and personal committment were included in a mass at the Paulist Center facing the Common in Boston.

At Arlington, the services concluded, the dignitaries filing to their cars, the crowd on the hillside above the two graves continued singing "the Battle Hymn of the Republic."

And when they left, hundreds of them bent, spontaneously to fix their glowing candles on the wall at Robert Kennedy's feet.

Brown Berets Indicted In Arson Plot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A rookie Mexican - American policeman, posing as a bearded rebel, tipped authorities to a militant ring that plotted to burn a hotel while Gov. Ronald Reagan spoke, a grand jury was told yesterday.

The county grand jury yesterday indicted 10 persons, including two officers of an activist Mexican-American group, in connection with a series of nine fires at the Biltmore Hotel April 24.

Undercover policeman Fernando Sumaya, 23, also gave testimony which led to indictment of three others in the May 10 fire-bombing of an East Los Angeles supermarket.

Authorities said Sumaya was pulled off the case two weeks ago when members of the Brown Berets learned their organization was infiltrated.

Although police and firemen were warned by Sumaya of a plan to start fires and disturbances at the hotel, they said, fire control was slowed because the fires were in scattered areas.

However, they testified, firemen stopped the flames before they engulfed the hotel while Reagan addressed 400 Mexican-American educators in the Biltmore Bowl.

The district attorney's office said Sumaya saved hundreds of lives with his tip. The fires caused $100,000 damage. No one was hurt.

Sumaya was ordered by his superiors to infiltrate the Brown Berets after his graduation last year from the police academy the panel was told.

Indicted in the Biltmore incident were: Carlos Montez, 21, minister of information for the Brown Berets; Ralph Ramirez, 19, minister of discipline for the group; Ernesto Cebada Eichwald, 26, California State College at Los Angeles student; Esmeralda Bernal, 20, instructor at San Jose State College. They were charged with conspiracy, arson, burglary and malicious destruction of electrical lines.

Also indicted were: Anthony Salamanca, 26, assistant coordinator of the Educational Opportunities Program at San Francisco State College; Moctezuma Esparza, 20, UCLA student; Rene Nunez, 33, employe of the Los Angeles Education Clearing House; Thomas Varela, 20, East Los Angeles College student; Willie Mendoza, 18, East Los Angeles College student; and Juan Robles, 22.

They were charged with conspiracy, burglary and malicious destruction of electrical lines.

Accused of conspiracy, attempted arson, possession of explosives and possession of fire bombs in the Safeway incident were: William Rivas, 22, Rosemead; Alphonso Aceves, 22, Los Angeles; and Angelina Cummings, about 22, East Los Angeles College student.

Fishing Controversy

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — Thirteen Japanese gillnetters are reported to be operating inside the 12-mile fishing limit in Norton Sound.

Rep. Howard W. Pollock's office said yesterday a Bureau of Commercial Fisheries plane had spotted the gillnetters, part of a fleet of 31 Japanese vessels operating off Unalaklett, about 125 miles southeast of Nome.

Fisheries experts said it was unclear whether the Japanese had violated any law.

Ross Meeting Set On Flood Control

A Ross citizens committee seeking an alternative to the Army Corps of Engineers plans for the Corte Madera Creek Flood Control Project through Ross will reveal its plans at a meeting Monday.

The meeting, for all interested residents, will be at 8 p.m. in the multipurpose room of Ross School.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Measles Vaccine

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's first vaccine against German measles, which endangers the unborn children of pregnant women, is expected to be licensed early next week Standards governing production of the vaccine were published yesterday on levels of safety, purity and potency. Children will receive the first vaccine available.

Douglas Hit

PASADENA (UPI) — Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., predicts there will be "startling" new revelations about Supreme Couurt Justice William O. Douglas within the next two weeks.

Murphy made the remarks at the annual luncheon meeting of the Pasadena unit of Pro America, a volunteer patriotic group.

He refused to elaborate on the revelations but said, "I would resign, if I were him Douglas."

Russ Flays China

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev declared today the damage to world communism caused by Red China is "impossible to underestimate."

Addressing delegates of 75 Communist parties meeting in the Kremlin, Brezhnev said China had, in fact, broken with the Communist movement.

Brezhnev's speech, broadcast by Moscow radio shortly after it was delivered, was the most bitter attack on China to come from the three-day-old conference so far.

There was no immediate word on the reaction of Romania which openly objected yesterday to earlier criticism of China.

School Strike Due?

OXNARD (AP) — Striking teachers plan a Monday morning meeting to determine if Oxnard elementary district trustees will meet their wage demands. It was uncertain whether schools would open.

More than two-thirds of the 360 elementary teachers stayed away from work yesterday, forcing administrators to send home 7,600 students from 11 schools.

Guns Become Art

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Civic Center has a new statue today made from guns voluntarily turned in after the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy one year ago.

It stands in front of the fountain across from City Hall and features the faces of four assassinated leaders — Abraham Lincoln, John F. and Robert F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King.

Facing sculptor Benny Bufano's "St. Francis of the Guns" statue yesterday in dedication ceremonies, Mayor Joseph Alioto told a crowd of 3,500 that "Guns melted to a symbol of peace become an instrument of peace."

Leftist Injured

Fliers Killed

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Two crew members of a plane shot down Thursday by the Nigerian air force were killed, the Nigerian federal government announced today.

"The statement yesterday that they were captured alive was incorrect," the government said in a statement. It added the bodies of the men have been recovered and taken to Port Harcourt, where the other two crewmen were reported held prisoner.

The Nigerian army claimed yesterday that Soviet-built MIG jet fighters of its air force shot down a DC6 apparently on a "surprise bombing raid" and captured at least two members of the crew who survived.

At about the same time, the International Red Cross said a DC7 based on the island of Fernando Po and flying relief supplies into the encircled enclave of Biafra was missing. It carried a crew of four, including an American pilot, two Swedes and a Nigerian.

Defense Ministry sources here denied the Nigerians had shot down a Red Cross plane, arousing speculation that two planes actually were downed.

Dual Deaths Found

NEW YORK (UPI) — A South American millionaire big-game hunter and his estranged wife have been found shot to death in the woman's east side apartment.

Police said the man, Alfredo Cernandas, 54, a native of Argentina, apparently had shot his wife, Patricia, 29, and then turned the gun on himself.

Offer Hinted For Cal Expo

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A Senate committee has decided to wait for more details of a reported deal with private investors before deciding Cal Expo's place in the 1969-70 state budget.

The Finance Committee delayed action yesterday after a Sacramento newspaper reported that money interests from the East Coast were negotiating with state officials to take over the exposition.

The deal as reported by the Sacramento Bee would involve not only the operation of the facility, but payment of its debts and development of vacant Expo land.

Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka, chairman of the committee, suggested that the senators wait for more details on the plan.

Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post wanted the committee to leave Cal Expo out of the budget to force Sacramento city and county officials to take an active part in developing the $32 million exposition site.

Star Seriously Ill

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Robert Taylor's condition has worsened since he re-entered a hospital for treatment of lung cancer, a spokesman says.

The spokesman for St. John's Hospital in nearby Santa Monica gave no other details yesterday.

Most of the actor's right lung was removed last Oct. 8 because of a fungus infection called valley fever. Two months later his wife, Ursula Thiess, told newsmen Taylor, 57, had a malignant cancer in the same lung.

MOST WANTED — The FBI has added Marie Dean Arrington to its list of 10 most wanted fugitives, the second time a woman has been named to the list in 19 years. She escaped from a Florida prison while waiting to die for murder.

More Arrests At Muir Beach

Two Marin County men and a Concord woman were arrested yesterday during the Marin County Sheriff's Department's latest raid on Muir Beach nude bathers.

Booked into Marin County Jail on suspicion of indecent exposure and disturbing the peace were Karen Yvone Kozlowski, 18, of Concord; Gavin Eric Hadden, 19, of 145 Kent Avenue, Kentfield; and Thomas Walker Nash, 24, of Star Route, Muir Beach. They were held on $125 bail each to appear at 2 p.m. Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Sheriff's deputies said the three were arrested at 5:30 p.m. after Beach residents complained that more than 15 persons were bathing in the nude at the beach.

SPONTANEOUS GESTURE — Children and adults attending the memorial mass in Arlington National Cemetery for the late Robert F. Kennedy place lighted candles on the wall leading to the grave of the assassinated senator. An estimated 5,000 attended the mass last night. (AP Wirephoto)

Candles Pay Tribute To Robert F. Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — When it was over they came through the darkness down the slopes of the great cemetery at Arlington to place candles — hundreds of them—on a granite ledge near the foot of Robert Francis Kennedy's grave.

They had come—more than 5,000 persons—to mark the first full year since an assassin's bullet took the New York senator's life.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, in a black suit, stood next to Ethel, his brother's widow. Hatless and waring a simple all-white dress, she was in the center of the long row of Kennedy kin as the memorial folk mass began last night.

Near the end of the line, standing a few paces from Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, was Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, wearing a fitted black dress. A few yards behind her, across a hedge and a marble terrace, was the grave of another American leader, her first husband, President John F. Kennedy

Mrs. Onassis was handed a candle. She bent over and touched it to the flame held by former astronaut John Glenn who was kneeling near her feet, shielding the flickering light against the early evening wind with his hands. Later her candle blew out and she rekindled it from the one held by her son, John F. Kennedy Jr.

The mass, beginning in the glow of sunset, had 15 guitarists and 70 singers and was led by white-robed Terrence Cardinal Cooke, Archbishop of New York.

One of the last songs in the hour-long service used words based on Edward Kennedy's eulogy to his brother a year ago:

"He saw wrong and tried to right it. Saw suffering and tried to heal it. He saw war and tried to stop it . . ."

The service at Arlington, conducted after dark and lit by candles, was strikingly similar to the circumstances under which Robert Kennedy was buried last June 10. Across the nation, other services were held.

The Revitalization Corps, a volunteer group dedicated to the memory of the two assassinated Kennedys, held a 12-hour vigil near the United Nations in New York.

Quotations from Robert Kennedy's speeches on peace, brotherhood and personal committment were included in a mass at the Paulist Center facing the Common in Boston.

At Arlington, the services concluded, the dignitaries filing to their cars, the crowd on the hillside above the two graves continued singing "the Battle Hymn of the Republic."

And when they left, hundreds of them bent, spontaneously to fix their glowing candles on the wall at Robert Kennedy's feet.

Apollo Crew Explains Missing Landing Site

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Apollo 10 astronauts reported today the moon landing site they inspected is "rugged" but the Apollo 11 crew should have no problem touching down there.

They told a news conference they actually missed the site by four miles to the south as they flew to within 9.4 miles of the surface because of irregularities in the lunar gravitational field.

"Because of our flight," Air Force Col. Thomas P. Stafford reported, "we now know about these perturbations. Our flight taught us much that has given us confidence. We see no reason why we can't put Apollo 11 right on the landing site."

Stafford and Navy Cmdrs. John W. Young and Eugene A. Cernan completed an extensive 10-day debriefing on their moon orbit flight yesterday, discussing all aspects with experts.

What they reported will help determine if Apollo 11 will attempt the lunar landing in July or whether the flight will be delayed until August to give the crew—Neil A. Armstrong, Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. and Michael Collins—more time to prepare.

The decision will be made Thursday.

Stafford, the Apollo 10 commander, said that when he and Cernan separated the lunar module, or LEM from the command ship, "it was readily apparent we were dropping down."

Young remained in the command vehicle circling the moon at an altitude of 69 miles.

"We actually ended up four miles south of the landing site," Stafford said, "so I had to shoot our pictures off to the right."

He said that irregularities in the gravity field, plus the fact the moon is not perfectly round, had put them off target.

Court-Martial Studies Sentences For Mutiny

FORT ORD (AP) — An Army court martial deliberated today the penalty for 12 soldiers convicted yesterday of mutiny in a singing sitdown protest at the San Francisco Presidio stockade last October.

Two other enlisted men were convicted on lesser charges of disobedience.

Lt. Col. James A. Hagan, presiding as judge, told a five-man trial panel to consider that no violence or injury resulted in protest, which involved 27 stockade prisoners last Oct. 14.

The panel requested that lunch be served in their jury room so deliberation could continue without a meal break.

The 14 were among 27 charged with mutiny last Oct. 14 as they staged the sitdown to protest what they called unsanitary conditions at the stockade. The sitdown came two days after a prisoner had been fatally shot by a guard during an alleged escape attempt.

Eight of the others charged have been convicted of mutiny, two have been hospitalized for observation and three have escaped and are at large.

After the convictions the panel reconvened and heard 3½ hours of argument by attorneys for the defense and prosecution in what is known as the "extenuation and mitigation" phase of the trial that determines the penalty.

Chief defense attorney Terence Hallinan argued that "none of these men are criminals—they are sick children, and were no threat to the United States Army last Oct. 14."

Hallinan said, "These young men have been convicted of only one thing—being mistreated all their lives."

Bay's Pesticide Pollution Laid To Multiple Sources

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Industries and municipalities must share the blame for depositing "hard pesticides" into the state's waters, says the San Francisco Bay-Delta Water Quality Program report being reviewed by the State Water Resources Control Board.

About half the pesticide that is washed into the Delta and the bay comes from agricultural sources and about half from municipal and industrial waste discharge, the report says.

"Of all the pollutants that are discharged into water, the chlorinated hydrocarbon (or hard) pesticides are the most insidious in terms of biological effects," the study found. "Small amounts of these nondegradable pesticides, such as DDT, are known to kill some animals outright and some species of birds and fish may be prevented from effective reproduction even though adults are not killed."

Agricultural sources have been under increasing pressure recently to give up the use of the "hard pesticides" because of their effects.

The state has control over agricultural use of pesticides but there is no regulation of industrial sources, said a statement from the water control board today.

The Bay-Delta report proposes that the use of DDT be banned.

The board is expected to complete its review of the Bay-Delta study late in June and make its recommendations to the legislature.

The study proposes ways of preserving the quality of the water in the 12-county Bay-Delta region.

Service Station Dope Sale Denied

Frank Joseph Bonomolo, 22, of Petaluma, who with his younger brother is charged with selling drugs at their father's Novato service station, yesterday entered a plea of innocent to selling LSD to a drug agent.

Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. set a preliminary hearing for June 30.

The case of George Tipton Bonomolo, 19, accused of selling marijuana, has been referred to the probation department for possible transferral to juvenile court.

Woman Recovering Following Collapse

Mrs. Mona A. Horowitz of Sausalito was reported in good condition today at Marin General Hospital, where she was taken Thursday night after apparently consuming an overdose of an unknown medicine.

Mrs. Horowitz, of 33 Sunshine Avenue, collapsed at the home of a neighbor and was taken to the hospital by her husband.

Graduates' Party Leads To Arrest

Six Oakland youths, celebrating a high school graduation, were arrested at 6:30 a.m. today by Marin County sheriff's deputies after they allegedly were found smoking marijuana in a parked car in Stinson Beach.

Booked into Marin County Jail on suspicion of marijuana possession and contributing to the delinquency of minors were Ingrid Maria Lobos, Walter Robert Cristolo, Jeffrey Patrick Heagerty and Ronald James Grajeda, all 18. Grajeda was also booked on suspicion of resisting arrest.

The two juveniles were cited and released to their parents.

Market Burglars Steal Trade Stamps

Burglars took food, cigarettes, liquor and blue chip stamps, valued at more than $400, from the Cala Market on Adrian Way in Santa Venetia between 9 p.m. Wednesday and 7 a.m. Thursday, Marin County sheriff's deputies reported today.

Among the items stolen were 30 record albums, 43 cartons of cigarettes, 18 sixpacks of beer, two gallons of wine, six fifths and one quart of whisky, six salamis and three blue chip dispensers containing an unknown amount of blue chip stamps.

BOATS

Tours and other firms face an additional strike by operators of inland bay tug boats unless agreement is reached on a new contract for about 75 men by June 15. Their contract expired June 1 and was extended 15 days.

The additional workers also are represented by the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association.

"I don't look for too much beginning until this thing jells into a pattern," said Bedient.

Union spokesmen could not be reached for comment.

Bedient said disputes in the past between marine engineers and ship and tugboat operators had always been settled in one package. He said the current strike against Bay Tours was the first splinter action by the marine engineers in years of negotiations.

Reds Bloodily Beaten Back

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese troops were mangled today in a furious assault on a small U.S. fire base in the sort of attacks that by allied accounts have left 1,000 enemy dead in two days.

Best estimates are that 60 Americans have been killed and more than 200 wounded in the two days. South Vietnamese casualties were put at 107 killed and 379 wounded.

Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, told reporters before leaving for the Midway Island conference of President Nixon and President Nguyen Van Thieu that he did not think the sharp rise in enemy attacks was a summer offensive.

"I don't think they are doing anything different," he said. "They're just trying to harass and inflict casualties. I think the real purpose is psychological in terms of the people in the United States."

Other officers have suggested the increase in the intensity of enemy attacks is intended to put pressures on Nixon and Thieu at their conference.

Of the estimated enemy casualties, about 400 of them have been killed in two days of trying to overrun Fire Base Crook, a tiny U.S. 25th Infantry Division outpost four miles from Cambodia and 65 miles northwest of Saigon.

The attacks on the base have been by far the largest in last week's series of enemy offensive operations in South Vietnam.

By 3:30 p.m. the flag had been raised to full height again and an hour later it had disappeared.

As is customary, college employees had removed the flag for the weekend.

Crash Injures Ross Women

Two Ross women were injured early today when their car crashed into the center divider on Highway 101 near the Corte Madera offramp.

Driver Marnee Kay Kern, 31, of 28 Poplar Avenue, was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital with a concussion. Her passenger, Patricia M. Swanson, 38, of the same address, was treated for bruises and minor injuries.

California Highway Patrol officers said Miss Kern had been reported at 3 a.m. driving her car in an erratic manner and at a high rate of speed for several miles northbound on Highway 101.

Sgt. Richard Nutting said he observed Miss Kern's car weaving in and out of traffic. As it topped the Alto hill, he said, the car skidded broadside on the shoulder, veered across four lanes of traffic, hit the divider, and bounced back across three lanes of traffic before stopping in the outside lane.

The Arabic language is spoken by more than 50 million persons.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

How Far Can A Bank Go?

When you open an account, you expect the bank to keep your financial affairs confidential. A bank has a legal duty to keep your affairs private. If it breaches this duty, the depositor can hold the bank legally responsible.

Yet because of our credit economy, the bank is often requested to give financial information to government agents or parties in a lawsuit. How far can the bank safely go?

As a depositor you can consent to the disclosure of information — perhaps when you apply for a loan. Then the bank has no liability to you. The bank may still refuse to give out the information, but, as a rule, the bank will disclose if it has your consent.

Sometimes a court will allow someone to look at your finances if you are in a lawsuit or have information which a court needs. If so, the court will issue a subpoena for the information, and the bank, as a rule, must turn it over. Because the customer may not want to disclose the information, the bank should inform the depositor about the subpoena before giving out the information.

A depositor may then challenge the subpoena in court as a "fishing expedition" or a violation of his freedom from "illegal search and seizure."

The fact that a person changes banks does not destroy the bank's duties to its former customers.

If the bank gives out wrong information, it may be liable if it harms the depositor's credit.

A bank may make business rules for supplying information. It may require forms for consent to disclose, for example, or require payment for gathering information which is costly to compile. (Note: California lawyers offer this column so you may know about our laws.)

Loan Sought For Novato Library

Marin supervisors voted yesterday to borrow $175,000 from the county retirement fund to cover a deficit in financing the new county library building in Novato. (See also supervisors story, page 1.)

The county had failed to obtain a $175,000 federal grant to build the new structure on Novato Boulevard, west of Tamalpais Avenue.

Interest on a retirement fund loan, at 7.75 per cent, would total $6,782 and be borne by the county.

In other library matters during county budget deliberations yesterday, the supervisors voted 3-2 to reject a last-ditch plea by Mill Valley for a $40,000 county grant for its public library because it serves so many residents living in the unincorporated area.

Chairman John F. McInnis, Louis H. Baar and Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. said the request would bring similar pleas from other cities. If Mill Valley wants county aid, it should join the county library system, they said.

Anticipating the refusal, Mill Valley voted to assess each nonresident user of the library the sum of $14 for an annual family membership card, effective July 1.

The supervisors also adopted the budget of County Librarian Bruce Bajema totaling $616,500, up from $507,428, and including three new staff members.

Probation Set In Dominican Horse Complaint

A Marin Municipal Court judge yesterday gave former Marin County planning commissioner Edward K. Wachsman two weeks go remove a horse and pony he keeps at his home in the Dominican section of San Rafael.

Judgge Peter Allen Smith, who earlier had found Wachsman guilty of keeping the animals without a permit, a misdemeanor offense, placed Wachsman on one-year probation, making the removal of the horses a condition of probation. He also ordered Wachsman to pay a $50 fine.

Judge Smith said that if the animals were not gone within two weeks, he would reconsider the sentence.

Wachsman's horses have been the subject of complaints from his neighbors on Palm Avenue since last December, when some of the residents appeared before the city council to say that Wachsman was not complying with an order to clean the horse area daily.

Stereo Stolen

Edwin Louis Strom of 925 Las Ovejas Avenue, Terra Linda, told San Rafael police someone stole a stereo, valued at $100, from his locked car parked at the Northgate Shopping Center between 1:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Thursday.

Motorcycle Found

A motorcycle reported stolen in Moscow, Ida., March 30, was recovered Thursday in Camp Taylor near Sir Francis Drake Boulevard by Neil Kondratieff of Lagunitas, Marin County sheriff's deputies reported.

the National Security Council endorsing his position opposing any coalition government in Saigon.

Nixon's eight-point peace plan does not call for a coalition. But Thieu and his advisers believe the seeds for a coalition may lie in Nixon's suggestion for early elections.

Nixon and his advisers arrive at midmorning tomorrow after an overnight stop in Honolulu, and Thieu and his party will land shortly thereafter.

The first business is an informal get-together for an hour and a half at the home of Capt. A.S. Yesensky, commander of the Midway base.

Then Nixon and Thieu will go to the commissioned officers' club two blocks away for lunch, followed by the main business meeting in an adjacent room around a large oak conference table.

There they will go over Nixon's peace plan, which was presented at the Paris peace talks. There have been indications the South Vietnamese government is wary of parts of the Nixon plan.

For example, Nixon wants elections to be held as soon as possible after a cease-fire and troop withdrawals.

Under South Vietnam's constitution, national elections cannot be held before 1971. Thieu probably would like at least this much time to complete his task of broadening his political support.

In their resolutions, the South Vietnamese Senate, National Assembly and National Security Council took the position that elections can only be held under terms of the constitution.

Credit Interest Bill Is Amended

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Proponents of a 33-per cent boost in the price of retail credit have blocked down and settled for a 2 per cent increase.

With pressure mounting from consumer groups and the state attorney genreal, Assemblyman Walter W. Powers, D-Sacramento, quietly amended the 33-per cent boost out of his bill on the Assembly floor yesterday.

The Powers bill originally would have raised the maximum interest rate on retail sales contracts from 18 per cent to 24 per cent — a 33 per cent hike — and made corresponding increases on smaller contracts.

But Powers said the amended bill, in its present amended form, would only make one change in the Unruh Retail Installment Credit Act — raise the interest rate on contracts under $1,000 from 10 per cent to 12 per cent.

Tax Hike Sought For Fairfax Rec

A 1969-70 budget calling for a 7-cent hike in the tax rate was approved last night and forwarded to the city council by the Fairfax Park and Recreation Commission.

The commission is asking for $36,000 for the coming fiscal year, which if adopted would raise the park and recreation tax rate from nine to 16 cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

OBITUARIES

James S. Mathewson Dies At 86

James S. Mathewson of San Rafael, a retired mining engineer, died yesterday at the age of 86 at Ross General Hospital, where he had been under care for one month.

Mathewson, a 12-year resident of San Rafael, was a native of Scotland. He lived in Canada and San Francisco before moving to Marin.

He is survived by his wife, Jane; two daughters, Mrs. John Gorevan of San Anselmo and Mrs. Harriet Moore; a brother, Thomas Mathewson, and a sister, Mrs. Kate Wickham.

Private funeral will be held Monday at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael, with burial to follow at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

funds, Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni dissenting, Dr. Adebonojo, who has been EOC chairman since April, said he may resign from the council.

"What they have done is thumbed their noses at the poor," said Dr. Adebonojo, bitter and distraught. "By their action, they have said that they would rather put down riots than spend money on preventive measures.

"If they refuse to react to people like me," said Dr. Adebonojo, a pedicatrician for the Permanente Group, "they'll have to react to the Black Panthers. I feel I'm wasting my time if I cannot get $15,000 from county government."

Dr. Adebonojo told the Independent-Journal that the $15,000 could have brought in as much as $200,000 in foundation or federal funds and in-kind contributions for the pediatrics and training programs.

The $15,000 would have been added to a $26,000 appropriation for EOC operations approved by the supervisors in March. The supervisors also deferred an EOC request for a total county contribution of $41,000 for the 1970-71 year.

Other budgets approved yesterday were: board of supervisors, $148,955, compared to $149,602 this year; assessment appeals board, $19,449 ($17,671); personnel department, $95,151 ($88,484); county counsel, $164,000 ($133,783); data processing, $606,292 ($528,000); Neighborhood Youth Corps, $189,300 ($155,431); human rights, $51,403 ($42,588), and county pound, $242,324 ($209,889), rejecting a proposal to increase dog control.

Youth Charged With Joyriding

A 19-year-old San Rafael youth was arrested early today by California Highway Patrol officers for investigation of auto theft after officers found him driving a car he allegedly had stolen for a joyride.

Ralph Dwayne Sisler of 355 Canal Street was held in Marin County Jail on $1,200 bail.

Sisler was stopped at 2:20 a.m. while he was driving south on Highway 101 near California Park becauwe the tailights of the 1963 Pontiac were not working, officers said. A routine check revealed the car had been taken earlier in the evening from Marin Auto Wholesale, 296 Jacoby Street, San Rafael, officers said.

Oil Men Freed

LIBREVILLE, Gabon (AP) — Eighteen foreign oil workers who were sentenced to death by Biafra, then pardoned, were released and arrived in Libreville today. They were taken to a French military hospital for checkups.

Meanwhile the flag-draped caskets of 10 Italian oil workers reportedly killed by Biafran forces in the same incident arrived in Milan. Their funerals will be held tomorrow.

MRS. QUARTINA ROSELLINI

Requiem Mass will be held at 10:30 a.m. Monday at SS Peter and Paul Church in San Francisco for Mrs. Quartina Rosellini, 68, mother of Mrs. Norma E. Vanucci of Novato and Mrs. Flora D. Carroll of San Rafael. Burial will be in Holy Cross Mausoleum, Colma.

Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Valenta, Marini Perata and Co., 649 Green Street, San Francisco.

Mrs. Rosellini died Thursday in San Rafael after a brief illness.

Born in Italy, she came to California with her family as a young girl. Her husband, Lorenzo, who died four years ago, at one time operated a supermarket.

Besides her two daughters, Mrs. Rosellini is survied by five sisters, Viola Piccetti, Jennie Melosi and Frieda Rosellini, all of San Francisco, and Nellie Biondi and Lena Marchetti, of Italy, and five grandchildren.

Memorials may be made in the form of contributions to the Heart Fund, the family said.

HARLEY HOOPER

Services will be held at 3 p.m. Tuesday at the Harry M. Williams Mortuary in San Rafael for Harley L. Hooper, who died last Wednesday in a local hospital after a short illness.

Hooper, who lived at 27 Myrtle Avenue, Mill Valley, was a claim examiner for the California State Compensation Insurance Fund until his recent retirement. He was born in Palmyra, Wis.

Hooper was a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley and a member of the California State Employees Association, the Retired State Government Employees Association and the North Bay Branch of Sons in Retirement. He was also a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

He is survived by his wife, Eva; a sister, Mrs. Carol Hooper, Buxbom of Riverside, and two brothers, Thomas J. and Wesley Hooper, both of Los Angeles.

Entombment will be in the Mount Tamalpais Cemetery, San Rafael.

Apollo Crew Explains Missing Landing Site

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Apollo 10 astronauts reported today the moon landing site they inspected is "rugged" but the Apollo 11 crew should have no problem touching down there.

They told a news conference they actually missed the site by four miles to the south as they flew to within 9.4 miles of the surface because of irregularities in the lunar gravitational field.

"Because of our flight," Air Force Col. Thomas P. Stafford reported, "we now know about these perturbations. Our flight taught us much that has given us confidence. We see no reason why we can't put Apollo 11 right on the landing site."

Stafford and Navy Cmdrs. John W. Young and Eugene A. Cernan completed an extensive 10-day debriefing on their moon orbit flight yesterday, discussing all aspects with experts.

What they reported will help determine if Apollo 11 will attempt the lunar landing in July or whether the flight will be delayed until August to give the crew—Neil A. Armstrong, Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. and Michael Collins—more time to prepare.

The decision will be made Thursday.

Stafford, the Apollo 10 commander, said that when he and Cernan separated the lunar module, or LEM from the command ship, "it was readily apparent we were dropping down."

Young remained in the command vehicle circling the moon at an altitude of 69 miles.

"We actually ended up four miles south of the landing site," Stafford said, "so I had to shoot our pictures off to the right."

He said that irregularities in the gravity field, plus the fact the moon is not perfectly round, had put them off target.

Court-Martial Studies Sentences For Mutiny

FORT ORD (AP) — An Army court martial deliberated today the penalty for 12 soldiers convicted yesterday of mutiny in a singing sitdown protest at the San Francisco Presidio stockade last October.

Two other enlisted men were convicted on lesser charges of disobedience.

Lt. Col. James A. Hagan, presiding as judge, told a five-man trial panel to consider that no violence or injury resulted in protest, which involved 27 stockade prisoners last Oct. 14.

The panel requested that lunch be served in their jury room so deliberation could continue without a meal break.

The 14 were among 27 charged with mutiny last Oct. 14 as they staged the sitdown to protest what they called unsanitary conditions at the stockade. The sitdown came two days after a prisoner had been fatally shot by a guard during an alleged escape attempt.

Eight of the others charged have been convicted of mutiny, two have been hospitalized for observation and three have escaped and are at large.

After the convictions the panel reconvened and heard 3½ hours of argument by attorneys for the defense and prosecution in what is known as the "extenuation and mitigation" phase of the trial that determines the penalty.

Chief defense attorney Terence Hallinan argued that "none of these men are criminals—they are sick children, and were no threat to the United States Army last Oct. 14."

Hallinan said, "These young men have been convicted of only one thing—being mistreated all their lives."

Bay's Pesticide Pollution Laid To Multiple Sources

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Industries and municipalities must share the blame for depositing "hard pesticides" into the state's waters, says the San Francisco Bay-Delta Water Quality Program report being reviewed by the State Water Resources Control Board.

About half the pesticide that is washed into the Delta and the bay comes from agricultural sources and about half from municipal and industrial waste discharge, the report says.

"Of all the pollutants that are discharged into water, the chlorinated hydrocarbon (or hard) pesticides are the most insidious in terms of biological effects," the study found. "Small amounts of these nondegradable pesticides, such as DDT, are known to kill some animals outright and some species of birds and fish may be prevented from effective reproduction even though adults are not killed."

Agricultural sources have been under increasing pressure recently to give up the use of the "hard pesticides" because of their effects.

The state has control over agricultural use of pesticides but there is no regulation of industrial sources, said a statement from the water control board today.

The Bay-Delta report proposes that the use of DDT be banned.

The board is expected to complete its review of the Bay-Delta study late in June and make its recommendations to the legislature.

The study proposes ways of preserving the quality of the water in the 12-county Bay-Delta region.

Service Station Dope Sale Denied

Frank Joseph Bonomolo, 22, of Petaluma, who with his younger brother is charged with selling drugs at their father's Novato service station, yesterday entered a plea of innocent to selling LSD to a drug agent.

Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. set a preliminary hearing for June 30.

The case of George Tipton Bonomolo, 19, accused of selling marijuana, has been referred to the probation department for possible transferral to juvenile court.

The two juveniles were cited and released to their parents.

Market Burglars Steal Trade Stamps

Burglars took food, cigarettes, liquor and blue chip stamps, valued at more than $400, from the Cala Market on Adrian Way in Santa Venetia between 9 p.m. Wednesday and 7 a.m. Thursday, Marin County sheriff's deputies reported today.

Among the items stolen were 30 record albums, 43 cartons of cigarettes, 18 sixpacks of beer, two gallons of wine, six fifths and one quart of whisky, six salamis and three blue chip dispensers containing an unknown amount of blue chip stamps.

BOATS

Tours and other firms face an additional strike by operators of inland bay tug boats unless agreement is reached on a new contract for about 75 men by June 15. Their contract expired June 1 and was extended 15 days.

The additional workers also are represented by the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association.

"I don't look for too much beginning until this thing jells into a pattern," said Bedient.

Union spokesmen could not be reached for comment.

Bedient said disputes in the past between marine engineers and ship and tugboat operators had always been settled in one package. He said the current strike against Bay Tours was the first splinter action by the marine engineers in years of negotiations.

Reds Bloodily Beaten Back

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese troops were mangled today in a furious assault on a small U.S. fire base in the sort of attacks that by allied accounts have left 1,000 enemy dead in two days.

Best estimates are that 60 Americans have been killed and more than 200 wounded in the two days. South Vietnamese casualties were put at 107 killed and 379 wounded.

Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, told reporters before leaving for the Midway Island conference of President Nixon and President Nguyen Van Thieu that he did not think the sharp rise in enemy attacks was a summer offensive.

"I don't think they are doing anything different," he said. "They're just trying to harass and inflict casualties. I think the real purpose is psychological in terms of the people in the United States."

Other officers have suggested the increase in the intensity of enemy attacks is intended to put pressures on Nixon and Thieu at their conference.

Of the estimated enemy casualties, about 400 of them have been killed in two days of trying to overrun Fire Base Crook, a tiny U.S. 25th Infantry Division outpost four miles from Cambodia and 65 miles northwest of Saigon.

The attacks on the base have been by far the largest in last week's series of enemy offensive operations in South Vietnam.

remarked Mark Mendonsa.

By 3:30 p.m. the flag had been raised to full height again and an hour later it had disappeared.

As is customary, college employees had removed the flag for the weekend.

Crash Injures Ross Women

Two Ross women were injured early today when their car crashed into the center divider on Highway 101 near the Corte Madera offramp.

Driver Marnee Kay Kern, 31, of 28 Poplar Avenue, was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital with a concussion. Her passenger, Patricia M. Swanson, 38, of the same address, was treated for bruises and minor injuries.

California Highway Patrol officers said Miss Kern had been reported at 3 a.m. driving her car in an erratic manner and at a high rate of speed for several miles northbound on Highway 101.

Sgt. Richard Nutting said he observed Miss Kern's car weaving in and out of traffic. As it topped the Alto hill, he said, the car skidded broadside on the shoulder, veered across four lanes of traffic, hit the divider, and bounced back across three lanes of traffic before stopping in the outside lane.

The Arabic language is spoken by more than 50 million persons.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

How Far Can A Bank Go?

When you open an account, you expect the bank to keep your financial affairs confidential. A bank has a legal duty to keep your affairs private. If it breaches this duty, the depositor can hold the bank legally responsible.

Yet because of our credit economy, the bank is often requested to give financial information to government agents or parties in a lawsuit. How far can the bank safely go?

As a depositor you can consent to the disclosure of information — perhaps when you apply for a loan. Then the bank has no liability to you. The bank may still refuse to give out the information, but, as a rule, the bank will disclose if it has your consent.

Sometimes a court will allow someone to look at your finances if you are in a lawsuit or have information which a court needs. If so, the court will issue a subpoena for the information, and the bank, as a rule, must turn it over. Because the customer may not want to disclose the information, the bank should inform the depositor about the subpoena before giving out the information.

A depositor may then challenge the subpoena in court as a "fishing expedition" or a violation of his freedom from "illegal search and seizure."

The fact that a person changes banks does not destroy the bank's duties to its former customers.

If the bank gives out wrong information, it may be liable if it harms the depositor's credit.

A bank may make business rules for supplying information. It may require forms for consent to disclose, for example, or require payment for gathering information which is costly to compile. (Note: California lawyers offer this column so you may know about our laws.)

Loan Sought For Novato Library

Marin supervisors voted yesterday to borrow $175,000 from the county retirement fund to cover a deficit in financing the new county library building in Novato. (See also supervisors story, page 1.)

The county had failed to obtain a $175,000 federal grant to build the new structure on Novato Boulevard, west of Tamalpais Avenue.

Interest on a retirement fund loan, at 7.75 per cent, would total $6,782 and be borne by the county.

In other library matters during county budget deliberations yesterday, the supervisors voted 3-2 to reject a last-ditch plea by Mill Valley for a $40,000 county grant for its public library because it serves so many residents living in the unincorporated area.

Chairman John F. McInnis, Louis H. Baar and Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. said the request would bring similar pleas from other cities. If Mill Valley wants county aid, it should join the county library system, they said.

Anticipating the refusal, Mill Valley voted to assess each nonresident user of the library the sum of $14 for an annual family membership card, effective July 1.

The supervisors also adopted the budget of County Librarian Bruce Bajema totaling $616,500, up from $507,428, and including three new staff members.

Probation Set In Dominican Horse Complaint

A Marin Municipal Court judge yesterday gave former Marin County planning commissioner Edward K. Wachsman two weeks go remove a horse and pony he keeps at his home in the Dominican section of San Rafael.

Judgge Peter Allen Smith, who earlier had found Wachsman guilty of keeping the animals without a permit, a misdemeanor offense, placed Wachsman on one-year probation, making the removal of the horses a condition of probation. He also ordered Wachsman to pay a $50 fine.

Judge Smith said that if the animals were not gone within two weeks, he would reconsider the sentence.

Wachsman's horses have been the subject of complaints from his neighbors on Palm Avenue since last December, when some of the residents appeared before the city council to say that Wachsman was not complying with an order to clean the horse area daily.

Stereo Stolen

Edwin Louis Strom of 925 Las Ovejas Avenue, Terra Linda, told San Rafael police someone stole a stereo, valued at $100, from his locked car parked at the Northgate Shopping Center between 1:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Thursday.

Motorcycle Found

A motorcycle reported stolen in Moscow, Ida., March 30, was recovered Thursday in Camp Taylor near Sir Francis Drake Boulevard by Neil Kondratieff of Lagunitas, Marin County sheriff's deputies reported.

Meeting Canceled

The Inverness Improvement Association has rescheduled this month's meeting to June 27 at 8 p.m. at Vladimir's Monrovian Restaurant, Inverness. Last night's meeting was cancelled for lack of agenda items.

Careless Drivers

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI)— According to the Kentucky Department of Public Safety, one of every 49 drivers lost his license in 1968. Biggest single reason was failure to comply with the financial-responsibility law after an accident.

NIXON

the National Security Council endorsing his position opposing any coalition government in Saigon.

Nixon's eight-point peace plan does not call for a coalition. But Thieu and his advisers believe the seeds for a coalition may lie in Nixon's suggestion for early elections.

Nixon and his advisers arrive at midmorning tomorrow after an overnight stop in Honolulu, and Thieu and his party will land shortly thereafter.

The first business is an informal get-together for an hour and a half at the home of Capt. A.S. Yesensky, commander of the Midway base.

Then Nixon and Thieu will go to the commissioned officers' club two blocks away for lunch, followed by the main business meeting in an adjacent room around a large oak conference table.

There they will go over Nixon's peace plan, which was presented at the Paris peace talks. There have been indications the South Vietnamese government is wary of parts of the Nixon plan.

For example, Nixon wants elections to be held as soon as possible after a cease-fire and troop withdrawals.

Under South Vietnam's constitution, national elections cannot be held before 1971. Thieu probably would like at least this much time to complete his task of broadening his political support.

In their resolutions, the South Vietnamese Senate, National Assembly and National Security Council took the position that elections can only be held under terms of the constitution.

Credit Interest Bill Is Amended

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Proponents of a 33-per cent boost in the price of retail credit have blocked down and settled for a 2 per cent increase.

With pressure mounting from consumer groups and the state attorney genreal, Assemblyman Walter W. Powers, D-Sacramento, quietly amended the 33-per cent boost out of his bill on the Assembly floor yesterday.

The Powers bill originally would have raised the maximum interest rate on retail sales contracts from 18 per cent to 24 per cent — a 33 per cent hike — and made corresponding increases on smaller contracts.

But Powers said the amended bill, in its present amended form, would only make one change in the Unruh Retail Installment Credit Act — raise the interest rate on contracts under $1,000 from 10 per cent to 12 per cent.

Tax Hike Sought For Fairfax Rec

A 1969-70 budget calling for a 7-cent hike in the tax rate was approved last night and forwarded to the city council by the Fairfax Park and Recreation Commission.

The commission is asking for $36,000 for the coming fiscal year, which if adopted would raise the park and recreation tax rate from nine to 16 cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

OBITUARIES

James S. Mathewson Dies At 86

James S. Mathewson of San Rafael, a retired mining engineer, died yesterday at the age of 86 at Ross General Hospital, where he had been under care for one month.

Mathewson, a 12-year resident of San Rafael, was a native of Scotland. He lived in Canada and San Francisco before moving to Marin.

He is survived by his wife, Jane; two daughters, Mrs. John Gorevan of San Anselmo and Mrs. Harriet Moore; a brother, Thomas Mathewson, and a sister, Mrs. Kate Wickham.

Private funeral will be held Monday at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael, with burial to follow at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

funds, Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni dissenting, Dr. Adebonojo, who has been EOC chairman since April, said he may resign from the council.

"What they have done is thumbed their noses at the poor," said Dr. Adebonojo, bitter and distraught. "By their action, they have said that they would rather put down riots than spend money on preventive measures.

"If they refuse to react to people like me," said Dr. Adebonojo, a pedicatrician for the Permanente Group, "they'll have to react to the Black Panthers. I feel I'm wasting my time if I cannot get $15,000 from county government."

Dr. Adebonojo told the Independent-Journal that the $15,000 could have brought in as much as $200,000 in foundation or federal funds and in-kind contributions for the pediatrics and training programs.

The $15,000 would have been added to a $26,000 appropriation for EOC operations approved by the supervisors in March. The supervisors also deferred an EOC request for a total county contribution of $41,000 for the 1970-71 year.

Other budgets approved yesterday were: board of supervisors, $148,955, compared to $149,602 this year; assessment appeals board, $19,449 ($17,671); personnel department, $95,151 ($88,484); county counsel, $164,000 ($133,783); data processing, $606,292 ($528,000); Neighborhood Youth Corps, $189,300 ($155,431); human rights, $51,403 ($42,588), and county pound, $242,324 ($209,889), rejecting a proposal to increase dog control.

Youth Charged With Joyriding

A 19-year-old San Rafael youth was arrested early today by California Highway Patrol officers for investigation of auto theft after officers found him driving a car he allegedly had stolen for a joyride.

Ralph Dwayne Sisler of 355 Canal Street was held in Marin County Jail on $1,200 bail.

Sisler was stopped at 2:20 a.m. while he was driving south on Highway 101 near California Park becauwe the tailights of the 1963 Pontiac were not working, officers said. A routine check revealed the car had been taken earlier in the evening from Marin Auto Wholesale, 296 Jacoby Street, San Rafael, officers said.

Oil Men Freed

LIBREVILLE, Gabon (AP) — Eighteen foreign oil workers who were sentenced to death by Biafra, then pardoned, were released and arrived in Libreville today. They were taken to a French military hospital for checkups.

Meanwhile the flag-draped caskets of 10 Italian oil workers reportedly killed by Biafran forces in the same incident arrived in Milan. Their funerals will be held tomorrow.

MRS. QUARTINA ROSELLINI

Requiem Mass will be held at 10:30 a.m. Monday at SS Peter and Paul Church in San Francisco for Mrs. Quartina Rosellini, 68, mother of Mrs. Norma E. Vanucci of Novato and Mrs. Flora D. Carroll of San Rafael. Burial will be in Holy Cross Mausoleum, Colma.

Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Valenta, Marini Perata and Co., 649 Green Street, San Francisco.

Mrs. Rosellini died Thursday in San Rafael after a brief illness.

Born in Italy, she came to California with her family as a young girl. Her husband, Lorenzo, who died four years ago, at one time operated a supermarket.

Besides her two daughters, Mrs. Rosellini is survied by five sisters, Viola Piccetti, Jennie Melosi and Frieda Rosellini, all of San Francisco, and Nellie Biondi and Lena Marchetti, of Italy, and five grandchildren.

Memorials may be made in the form of contributions to the Heart Fund, the family said.

HARLEY HOOPER

Services will be held at 3 p.m. Tuesday at the Harry M. Williams Mortuary in San Rafael for Harley L. Hooper, who died last Wednesday in a local hospital after a short illness.

Hooper, who lived at 27 Myrtle Avenue, Mill Valley, was a claim examiner for the California State Compensation Insurance Fund until his recent retirement. He was born in Palmyra, Wis.

Hooper was a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley and a member of the California State Employees Association, the Retired State Government Employees Association and the North Bay Branch of Sons in Retirement. He was also a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

He is survived by his wife, Eva; a sister, Mrs. Carol Hooper, Buxbom of Riverside, and two brothers, Thomas J. and Wesley Hooper, both of Los Angeles.

Entombment will be in the Mount Tamalpais Cemetery, San Rafael.

VIRGINIA WILSON

Requiem Mass for Virginia L. Wilson, president-elect of the American Legion Women's Auxiliary Post 284 in Mill Valley, will be held at 9:30 a.m. Monday at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church in Mill Valley. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery, San Rafael. Rosary will be at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Russell and Gooch Mortuary.

Mrs. Wilson, who lived with her husband, David R. Wilson, at 42 Loring Avenue, Mill Valled, died at her home Thursday after a short illness.

In addition to her recent election to the auxiliary post, Mrs. Wilson was a member of the Native Daughters of the Golden West, Tamalpa Parlor 231 of Mill Valley.

A native of California, she had lived in Marin County for 20 years. Her husband is a civilian employee at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Mrs. Wilson is also survived by her mother, Mrs. Edna Brandecker of Mill Valley.

Governmentese Quiz Continues To Bring Additions For Column

DEAR HELEN:

Here are a few additions to your governmentese quiz:

1. A copper disc which is retained has the equivalent value of such a disc acquired through renumerative labor.

2. The continuous progression of the days and seasons, coupled with the regular phenomenon caused by lunar and solar attraction, refuse to be detained by homo sapiens.

3. It is advised that one refrain from circumventing the shrubbery.

4. Proximity of a personal nature propagates a condition of being despised.

5. Lack of physical presence makes a bodily organ more amenable to pleasant palpitation. — LAWRIE AND JANE

(Answers at end of column)

DEAR READERS:

I'm still being beseiged with requests for answers to the governmentese quizzes printed earlier this year. For your copy of the word tests — and the answers — please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Helen Bottel, care of the Independent-Journal.

DEAR HELEN:

So you and your readers like quizzes and tests. Well, I'm sending a couple that have been around a long time, but I'll bet they'll still be new to a lot of people.

This one is called. Can You Follow Directions? Do exactly as you are told:

1. Read everything before doing anything.

2. Put your name in the upper right hand corner of a paper.

3. Circle the word "name" in sentence 2.

4. Draw four small squares in the upper left hand corner of the page.

5. Put an "X" in each square.

6. Sign your name under the title of the page.

7. After the title, write: "yes, yes!"

8. Put a circle around sentence 7.

9. Count from one to five in a loud voice.

10. Now that you have finished reading carefully, do only sentence 1 and 2.

(Now, don't you feel silly, if you fell for it?)

Here's another test:

Are you aware of these few things, without checking?

1. What hand do you put into your coat first?

2. What is the last thing you heard on radio or television last night?

3. Did you leave your closet door open or shut?

4. Did you wake up lying on the same side as when you fell asleep?

5: How many buttons do you button on your coat?

6. Which leg to you put first in a pair of pants?

7. Which shoe do you put on first?

8. With which foot do you start up a flight of stairs?

9. How many times do you touch your face while thinking or talking?

(Keep count and you'll be surprised!)

10. Which knee do you cross when you sit down — if you cross your knee? — DEBBIE AND DORIS

KEY TO GOVERNMENTESE QUIZ ABOVE:

1. A penny saved is a penny earned.

2. Time and tide wait for no man.

3. Don't beat around the bush.

4. Familiarity breeds contempt.

5. Absence makes the heart grow fonder.

MRS. E. EDWIN KELLEY

Kelleys Head School Club

A native of Sweden, Mrs. E. Edwin Kelley, has been elected president of the Lucas Valley School Club for the year. Her husband is co-president of the club.

Gerd Kelley and her husband have lived in Marin almost two years. They are parents of four children, Eric, 17, Tana, 15, Mark, 10 and Tomi, 8. She has previously served as vice president of the school club and is active in the human relations council of the Dixie School District.

She was educated in Swedish schools and attended the University of Stockholm for two years. The Kelleys are currently on a trip to Sweden.

Gerd Kelley lists her interests as cooking and collecting old cookbooks, reading and assisting her husband with his orchid growing hobby.

Other officers of the school club are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Phillips, co-vice presidents; Mrs. Doris Overmeyer, treasurer; Mrs. Joanne Bossio, recording secretary and Mrs. Jackie Kroehler, corresponding secretary.

THE SUBURBAN SCENE

Mill Valley Couple Return From Europe

By MOLLY MARIN

The Richard Evanses are home in Mill Valley after a month's tour of Europe. After stopping in Florida to visit a relative and in New York City they flew to Spain and went on to Italy, France and England.

Highlight of the trip was visiting their daughter Laura, who is just completing the equivalent of a master's degree in languages and French culture at the University of Lille. She is to be married some time this summer to Andre Sirot, who will be a teacher of philosophy at a junior college in Lille.

An especially interesting experience for Mr. Evans, who has been in the insurance business for many years, was a tour of Lloyd's of London.

The Evanses say they left their hearts in Spain because of the wonderfully warm, friendly people and their pride in their country and cities. They hope to return there some day.

MRS. CHALMER Sargent of Sayre, Ala., has returned to her home following a visit with her sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Fedrick in Novato.

Mrs. Sargent also visited her brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Yates in Novato. The families planned several trips for her including one to Lake Tahoe and another to the family ranch at Marysville.

THE ROBERT Goetzes of Belvedere were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hoge of Oakland last weekend at Pajaro Dunes, where the Hoges are building a beach house.

MEREDITH LINMAN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl A. Linman of Tiburon, was awarded the Bronze Key on recommendation of the special events committee at Chico State College.

Meredith was homecoming publicity chairman, co-chairman of presents for Chico's Pioneer Week celebration and was chosen this spring to be a member of Cardinal Key, Chico's honorary leadership and scholarship sorority.

She will be graduated this semester with a B.A. in social science.

PARENTS HONORED Reed principal Jack Usilton at a luncheon yesterday at the home of Mrs. James Atkin in Belvedere. Mr. Usilton is leaving Marin for Florida after 11 years as school principal. Also honored at the luncheon was Mrs. Alfred Matson.

Bikinis And Bra Dresses Simple To Make With Aids

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE:

A group of us who are young-marrieds want to make the cotton bikinis as well as the new bra dress. How can we give these cottons the neat shape found in the ready-to-wear ones?

JUDY S.

DEAR JUDY:

With the price of bikinis and the amount of fabric that is used, you are thinking in the right direction when you plan to make your own. It seems impossible to justify a price of $15 or more for a garment that only requires a yard of fabric (with almost a half yard left over).

Fortunately, there is a new product on the market, that is available in most fabric shops as well as notion counters, to give the bra dresses as well as swim suits the shape that is needed. It is a lightweight, washable bra-shape that can be inserted permanently in your garment.

It may be necessary to change your darts slightly, but you will have a perfect guide; just make your garment fit smoothly over the shaped bra insert. Thanks to the companies who produce notions for the home sewers, we are gradually finding the same helpful aids that are used by the manufacturers.

DEAR EUNICE:

I have a 12-year-old daughter who has been making doll clothes for years and loves puttering around with my leftover scraps of material and trims. Now she wants to sew for herself but, when I take her shopping for material, the things I think she should use, she doesn't want, and I don't like the things she picks out. We have reached the point of no return and consequently, she doesn't want to make anything.

Perhaps you can give us mothers of young teens some ideas on the kinds of materials they should use for their first sewing projects.

MRS. M. K.

DEAR MRS. M. K.:

First, it would be very unlikely that two completely different age groups would like the same thing and you are trying to force your own ideas on your daughter. I would let her shop with her friends, tell her what she can spend and let her make her own decisions. Naturally, she is going to make some mistakes in selection (but unfortunately, Moms, this happens to you too once in awhile).

The first step for any beginner is to begin sewing with a fabric that they dearly love. This compensates for the ripping and other discouraging things that are bound to happen. Also, be tolerant of their sewing. Perfection comes with practice and it's better to get a garment completed that "sorta passes inspection" that can be worn with a smile on a face than to have one that is perfect and worn with bitter tears.

DEAR EUNICE:

I had the good fortune to find a fabulous fabric shop in the East that featured only imported fabrics. The only kind of underlining they carried for silks was a very fine batiste. Why can't I find it in my local fabric shop?

MRS. R. R.

DEAR MRS. R. R.:

At one time, this was the greatest underlining in the world, because silk is a notorious hot fabric to wear in the summer. It has a tendency to cling to you and doesn't breathe like cotton. For this reason, a sheer cotton batiste would absorb the moisture and make the silk more comfortable to wear.

Thanks to our marvelous new lightweight underlinings that are a combination of cotton and Dacron polyester, batiste is no longer considered as suitable for this purpose. The only disadvantage to batiste is that it must be preshrunk before using and today it seems no one wants to wash a garment, all you have to do with the new underlinings is to wet them and let them dry without having to press them before using.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Governmentese Quiz Continues To Bring Additions For Column

DEAR HELEN:

Here are a few additions to your governmentese quiz:

1. A copper disc which is retained has the equivalent value of such a disc acquired through renumerative labor.

2. The continuous progression of the days and seasons, coupled with the regular phenomenon caused by lunar and solar attraction, refuse to be detained by homo sapiens.

3. It is advised that one refrain from circumventing the shrubbery.

4. Proximity of a personal nature propagates a condition of being despised.

5. Lack of physical presence makes a bodily organ more amenable to pleasant palpitation. — LAWRIE AND JANE

(Answers at end of column)

DEAR READERS:

I'm still being beseiged with requests for answers to the governmentese quizzes printed earlier this year. For your copy of the word tests — and the answers — please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Helen Bottel, care of the Independent-Journal.

DEAR HELEN:

So you and your readers like quizzes and tests. Well, I'm sending a couple that have been around a long time, but I'll bet they'll still be new to a lot of people.

This one is called, Can You Follow Directions? Do exactly as you are told:

1. Read everything before doing anything.

2. Put your name in the upper right hand corner of a paper.

3. Circle the word "name" in sentence 2.

4. Draw four small squares in the upper left hand corner of the page.

5. Put an "X" in each square.

6. Sign your name under the title of the page.

7. After the title, write: "yes, yes!"

8. Put a circle around sentence 7.

9. Count from one to five in a loud voice.

10. Now that you have finished reading carefully, do only sentence 1 and 2.

(Now, don't you feel silly, if you fell for it?)

Here's another test:

Are you aware of these few things, without checking?

1. What hand do you put into your coat first?

2. What is the last thing you heard on radio or television last night?

3. Did you leave your closet door open or shut?

4. Did you wake up lying on the same side as when you fell asleep?

5: How many buttons do you button on your coat?

6. Which leg to you put first in a pair of pants?

7. Which shoe do you put on first?

8. With which foot do you start up a flight of stairs?

9. How many times do you touch your face while thinking or talking?

(Keep count and you'll be surprised!)

10. Which knee do you cross when you sit down — if you cross your knee? — DEBBIE AND DORIS

KEY TO GOVERNMENTESE QUIZ ABOVE:

1. A penny saved is a penny earned.

2. Time and tide wait for no man.

3. Don't beat around the bush.

4. Familiarity breeds contempt.

5. Absence makes the heart grow fonder.

MRS. E. EDWIN KELLEY

Kelleys Head School Club

A native of Sweden, Mrs. E. Edwin Kelley, has been elected president of the Lucas Valley School Club for the year. Her husband is co-president of the club.

Gerd Kelley and her husband have lived in Marin almost two years. They are parents of four children, Eric, 17, Tana, 15, Mark, 10 and Tomi, 8. She has previously served as vice president of the school club and is active in the human relations council of the Dixie School District.

She was educated in Swedish schools and attended the University of Stockholm for two years. The Kelleys are currently on a trip to Sweden.

Gerd Kelley lists her interests as cooking and collecting old cookbooks, reading and assisting her husband with his orchid growing hobby.

Other officers of the school club are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Phillips, co-vice presidents; Mrs. Doris Overmeyer, treasurer; Mrs. Joanne Bossio, recording secretary and Mrs. Jackie Kroehler, corresponding secretary.

Mill Valley Couple Return From Europe

By MOLLY MARIN

The Richard Evanses are home in Mill Valley after a month's tour of Europe. After stopping in Florida to visit a relative and in New York City they flew to Spain and went on to Italy, France and England.

Highlight of the trip was visiting their daughter Laura, who is just completing the equivalent of a master's degree in languages and French culture at the University of Lille. She is to be married some time this summer to Andre Sirot, who will be a teacher of philosophy at a junior college in Lille.

An especially interesting experience for Mr. Evans, who has been in the insurance business for many years, was a tour of Lloyd's of London.

The Evanses say they left their hearts in Spain because of the wonderfully warm, friendly people and their pride in their country and cities. They hope to return there some day.

MRS. CHALMER Sargent of Sayre, Ala., has returned to her home following a visit with her sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Fedrick in Novato.

Mrs. Sargent also visited her brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Yates in Novato. The families planned several trips for her including one to Lake Tahoe and another to the family ranch at Marysville.

THE ROBERT Goetzes of Belvedere were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hoge of Oakland last weekend at Pajaro Dunes, where the Hoges are building a beach house.

MEREDITH LINMAN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl A. Linman of Tiburon, was awarded the Bronze Key on recommendation of the special events committee at Chico State College.

Meredith was homecoming publicity chairman, co-chairman of presents for Chico's Pioneer Week celebration and was chosen this spring to be a member of Cardinal Key, Chico's honorary leadership and scholarship sorority.

She will be graduated this semester with a B.A. in social science.

PARENTS HONORED Reed principal Jack Usilton at a luncheon yesterday at the home of Mrs. James Atkin in Belvedere. Mr. Usilton is leaving Marin for Florida after 11 years as school principal. Also honored at the luncheon was Mrs. Alfred Matson.

SEW SIMPLE

Bikinis And Bra Dresses Simple To Make With Aids

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE:

A group of us who are young-marrieds want to make the cotton bikinis as well as the new bra dress. How can we give these cottons the neat shape found in the ready-to-wear ones?

JUDY S.

DEAR JUDY:

With the price of bikinis and the amount of fabric that is used, you are thinking in the right direction when you plan to make your own. It seems impossible to justify a price of $15 or more for a garment that only requires a yard of fabric (with almost a half yard left over).

Fortunately, there is a new product on the market, that is available in most fabric shops as well as notion counters, to give the bra dresses as well as swim suits the shape that is needed. It is a lightweight, washable bra-shape that can be inserted permanently in your garment.

It may be necessary to change your darts slightly, but you will have a perfect guide; just make your garment fit smoothly over the shaped bra insert. Thanks to the companies who produce notions for the home sewers, we are gradually finding the same helpful aids that are used by the manufacturers.

DEAR EUNICE:

I have a 12-year-old daughter who has been making doll clothes for years and loves puttering around with my leftover scraps of material and trims. Now she wants to sew for herself but, when I take her shopping for material, the things I think she should use, she doesn't want, and I don't like the things she picks out. We have reached the point of no return and consequently, she doesn't want to make anything.

Perhaps you can give us mothers of young teens some ideas on the kinds of materials they should use for their first sewing projects.

MRS. M. K.

DEAR MRS. M. K.:

First, it would be very unlikely that two completely different age groups would like the same thing and you are trying to force your own ideas on your daughter. I would let her shop with her friends, tell her what she can spend and let her make her own decisions. Naturally, she is going to make some mistakes in selection (but unfortunately, Moms, this happens to you too once in awhile).

The first step for any beginner is to begin sewing with a fabric that they dearly love. This compensates for the ripping and other discouraging things that are bound to happen. Also, be tolerant of their sewing. Perfection comes with practice and it's better to get a garment completed that "sorta passes inspection" that can be worn with a smile on a face than to have one that is perfect and worn with bitter tears.

DEAR EUNICE:

I had the good fortune to find a fabulous fabric shop in the East that featured only imported fabrics. The only kind of underlining they carried for silks was a very fine batiste. Why can't I find it in my local fabric shop?

MRS. R. R.

DEAR MRS. R. R.:

At one time, this was the greatest underlining in the world, because silk is a notorious hot fabric to wear in the summer. It has a tendency to cling to you and doesn't breathe like cotton. For this reason, a sheer cotton batiste would absorb the moisture and make the silk more comfortable to wear.

Thanks to our marvelous new lightweight underlinings that are a combination of cotton and Dacron polyester, batiste is no longer considered as suitable for this purpose. The only disadvantage to batiste is that it must be preshrunk before using and today it seems no one wants to wash a garment, all you have to do with the new underlinings is to wet them and let them dry without having to press them before using.

Mrs. Larimer, a Tiburon Peninsula resident for over 20 years, will be leaving Marin for Mountain View later this month. For the past seven years she has been director of Church School Education at St. Stephens Episcopal Church, where she has trained church school teachers and directed the program for more than 200 children enrolled in the church school.

The responsibility, which started out as community service for Mrs. Larimer, became a professional assignment in 1965. She will be going to St. Timothy's Parish in Mountain View, where she will be adminitsrative assistant to the rector, the Rev. Dwight Edwards, and director of church school education. She is also a member of St. Stephen's Guild, and a former secretary of that organization.

Mrs. Alfred Matson is luncheon chairman; Mmes. Carlisle Becker and James Walsh, assistants.

THE MARIN Country Club Garden Club members will go on an outing to Angel Island for their annual picnic on Monday. Members will meet at the Country Club at 10 a.m. and go by bus to Tiburon where they have chartered a ferry to the island for a picnic luncheon. Alternate plans will be used if the ferry strike prevents going to the island.

Mrs. Edward Rifkind will be installed as president following the luncheon. Other officers are Mmes. William Fergus, vice president; Kenneth Borchardt, corresponding secretary; Roy Ricksham, recording secretary, and William Bills, parliamentarian.

NOVATO NEWCOMERS Club members, their husbands and guests will have a brunch tomorrow at the Red Vest restaurant in Novato. The guests will gather at noon for a social hour, with brunch to be served at 2 p.m. Mmes. George Klose, Edwin Fleming and William Hayton are reservations chairmen.

A FAMILY barbecue is scheduled at the Belvedere Tennis Club at 4:30 p.m. Sunday. Mrs V. N. Fulton of Kentfield is chairman.

A CHAMPAGNE buffet from 5 to 7 p.m. Sunday will be the first summer party for Marin Delta Zeta Alumnae and their husbands. It will be held at the Novato home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ramsey. Mrs. Ramsey is in charge of reservations.

MEMBERS OF Bethel 48, International Order of Job's Daughters, will have a public pancake breakfast tomorrow from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at Masonic Temple, San Rafael. Lynn Prosser is chairman. Tickets will be available at the door.

THE LAST meeting of the year for the Women's Society of Christian Service of the United Methodist Church of Mill Valley will be held Tuesday at 11 a.m. preceding a noon luncheon and 1 p.m. program. New officers will be installed by Mrs. Dorsey Behringer.

Mrs. Harold Huycke will conduct the pledge service and will give an evaluation of the past year as a background for planning next year's programs.

Hostesses will be Mmes. Clyde Butterfield, Andrew Watt, Herbert Norris and Edith Kramer.

NEW OFFICERS of the Corte Madera Women's Improvement Club will be installed following a noon luncheon at the Corte Madera Recreation Center on Tuesday.

Mrs. Lyle Cuykendall will accept the office of president and will be joined by Mmes. Gary Campagno, first vice president; Edmond Doucette, second vice president; John Otero, recording secretary; J. W. McClintock, corresponding secretary; Miss Naomi Jensen, treasurer, and Mrs. E. A. Elias, auditor.

Chairman of the Evening section for the coming year will be Mrs. Robert Brinton with Mmes. Everett Thomas as secretary and Louis McCreary as treasurer.

Garden section chairman will be Mrs. Jack Hauser who will be assisted by Mrs. Gary Grant as secretary, treasurer.

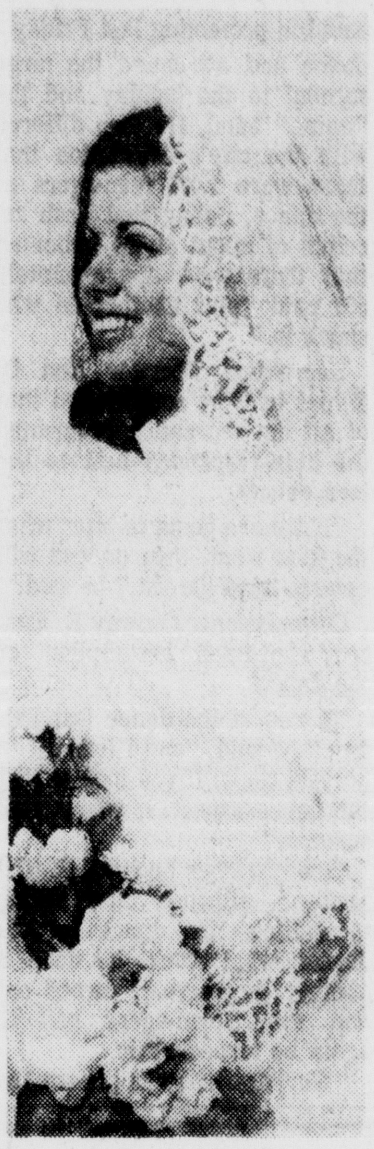
West Point Graduate Takes Bride There

Margaret Carmeron Arnold, the daughter of Mrs. Theodore S. Watson Jr. of Garrison, N.Y. and Ralph G. A. Arnold of Fairfax, Va., was married yesterday to Lt. Stephen Frederick Davis. Lieutenant Davis is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Reid Davis of Fairfax.



MRS. STEPHEN DAVIS

The ceremony was performed at the West Point Cadet Chapel. The bride's matron of honor was her twin sister, Mrs. Thomas R. Lawson Jr. She was also attended by Mrs. Louis Simmons, Miss Helen Simmons and Miss Sara Maurer.

Thomas R. Lawson Jr. was best man. Ushers and sabre bearers were Lts. Jeffrey Donaldson, Peter Drower, Lawrence Feigenbaum, Paul Feyereisen, Wayne Murphy and James Ondo.

A reception followed the ceremony in the ballroom of the Officers' Club.

The bride attended Westbrook Junior College in Portland, Me. and Blinn College in Texas. She is a direct descendant of Roger Williams, the founder of the state of Rhode Island and of Benedict Arnold.

Lieutenant Davis was graduated on Wednesday from West Point. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Turner of Downey and Mrs. Arthur Davis of Fairfax and the late Mr. Davis.

Folowing a wedding trip, the couple will be stationed at Fort Sill, Okla.

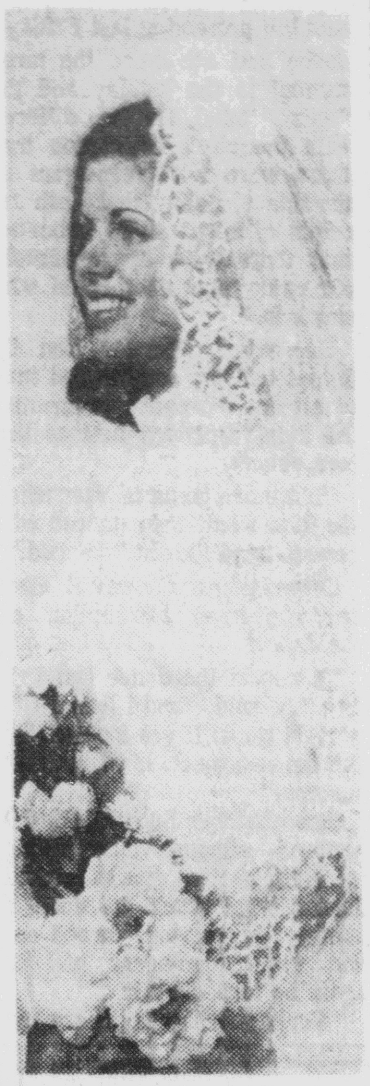
West Point Graduate Takes Bride There

Margaret Carmeron Arnold, the daughter of Mrs. Theodore S. Watson Jr. of Garrison, N.Y. and Ralph G. A. Arnold of Fairfax, Va., was married yesterday to Lt. Stephen Frederick Davis. Lieutenant Davis is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Reid Davis of Fairfax.



MRS. STEPHEN DAVIS

The ceremony was performed at the West Point Cadet Chapel. The bride's matron of honor was her twin sister, Mrs. Thomas R. Lawson Jr. She was also attended by Mrs. Louis Simmons, Miss Helen Simmons and Miss Sara Maurer.

Thomas R. Lawson Jr. was best man. Ushers and sabre bearers were Lts. Jeffrey Donaldson, Peter Drower, Lawrence Feigenbaum, Paul Feyereisen, Wayne Murphy and James Ondo.

A reception followed the ceremony in the ballroom of the Officers' Club.

The bride attended Westbrook Junior College in Portland, Me. and Blinn College in Texas. She is a direct descendant of Roger Williams, the founder of the state of Rhode Island and of Benedict Arnold.

Lieutenant Davis was graduated on Wednesday from West Point. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Turner of Downey and Mrs. Arthur Davis of Fairfax and the late Mr. Davis.

Folowing a wedding trip, the couple will be stationed at Fort Sill, Okla.

Tamalpa Salon Installs Officers For Coming Term

Hazel Field Pauline of Ross was installed president of Tamalpa Salon 558 of the honor organization of the American Legion Auxiliary— 8 et 40.

HAZEL FIELD PAULINE

Those who will serve with her are Mmes. Harry Fitsgibbons, vice president; Dorothy Sollar, second vice president; Ralph Slonecker, treasurer; Norman Boyd, secretary; William Wider, historian, and Frank Bird, chaplain.

Mrs. Pauline has been active in many areas, having served recently as the president of San Anselmo Unit 179 of the American Legion Auxiliary. She is a past president of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Fleet Reserve Association and of the Marin Business and Professional Women. She is a charter member of the Marin Soroptimist Club and San Rafael Toastmistress Lunch Club, also a member of Fairfax Parlor of Eastern Star.

The 8 et 40 has two programs—the prevention and control of tuberculosis, juvenile type, and cystic fibrosis.

New Careers Program Voted; Budget Axed

A drastically reduced version of the New Careers Program, sliced from $76,928 down to $17,543, won the approval of the Marin County Board of Supervisors yesterday in a 4 to 1 vote.

Dr. Arthur Pearl of the University of Oregon, a consultant, and Asst. County Administrator Thomas F. Campanella — who earlier had presently widely differing proposals for a New Careers program — offered a compromise program which would have opened 10 positions for New Careerists as they were vacated by regular county employees and created 14 new jobs to be filled by the New Careerists.

This compromise plan would have cost $76,928. Supervisors decided that all they could afford for next year was the first component — substitution when vacancies occur. This would require $17,543 for a coordinator and a part-time secreatry.

James E. McKenna, director of the Neighborhood Youth Corps program, announced he could do the work for nothing.

Supervisor William A. Gnoss, who said he is impressed with McKenna's work, moved to approve the abbreviated version of New Careers with McKenna as coordinator. Baar seconded the motion.

The other three supervisors said they were not sure McKenna could take on the added duties and wanted to delay a decision.

On New Careers, all five voted in favor, but a second motion — to have McKenna as coordinator — lost 3 to 2, with Gnoss and Baar on the losing end.

Board chairman John F. McInnis and Superviosr Louis H. Baar, his former colleague on the San Rafael City Council, argued over whether McInnis, who had framed the motions, deliberately called for a vote first on whether to approve the program to insure defeat of the second motion to appoint McKenna.

The supervisors then voted 4 to 1, with Baar dissenting, to set aside $17,543 for a coordinator and a part-time secretary, with the understanding that if McKenna can do the job, the money would not be spent.

Even if a new coordinator were hired, the $17,000 would be more than offset by reduced salaries because New Careerists with low pay would replace high-salaried employees, said Pearl.

Burglary Is Denied By San Franciscan

James Roger Kraft, 23, of San Francisco, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court ot burglarizing a Forest Knolls home on May 28. A preliminary hearing was set for Tuesday.

Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. refused to release Kraft on his own recognizance after learning he has a long arrest record. But he reduced Kraft's bail from $9,375 to $1,000.

Friday Plea Date

The case of Andrew Lawrence Stitch, 18, of San Rafael — accused of stealing a $350 guitar from a San Rafael music store May 21 — has not been accepted in juvenile court, it was reported yesterday in Marin Municipal Court. Stitch is scheduled to appear Friday to plead to the felony charge.

Nichols Holds Vote Valid At Sonoma

Sonoma State College President Ambrose R. Nichols Jr. upheld yesterday the May 27 election of Black Student Union leader James G. Gilette as student body president.

The decision came after a five-and-a-half hour session with students, many of whom claimed the election practices had been illegal.

Nichols said, "Although as president, I have the authority to insure that the affairs of the associated students are properly conducted, the evidence presented regarding the elections did not demonstrate substantial improprieties or inadequacies which would require my intervention."

In making the ruling, Nichols validated the decision of the campus elections commission and associated students board of directors.

An attorney from the chancellor's office was also present at the lengthy session to give legal advice. The public and press were barred from the meeting and only students wishing to testify were permitted to enter the meeting room.

Gilette, 34, of Cotati, last week defeated Jon Owen, junior political science major from Novato. Owen had previously won the general election and runoff election which were later ruled invalid by the student board of directors.

In apparently ending the controversy, Nichols did, however, call for study and revision of the elections process. "It is clear that aspects of the bylaws and the elections code dealing with the conduct of elections definitely need to be studied carefully by the students.

Fairfax Teen-Agers' Dances Get Reprieve

Teen dances at Fairfax Pavilion — which in one week mushroomed from virtual obscurity into such an overcrowded "success" that 18 peace officers were needed to quell a rock-and-bottle-throwing incident — will apparently continue to be part of the city's recreation program.

The park and recreation commission last night unanimously approved the resumption of the dances, but under stricter compliance to existing rules.

The 17-year-old promoter of the dances, Steve Jensen of San Anselmo, told the commission that he would continue to bring in "name" bands to the dances.

'It was the appearance of just one of those name bands — The Sons of Champlin — that sent attendance at the Memorial Day dance soaring from the usual 120 persons to between 650 and 1,000 and touched off the melee that left Fairfax Police Chief James Orr, another police officer and a 17-year-old juvenile injured.

The millile-throwing apparently began when Fire Chief Charles Thornton ruled that the capacity of the pavilion had been reached and refused to allow about 200 teen-agers to enter the dance.

Jensen told the commission that he had done nothing unusual in promoting last Friday's dance and attributed the large turnout to the holiday and the "name" band. He also differed with the city's estimation that there were 1,000 teen-agers at the dance, noting that cash receipts of about $1,500 indicated that there were approximately 550 paid "plus another 25 who snuck in."

Recreation Director Ron O. Samet told the commission that of all the recreation programs, the kids responded best to the teen dances.

"If we are going to offer what the kids want, then dances will have to head the list," he said.

Commissioner Conway E. Enscoe supported resumption of the dances.

"I was at the dance last Friday," he said, "and I found it to be very good. If you look at just the dance aspect, it was a real success."

Commissioner Leonard J. Wilgenbush, although later voting to continue the dances, asked Jensen what would be done if another large crowd turned out and some teen-agers had to again be turned away.

"Would you like us to turn the fire hose on them or what?" he asked.

Jensen said that in the future he would use pre-sell ticketing, only printing up to 700 tickets, the maximum number of persons allowed in the pavilion under city ordinance.

Several in the audience urged the commission to allow the dances to continue, but also urged greater city control. Many praised Jensen for his work in organizing and running the dances.

"Earlier in the evening, you were seeking ways to get better participation at your recreation programs. Now this lad (Jensen) is doing what you are trying to do. I think he should be commended," an unidentified spectator said.

Most of the 15 to 20 persons in the audience indicated they favored allowing resumption of the dances. No one spoke against resumption.

The commission, however, turned down a request from the Switchboard of Marin to sponsor a dance at the Pavilion.

"In light of what has happened, I think for the time being we should limit the pavilion to use by Fairfax groups," commissioner Joseph E. Martinez said.

New Charges Delayed For Felony Suspect

No new drug charges were filed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court against Charles Noel Hess, 26, of Oakland, pending further invsstigation by the district attorney's office.

Hess, who is awaiting trial in Superior Court on five felony charges, was rearrested yesterday on suspicion of possession of a dangerous drug after he was stopped for speeding in Larkspur.

PETALUMA FACES BOND DECISIONS

$3.2 Million In Five Separate Proposals; Midtown, Street Jobs On Ballot Tuesday

Petaluma voters on Tuesday will decide on five bond issues totalling $3.2 million. Two involving street improvements have emerged as the most controversial.

The measure, appearing to receive the most criticism, is Proposition "D." It involves $1,580,000 for the widening and improvement of Petaluma Boulevard north from D to Prospect streets. A small portion of the bond money would provide for the improvement of Washington Street from Kentucky to Keokuk streets, including new street lights and traffic signals.

Proponents of the issue maintain that Petaluma Boulevard must be widened from four to six lanes to ease the bottleneck in the north-south flow of traffic. The purchase of business properties on the east side of the roadway would be included in the cost.

In speaking for the measure, city officials have said the street's traffic capacity has already been surpassed and that future projections indicate the flow will reach 24,000 to 28,000 daily.

Hoping to ease the situation in the business district, proponents say the improvements will help revitalize the downtown area and bring increased business and profits.

Opponents of the plan include several council candidates and councilmen who registered some opposition in the consideration of the bond measures Many say the $1.5 million figure will not be nearly enought to get the promised project underway.

They maintain the funds will provide only enough to acquire the needed land and perhaps some demolition work. Several have charged it would be putting the city into the real estate business.

Others have charged the issue is a watered-down version of the Core Area Plan to revitalize the business district. Proponents have countered that the measure has no relation to the redevelopment plan, but is only an effort to relieve traffic congestion.

The other street improvement issue will appear as Proposition E and involve $1,295,000. Included will be the improvement of Caulfield Lane between South McDowell Boulevard and Lakeville Highway and an overcrossing of Highway 101 at Caulfield Lane.

Continuing the new traffic pattern to the downtown district, the plan includes the extension of Lakeville Highway to Hopper Street, and D Street to Petaluma Boulevard South. A new lift bridge at D Street is also included.

Another section of the measure would provide a pedestrian overcrossing of Highway 101 attached to or near the Washington Street overcrossing. The walkway would be used mainly by youngsters who attend Kenilworth Junior High School or who make use of the municipal swimming pool.

Residents of East Petaluma, led by the East Petaluma Civic Association, have supported the measure saying that a second highway overcrossing from east to West Petaluma is a necessity.

Other proponents say the extension of Lakeville Highway, parallel to the railroad and into Hopper Street, will provide a needed northerly route to Petaluma Boulevard for drivers wishing to by-pass the central business district.

Opponents of the measure have said the estimated costs are too high and have questioned the necessity of a new bridge at D Street.

Proposition A on the ballot involves $185,000 for the fire department. Included would be a new station on South McDowell Boulevard and an addition to the central fire station on D Street.

With the growing number of homes and businesses on the east side, the need for closer fire fighting facilities has increased. Many residents east of the freeway have said they worry that trucks from the west side may not be able to cross the lone overpass in heavy traffic should an emergency occur.

The issue would also provide for a two-bay addition to the central station as well as added office space.

No opposition has been raised.

Proposition B if passed would earmark $45,000 for an addition to and remodeling of the police station. Officials report the building constructed in 1955 became inadequate in 1963 and requires more office and storage space.

Adding to the rear of the building at the civic center, the funds would provide a new radio room, records room, squad room and three offices.

No opposition to the measure is apparent.

Proposition C will be $100,000 for park improvements and park land acquisition. Half the funds are earmarked for improvements to Lucchesi Park on Maria Drive. Now only the site of baseball fields, the city recreation department hopes to develop the 30-acre area into the city's major recreational site.

The bond money would provide for playing fields, picnic area, play equipment, trees and shrubs, irrigation systems and neighborhood meeting areas to accommodate all age groups.

The remainder of the funds would be used to purchase additional park sites for the Neighborhood Park System adopted by the city council to provide green belts in high density residential areas.

No opposition has been raised on the parks measure.

City Mgr. Robert H. Meyer said that, should all the measures pass, the additional tax load on a home with a market value of $20,000 would be $25.10 per year. The owner of a home valued at $30,000 would pay an additional $37.50.

A total of 9,218 Petalumans will be eligible to vote Tuesday, according to Lillian Nommsen, city clerk. Polling places will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Polling places within the city include the Veterans Memorial Building, McNear School, City Hall, Valley Vista School, the George Buick Showroom, Kenil-

City, School Candidates Crowd Petaluma's Ballot

In a ballot crowded with candidates, Petaluma voters will select Tuesday a mayor, three councilmen and three board of education members.

Of major interest is the race between Mayor Helen Putnam and her challenger, Councilman Robert S. Lipman, both veteran campaigners who scored well in the city elections four years ago.

Mrs. Putnam, who is completing her first term, defeated Norman Van Bebber in 1965. Principal-teacher at Two Rock School, Mrs. Putnam was active in school affairs before joining city government.

She served for 12 years on the Petaluma Board of Education, as president of the Sonoma County School Trustees Association and as president of the California School Boards Association.

Mrs. Putnam, 59, serves as chairman of the Mayors and Councilmen's Association of Sonoma County, president of the Redwood Empire division of the League of California Cities and as an alternate to the Sonoma County Local Agency Formation Commission. A graduate of the University of California at Berkeley, she is married and the mother of two grown children and lives at 900 B Street.

Lipman received the highest number of votes in Petaluma history in 1965 when winning his council seat. A graduate of George Washington University, he is employed as a public relations consultant and director of public reations at Sonoma State College.

Lipman, 31, lives at 1217 West Street, is married and the father of three. He has based a major part of his campaign on city planning and more orderly development to include parks and green areas.

He has been endorsed by the East Petaluma Civic Association.

Philip L. Joerger is the only incumbent councilman seeking re-election in a field of nine candidates. Three will be elected.

Joerger, 43, ran twice unsuccessfully for county supervisor and is seeking his second council term. A businessman, he lives at 1 Jensen Drive, and serves on the recreation, music and parks commission.

Candidate Lawrence R. Bernauer, 28, of 824 St. Francis Drive, is seeking his first political post. The owner of a Speedee 7-11 store, he attended Golden Gate Business College and has been endorsed by the East Petaluma Civic Association.

Robert A. Brunner, 31, of 212 Seventh Street, operates an independent insurance agency in Petaluma. A graduate of San Francisco State College, he is single.

Rodney L. Cameron, 33, of 1537 Lauren Drive, has been endorsed by the East Petaluma Civic Association and the Operating Engineers Union Local No. 3. A computer operator, he attended Heald College and is employed by the union.

Lawrence E. Forney, 56, of the Petaluma Hotel is an ex-prize fighter and retired Navy man. He has based his campaign on providing more youth activities.

Fred V. Mattei, 53, operates Mattei Brothers Clothing store in Petaluma. He has been president of the Chamber of Commerce, Rotary Club, 20-30 Club, St. Vincent's Father's Club and the Petaluma chapter of the American Red Cross. He now serves on the Petaluma Redevelopment Committee, Mattei, of 23 La Cresta Drive, is the third candidate endorsed by the East Petaluma Civic Association.

Donald P. Petro, 36, has based the major part of his campaign on dividing the city into six council electoral districts. Petro, of 1300 Glenwood Drive, is employed as general operations manager for the Romac-Pacific Corp., San Rafael.

James Edward Reed, 35, is making his third bid for a council seat. A graduate of Norwich University, he is employed as production manager for an electronics firm. He served as local president and state director of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, president of the Fairchild Management Club and is a member of the St. Vincent's Father's Club, Knights of Columbus, Elks Lodge and American Legion. Reed lives at 962 McNear Avenue.

Eulon O. Stanley, 55, of 1432 East Madison Street, is a former Novato resident. A member of the John Birch Society, he was local chairman of the George Wallace for President Committee in 1968. Stanley is employed as a salesman, also owning a bookstore in Novato.

The names of three incumbents and three challengers will appear on the ballot for three seats on the board of education.

Sol Fishman, 50, is seeking his third term on the board. He had previously served on the Penngrove School Board for five years and has served as vice president, secretary and legislative chairman of the Sonoma County School Trustees Association. Fishman operates a janitorial supply service and lives at 1265 Dutch Lane, Penngrove.

Dr. William M. Kortum, 41, of 180 Ely Road, is seeking his second term. A veterinarian, he is a graduate of the University of California at Davis. Dr. Kortum leads a Sonoma County conservation group seeking public access to state tidelands.

Clay Thompson, 43, president and manager of the Poehlmann Hatchery, is seeking his third board term. He is a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley. He lives at 610 Petaluma Boulevard North.

Challenger Alfred Neal Brengle, 26, is a school teacher in San Rafael and lives at 531 Virginia Drive. He is a graduate of the University of California at Riverside.

Arthur L. La Franchi, 32, is seeking his first term, but has served previously on the Cinnabar School board. He is an attorney and lives at 12 Parkside Terrace. He is a University of San Francisco graduate.

John K. Murphy, 34, has been active in youth work at his church and through parent-teacher organizations. He is employed as a technical cost estimator. Murphy lives at 102 Seventh Street. He is a graduate of Claremont Men's College.

Also appearing on the ballot will be two charter amendments, one allowing the board of library trustees to enter into a merger agreement with the Sonoma County Library System and the other permitting ordinances introduced by city council to be posted rather than published upon a two-thirds vote of the councilmen, rather than by the unanimous opinion needed now.

Juvenile Court May Take Marijuana Case

The case of John Avedian, 19, of San Francisco, accused of having marijuana while hitchhiking near Gate Six, was referred yesterday to the probation department for possible transferral to juvenile court from Marin Municipal Court.

He was told to return to court June 20.

Weekends In Jail For Weed Peddler

Judge Thomas J. Keating of Marin Superior Court yesterday sentenced a 24-year-old Fairfax man, who sold two ounces of marijuana to a narcotics agent, to spend weekends in jail for the next six months.

Henry Lee Quiroz has been convicted by a jury in April. Testimony in his trial showed that he had taken a ride with a narcotics agent while hitchhiking and later sold him the marijuana.

HOT, DRY JUNE

Maps prepared from U.S. Weather Bureau's 30-day forecasts indicate Marin County will be in for even warmer, dryer weather than normal through July 1. Average rainfall for the month is only .25 of an inch; last year none fell, and the season total ended up at 28.10. The last time it rained in San Rafael this year was April 26-27, with .01 inch, but the season total is already 56.51, far ahead of the average 36.57. June's hottest day last year was 97 on the 16th; coolest was 49 on the 13th. (AP Wirephoto Map)

Juvenile Court Takes Suspects

The cases of Philip David Harrison, 18, of Sleepy Hollow, and Duncan Peter Dunn, 18, of Santa Venetia, have been transferred to Marin Juvenile Court.

The youths are charged with possessing marijuana for sale and encouraging a 14-year-old girl runaway to lead a dissolute and immoral life.

They were arrested in a panel truck near the Civic Center May 21.

Convict Tells Of Sabella Robbery Role

A San Quentin inmate, who has confessed to taking part in the kidnaping and robbery of restaurant owner Luciano A. Sabella last November, took the witness stand yesterday and cheerfully incriminated his alleged confederates.

Walter John Hoefler, formerly of Larkspur, described for a Marin Superior Court jury trying Daniel Thomas Stathos and Kenneth Lee Harnal, both 22, how the three of them planned and executed the crime.

Hoefler also told the jury that he and Stathos were responsible for the October armed robbery of the Greenbrae Lanes.

Hoefler reported what he told Sabella to gain entrance to his Peacock Gap home on Nov. 24: "I need help, Lou. I just ran over a little dog in the street."

After he pulled a revolver on Sabella, Hoefler testified, Harnal, also armed, followed him into the house as did Stathos, who wore a stocking over his head.

Harnal stayed in the living room of the home for most of the two or three hours that the three waited for the time that Sabella said his restaurant would be deserted, Hoefler testified. Stathos and he stayed in a den with the Sabellas, Hoefler said.

Shortly after midnight, Hoefler said, he and Harnal went to the restaurant, forcing Sabella to accompany them and open the safe. Stathos was left in the house with Mrs. Sabella and the four sleeping children.

At a prearranged telephone signal, Stathos left Mrs. Sabella, whom he had handcuffed to a piano leg.

"Shaking and nervous" was Hoefler's description of Mrs. Sabella during the long evening. He added that Stathos offered to bring her a tranquillizer once if she wanted it.

Hoefler also told how he and Stathos told the Sabellas that if they described any of the three men to police they would "harm the children" later.

Earlier yesterday, Sabella identified Stathos and Harnal in the courtroom and Hoefler from a picture. He related virtually the same story as Hoefler, describing Hoefler as the man he had originally described to police as "the dapper one."

The trial will continue Tuesday before Judge Samuel W. Gardiner.

Thinking About Smuggling

If not, then try smuggling along your favorite dreams, for here you will see, that, from which the tapestry of dreams is woven. Would you be intrigued by about 275 feet of your own Tiburon-on-the-Bay shoreline, private beach, and about 5 acres of tidelands as a protective buffer? Visualize a beautiful acre plateau above the beach; with every window in command of magnificent views to blue Bay, rugged rock or green stately lawn & trees. Via land the main portals of this majestic, authentic English mansion are first sighted thru an iron-gated brick-entry wall. There it stands proud, sturdy, ageless, 'neath the rambling charm of a multi-gabled slate roof. Its entire exterior is garbed in mellowed-red-brick that appears complacently relaxed in the caress of soft green ivy.

The butler and maids have departed, and tho vacant, much warmth prevails.

Upon entering the two story high beige Carrara-marble-floored reception hall, the gracious flow of living space will begin your capitulation. Descend to the grand paneled Dining Room; amble thru the masonry tile-floored sun-room; stroll over oak plank flooring; figuratively recline before the handsome black marble fireplace of the elegant Living Room. 'Tis quite natural that you will then envision the grandeur of gay social events and the delightful tranquil living that can be revitiated here.

Finally, you will note the 4 family sized Bedrooms with 4½ Baths on the 2nd floor; the central thermo controlled heating system, the built-in elec. kitchen., the 2 Bdrm. & ½ Ba., maids' quarters and . . . and . . . and . . .

Please phone for an appointment; we will be happy to smuggle you in via land or sea.

Here is the perfect family home that boasts 100-ft. frontage on a deep-water canal. Tie up to your own spacious dock — relax on your covered patio with the Bar-B-Q ready. You'll never tire of the view from all of the large rooms to your own back yard Venice! The three bedrooms, two baths and big family kitchen lend comfort to this boat fancier's dream, close to the Marin Yacht Club. Most cooperative owner. Price, $59,950.

★ IN-LAWS, ANYONE? ★ ★ LOS RANCHITOS

Looking for More Room??? This modern 2-story home in Los Ranchitos is ideal for a large family. The stately home includes five bedrooms, four and one-half baths, a family room covering the entire first floor, and a balcony encircling the better portion of the home. There is even plenty of room for a pool! This is a "must see" for any large family with that "fenced in" feeling! Price, $69,500!

★ LOTUS LAND ★ ★ FAIRHILLS

This peaceful family home high in the hills of Fairhills in San Rafael. The U-shaped floor plan encompasses a delightful outdoor living area with ample room for a pool. The house has a separate dining room, a kitchen with a distinct breakfast area, four bedrooms in addition to a den or family room. If you have been looking for a home in this price range, this property is well worth the time to inspect and check the value at a price of $69,500.

★ LIVE A LITTLE ★ ★ KENTFIELD

Live it up in this home you'll love a lot! It is a gracious two-story colonial home on a large, level, secluded cul-de-sac in Kentfield that could be your dream home for life. Just a few of the many custom features: Built-in color TV and stereo system with speakers to the deck overlooking the 9-foot-deep heated 20x40 pool with sweep. Large formal dining room easily seats 16. Enjoy a fire in the living room or in the sunken oversized family room with built-in wet bar and disposal. Both fireplaces are floor-to-ceiling brick, of course! The separate upstairs playroom is begging for active children and mother will love the peace and quiet she deserves. Dad: No painting for at least five more years with the ten-year guarantee provided on the Guard-Coated texturized plaster outside. Sad owners leaving Marin. Call now. You can assume a 7½% $60,000 loan. Total price, $87,950.

Thinking About Smuggling

If not, then try smuggling-along your favorite dreams, for here you will see, that, from which the tapestry of dreams is woven. Would you be intrigued by about 275 feet of your own Tiburon-on-the-Bay shoreline, private beach, and about 5 acres of tidelands as a protective buffer? Visualize a beautiful acre plateau above the beach; with every window in command of magnificent views to blue Bay, rugged rock or green stately lawn & trees. Via land the main portals of this majestic, authentic English mansion are first sighted thru an iron-gated brick-entry wall. There it stands proud, sturdy, ageless, 'neath the rambling charm of a multi-gabled slate roof. Its entire exterior is garbed in mellowed-red-brick that appears complacently relaxed in the caress of soft green ivy.

The butler and maids have departed, and tho vacant, much warmth prevails.

Upon entering the two story high beige Carrara-marble-floored reception hall, the gracious flow of living space will begin your capitulation. Descend to the grand paneled Dining Room; amble thru the masonry tile-floored sun-room; stroll over oak plank flooring; figuratively recline before the handsome black marble fireplace of the elegant Living Room. 'Tis quite natural that you will then envision the grandeur of gay social events and the delightful tranquil living that can be revitiated here.

Finally, you will note the 4 family sized Bedrooms with 4½ Baths on the 2nd floor; the central thermo controlled heating system, the built-in elec. kitchen., the 2 Bdrm. & ½ Ba., maids' quarters and . . . and . . . and . . .

Please phone for an appointment; we will be happy to smuggle you in via land or sea.

★ COLDWELL, BANKER'S ★ Selection Of Fine Homes

WALK TO SAN RAFAEL HIGH AND COLEMAN SCHOOLS $33,950

A very pleasing family home in an excellent location. Plenty of room for the growing family to expand — unfinished area off garage could become a rumpus or family room, or even an in-law apartment. Minimum upkeep garden at rear and lawn in front for convenience. Lovely views from front and back of home. Three good size bedrooms, formal dining room and breakfast area in kitchen complete the picture. Two-car garage and 2 carport give ample parking for a multi-car family. (Eves. 453-5718)

NEW LISTING

On a corner lot, in a park-like setting, with a beautiful garden area. Huge deck area for entertaining, with four massive oak trees for shade. Low maintenance landscaping. 4 bedrooms, 2 baths, workshop in basement, extra large oven in kitchen. Very attractive brick fireplace in living room. Close in location — walk to commute bus — short distance to San Rafael shops. $43,500. (Eves. 453-5983)

IN THE REDWOODS

Well-maintained house boasts a spacious master retreat or in-law apartment nicely separated from children's bedrooms. Warm living room has beamed ceiling and used brick fireplace; roomy den. Dining area opens to a well-planted patio. Choice West Blithedale area, close to town. 4 bedrooms, 3 baths. $55,250. (Eves. 924-4323)

ESTABLISHED AREA—BEAUTIFUL HOMES

Standing on a fenced, fully landscaped, all level lot with POOL in one of San Rafael's most desirable close-in areas, this 4 bedroom, 2 bath home offers a large family room with fireplace and wet bar. It is open to the kitchen and has sliding glass doors to patio. Splendid for outdoor entertaining. Living room is also large and has beautiful grass cloth wallpaper, as does the hallway. Lots of privacy here in this area of stately trees and well-kept homes. (Eves. 453-5718) $63,500.

DOMINICAN PRIVACY

Beautifully maintained contemporary style 3 bedroom, 2 bath home in a very convenient, much sought after location. Fully air conditioned, home has a large dining room, and a cheery all-electric kitchen with breakfast bar. Off-white vinyl floors throughout. Beautiful free-form swimming pool, heated and filtered of course. Small lawn beyond house and pool. Enclosed storage cabinet for washer and dryer in carport. Plenty of closets. $48,500. (Eves. 453-5718)

2-BRIDGE VIEW

Both Richmond and Bay Bridges are part of the impressive view from most windows of this 4 bedroom, 2½ bath home atop Bret Harte Heights. Spacious living room has Arizona Stone fireplace and the view goes on forever! Very large recreation room is paneled, has 2nd fireplace. Huge garage, space for everything. ½ acre building site included for $59,500 or try $45,000 without building site. (Eves. 453-5718)

FOR THE HORSE LOVER

Spacious, contemporary ranch on one acre featuring 3-box horse barn with tack room, large corral. This exciting 4 bedroom, 2 bath home with warm living and dining room has an all-electric kitchen, spacious family room with outside access to delightful patio. Master suite boasts its own secluded garden area. Circular driveway to approach the home, well landscaped and completely fenced. $72,500. (Eves. 453-5718)

FOR GALA OCCASIONS

Entertain your guests in grand style in the beautiful quarry tiled courtyard around your sparkling pool. For small occasions, entertain in the magnificent living room with crossing beamed ceiling. This quality constructed home has 4 bedrooms, 2½ baths plus a powder room, and is conveniently located in the Dominican area, close to everything, but retaining privacy. $82,500. (Eves. 453-1590)

AN IDEA

Are you reading the Want Ads every day, hoping to spot a good buy? Then consider for a moment another way of doing the same thing which we think may be better.

It is a fact that often OUR best buys never get advertised at all. We have over $13 million in Marin property listed for sale at any one time, and naturally we can't advertise all we have for sale every day. And furthermore, we call OUR buyers BEFORE a property gets to the papers, and if it is what they want, it is sold before it is advertised at all!

So our suggestion is that you tell us what it is that YOU are looking for in Marin. Chances are we have it listed now, or if not, that we will have it listed soon, because we have a continuous flow of new listings from a backlog of FIFTY-NINE YEARS of selling here (relistings) as well as from our complete coverage with SIX MARIN COUNTY OFFICES.

As soon as we spot what you are looking for, WE WILL CALL YOU FIRST, BEFORE WE ADVERTISE THE PROPERTY. Become one of our buyers . . . call

AN IDEA

Are you reading the Want Ads every day, hoping to spot a good buy? Then consider for a moment another way of doing the same thing which we think may be better.

It is a fact that often OUR best buys never get advertised at all. We have over $13 million in Marin property listed for sale at any one time, and naturally we can't advertise all we have for sale every day. And furthermore, we call OUR buyers BEFORE a property gets to the papers, and if it is what they want, it is sold before it is advertised at all!

So our suggestion is that you tell us what it is that YOU are looking for in Marin. Chances are we have it listed now, or if not, that we will have it listed soon, because we have a continuous flow of new listings from a backlog of FIFTY-NINE YEARS of selling here (relistings) as well as from our complete coverage with SIX MARIN COUNTY OFFICES.

As soon as we spot what you are looking for, WE WILL CALL YOU FIRST, BEFORE WE ADVERTISE THE PROPERTY. Become one of our buyers . . . call

BRIDGEWAY WIDENING COMPLETED

Sausalito's Bridgeway widening project was completed last week when construction workers put the finishing touches on the special emergency lane. The widening cost $144,804. Workmen reported that some drivers have been using the center strip for parking and as a passing lane. The center strip was built for use by police, fire and ambulance vehicles. The city is considering painting a double line to discourage parking and passing on the new, raised lane. (Independent-Journal photo)

Students Pick Slate At San Marin High

Phillip Peterson outpolled two other candidates and was named yesterday as president of San Marin High School student body for the 1969-70 school year.

Although voting was done last Tuesday, results of the election were not announced until yesterday by student advisor Donald T. Nicholas. The number of votes each candidate received was not released by the school.

Peterson won the presidency by defeating John Briggs and William Eckhoff.

Robert Fowler won the vice presidency over Mark O'Connell and James Osborn. J. D. Catlin was elected secretary over Jeff Bedford and Lynn Kircher. Peter Sorensen was unopposed for treasurer.

Sue Dennis, Genine Loveland, Pat McDowell, Sandy Nakamine and Donna Richardson were chosen varsity cheerleaders. India Colfer, Diane Jacques, Darlene Knickerbocker, Tamara Larsen, Marcie Long, Marua McCarthy and Holly Reynolds won the posts of songleaders.

William Swearingen won the presidency of the senior class for next fall over Dwight Darling. Barbara Kurtz was unopposed for vice president, as was Carla Clements for secreatry. Linda Elkin won the treasurer position over Chris Dahl.

Walt Antonio, Lisa Davis, Joan Leverington, Terry Loegering, Sand2y Nakamine, Paula Richardson and Jackie Smith won places on the representative council.

James Osbon was elected president of the junior class for next fall, winning over Daniel Fries. Greg Maloney won the vice presidency over Mike Leeper. Mike Trahan was unopposed for secretary and Gayle Thompson was unopposed for treasurer.

Curt Barton, Jeff Bedford, Mike Kassenbrock, James Nakamine, Mark O'Connell, and Rodney Yee won places on the representative council.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Most Alcoholics Look Normal And Are Not On Skid Row

VAN DELLEN

Less than 3 per cent of our alcoholics live on skid row. The majority are well-dressed, clean-shaved, and look like any other citizen. Physicians have difficulty recognizing these individuals when they seek medical advice for any number of related and unrelated complaints. Estimates indicate that 9 out of 10 with drinking problems escape detection, even by experts.

Persistent drinking, regardless of quantity, is a medical problem. Of greatest importance is whether alcohol has impaired mental and physical health.

ESSENTIALLY, the problems of the heavy social, or problem, drinker are:

Dependence upon alcohol in much the same way as addicts become dependent upon drugs.

Withdrawl symptoms shortly after the drug is discontinued. The individual awakens with the shakes, sweats profusely, and has butterflies in the stomach. Chronic alcoholics may develop withdrawal fits and delirium tremens.

At first, a tolerance to booze develops so that the person can drink more without getting drunk. Later tolerance declines and he "feels" his liquor sooner.

The individual cannot remember the night before due to amnesia. During alcoholic blackouts, there is no loss of consciousness and many behave normally and are able to perform complicated tasks.

SUSPICIOUS FINDINGS are enlargement of or tenderness over the liver. In many, there is a fine tremor of the outstretched hands and tongue. Redness of the face and palms may be seen. Liquor on the breath does not necessarily indicate alcoholism.

Many alcoholics complain of nervousness and stomach trouble, but hesitate to blame booze for their distress. They also are accident prone and frequently ask the physician to sign disability certificates stating that they were absent because of sickness. Alcoholics are found in all walks of life, and often we forget that many women are also victims.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J)

CORONARY DISEASE

D. C. writes: What is coronary disease?

REPLY

The term coronary applies mainly to diseases involving the arteries that bring blood to the heart muscles. Arteriosclerosis is the most common cause and angina pectoris and coronary thrombosis are the most common results. Send stamped, self addressed envelope for our leaflet on coronary disease.

AFTER A CORONARY

S. R. writes: Does the heart ever return to normal after a slight coronary attack?

REPLY

Not to normal, because coronary thrombosis seldom occurs unless the coronary arteries are hardened. On the other hand, the damaged area heals and, in this respect, the organ is no worse off than it was before the attack.

RAISINS FOR BABY

Mrs. C. writes: I give raisins to my 20-month-old baby occasionally and note that he passes them undigested. Am I harming him?

REPLY

No, but since he is not digesting the raisins, they are doing him no good. Why not forget them until he can chew, or else cook and puree them.

GAS FROM AIR

M. C. writes: Why does a nervous stomach produce gas, even when it is empty?

REPLY

Gas in the stomach usually comes from air that is swallowed.

LSD Case Sent To Hospital

Atwood Donald Travis, 35, of 1326 Third Street, Apartment 2, San Rafael, was taken to Napa State Hospital for psychiatric care after reportedly drinking wine and taking LSD, Sausalito police said yesterday.

Police said they found Travis lying on a sidewalk at 300 Bridgeway at 9:20 p.m. Thursday, unconscious, rigid and cold to the touch with his eyes open and staring. When put on a wheeled stretcher by Sausalito firemen, police said he became violent and four men were required to hold him down until restraining straps could be applied.

Travis' wife said he had drunk wine and taken LSD earlier, police said.

Teen Surrenders In Burglary Case

A 16-year-old San Francisco boy was booked into Marin County Juvenile Hall Thursday on suspicion of burglary after turning himself in to authorities in Nevada City, Sausalito police said yesterday.

The youth, Ricky Van Lohuizen, was said to have taken part in the burglary Tuesday of the John C. Arpels residence, 159 Cloudview Trail, and the Nevada County sheriff's office reported he had several items taken in the burglary.

Another San Francisco youth was also believed involved and is being sought, police said.

Waldo Statue Suit Dismissed

Charges of building without a county permit against statue builders J. Christopher Roberts and Andrew Loveman, who are constructing an edifice at Gate 5 near Sausalito, were dismissed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court.

Asst. County Counsel Joseph Forest said that the county will continue with a civil suit against the two men in an effort to get the 65-foot structure, variously described as a building and statuse, removed.

Roberts and Lovemen claim their structure is a statue of a mother and children. The county, however, has maintained it not only is a building being constructed without a building permit, but is also likely to fall over. It rises above a sunken barge.

BRIDGEWAY WIDENING COMPLETED

Sausalito's Bridgeway widening project was completed last week when construction workers put the finishing touches on the special emergency lane. The widening cost $144,804. Workmen reported that some drivers have been using the center strip for parking and as a passing lane. The center strip was built for use by police, fire and ambulance vehicles. The city is considering painting a double line to discourage parking and passing on the new, raised lane. (Independent-Journal photo)

Students Pick Slate At San Marin High

Phillip Peterson outpolled two other candidates and was named yesterday as president of San Marin High School student body for the 1969-70 school year.

Although voting was done last Tuesday, results of the election were not announced until yesterday by student advisor Donald T. Nicholas. The number of votes each candidate received was not released by the school.

Peterson won the presidency by defeating John Briggs and William Eckhoff.

Robert Fowler won the vice presidency over Mark O'Connell and James Osborn. J. D. Catlin was elected secretary over Jeff Bedford and Lynn Kircher. Peter Sorensen was unopposed for treasurer.

Sue Dennis, Genine Loveland, Pat McDowell, Sandy Nakamine and Donna Richardson were chosen varsity cheerleaders. India Colfer, Diane Jacques, Darlene Knickerbocker, Tamara Larsen, Marcie Long, Marua McCarthy and Holly Reynolds won the posts of songleaders.

William Swearingen won the presidency of the senior class for next fall over Dwight Darling. Barbara Kurtz was unopposed for vice president, as was Carla Clements for secreatry. Linda Elkin won the treasurer position over Chris Dahl.

Walt Antonio, Lisa Davis, Joan Leverington, Terry Loegering, Sand2y Nakamine, Paula Richardson and Jackie Smith won places on the representative council.

James Osbon was elected president of the junior class for next fall, winning over Daniel Fries. Greg Maloney won the vice presidency over Mike Leeper. Mike Trahan was unopposed for secretary and Gayle Thompson was unopposed for treasurer.

Curt Barton, Jeff Bedford, Mike Kassenbrock, James Nakamine, Mark O'Connell, and Rodney Yee won places on the representative council.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Most Alcoholics Look Normal And Are Not On Skid Row

VAN DELLEN

Less than 3 per cent of our alcoholics live on skid row. The majority are well-dressed, clean-shaved, and look like any other citizen. Physicians have difficulty recognizing these individuals when they seek medical advice for any number of related and unrelated complaints. Estimates indicate that 9 out of 10 with drinking problems escape detection, even by experts.

Persistent drinking, regardless of quantity, is a medical problem. Of greatest importance is whether alcohol has impaired mental and physical health.

ESSENTIALLY, the problems of the heavy social, or problem, drinker are:

Dependence upon alcohol in much the same way as addicts become dependent upon drugs.

Withdrawl symptoms shortly after the drug is discontinued. The individual awakens with the shakes, sweats profusely, and has butterflies in the stomach. Chronic alcoholics may develop withdrawal fits and delirium tremens.

At first, a tolerance to booze develops so that the person can drink more without getting drunk. Later tolerance declines and he "feels" his liquor sooner.

The individual cannot remember the night before due to amnesia. During alcoholic blackouts, there is no loss of consciousness and many behave normally and are able to perform complicated tasks.

SUSPICIOUS FINDINGS are enlargement of or tenderness over the liver. In many, there is a fine tremor of the outstretched hands and tongue. Redness of the face and palms may be seen. Liquor on the breath does not necessarily indicate alcoholism.

Many alcoholics complain of nervousness and stomach trouble, but hesitate to blame booze for their distress. They also are accident prone and frequently ask the physician to sign disability certificates stating that they were absent because of sickness. Alcoholics are found in all walks of life, and often we forget that many women are also victims.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J)

CORONARY DISEASE

D. C. writes: What is coronary disease?

REPLY

The term coronary applies mainly to diseases involving the arteries that bring blood to the heart muscles. Arteriosclerosis is the most common cause and angina pectoris and coronary thrombosis are the most common results. Send stamped, self addressed envelope for our leaflet on coronary disease.

AFTER A CORONARY

S. R. writes: Does the heart ever return to normal after a slight coronary attack?

REPLY

Not to normal, because coronary thrombosis seldom occurs unless the coronary arteries are hardened. On the other hand, the damaged area heals and, in this respect, the organ is no worse off than it was before the attack.

RAISINS FOR BABY

Mrs. C. writes: I give raisins to my 20-month-old baby occasionally and note that he passes them undigested. Am I harming him?

REPLY

No, but since he is not digesting the raisins, they are doing him no good. Why not forget them until he can chew, or else cook and puree them.

GAS FROM AIR

M. C. writes: Why does a nervous stomach produce gas, even when it is empty?

REPLY

Gas in the stomach usually comes from air that is swallowed.

LSD Case Sent To Hospital

Atwood Donald Travis, 35, of 1326 Third Street, Apartment 2, San Rafael, was taken to Napa State Hospital for psychiatric care after reportedly drinking wine and taking LSD, Sausalito police said yesterday.

Police said they found Travis lying on a sidewalk at 300 Bridgeway at 9:20 p.m. Thursday, unconscious, rigid and cold to the touch with his eyes open and staring. When put on a wheeled stretcher by Sausalito firemen, police said he became violent and four men were required to hold him down until restraining straps could be applied.

Travis' wife said he had drunk wine and taken LSD earlier, police said.

Teen Surrenders In Burglary Case

A 16-year-old San Francisco boy was booked into Marin County Juvenile Hall Thursday on suspicion of burglary after turning himself in to authorities in Nevada City, Sausalito police said yesterday.

The youth, Ricky Van Lohuizen, was said to have taken part in the burglary Tuesday of the John C. Arpels residence, 159 Cloudview Trail, and the Nevada County sheriff's office reported he had several items taken in the burglary.

Another San Francisco youth was also believed involved and is being sought, police said.

Waldo Statue Suit Dismissed

Charges of building without a county permit against statue builders J. Christopher Roberts and Andrew Loveman, who are constructing an edifice at Gate 5 near Sausalito, were dismissed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court.

Asst. County Counsel Joseph Forest said that the county will continue with a civil suit against the two men in an effort to get the 65-foot structure, variously described as a building and statuse, removed.

Roberts and Lovemen claim their structure is a statue of a mother and children. The county, however, has maintained it not only is a building being constructed without a building permit, but is also likely to fall over. It rises above a sunken barge.

Floods Threaten Southern Valley; Army Keeps Watch

HANFORD (AP) — The Southern San Joequin Valley neared a state of emergency yesterday as water began washing over the banks of the area's two major river systems.

The rainy season ended more than two months ago, but the Kings and San Joaquin rivers reached flood stages this week as melting snow from the Sierra Nevada began filling upstream flood control reservoirs.

The reservoirs are on the lower slopes of the towering Sierra Nevada range that borders the valley on the east.

The lower Coast Range forms the western border of the long, flat, agriculturally rich valley.

Population in the threatened areas is sparse.

The San Joaquin River eventually winds north to the delta in central California and drains into San Francisco Bay.

The Kings River drains into Kings and Fresno counties. In normal water years its flow is diverted for irrigation and any surplus percolates into the ground.

This year the river volume has more than tripled. The excess has been diverted to Tulare Lake Basin to the south.

The basin, usually dry, now contains more than one million acre feet of water and covers nearly 90,000 acres of prime farm land.

Waters flowing over the banks of the Kings now threaten to inundate another 50,000 to 60,000 acres of farmland.

Volunteer crews have been on duty 24 hours daily shoring up levees.

Officials say they have a 50-50 chance of containing the water without further damage.

"We're holding our own," said Frank Irwin, administrative officer of the Kings County Public Works Department.

"But if Pine Flat Dam goes over the top, there is big trouble." The dam, the Kings River upstream control point, has a capacity of 1,024,000 acre feet.

Storage yesterday stood at 984,343 feet and was rapidly rising.

Deputies Halt Bolinas Center Rock Dance

A rock dance at the Bolinas Community Center, attended by more than 250 youths, some from as far away as the East Bay, was stopped last night after some of the youths refused to quiet down when warned by Marin County sheriff's deputies.

Deputy Richard Russell said he received complaints from Bolinas residents that music from the dance could be heard for blocks around.

When he arrived, he said, "quite a few" teen-agers were milling in the street, some drinking and others just getting some fresh air.

Most cooperated when he and the 10 other deputies called to the scene asked those outside to disperse but some started calling names and throwing rocks.

When the rock throwing started, Russell said he asked those in charge of the dance to shut it down, which they did immediately.

During the disturbance, he said, a small butane gas line connected to the building accidentally was broken, causing unfounded rumors that the downtown streets were filled with gas.

Tobrianders, Kwakiutl Hold Fete

By BRUCE COLEMAN

Male "Trobrianders" in white feather headresses passed among "westerners" on the College of Marin campus in Kentfield yesterday and frightened them occasionally with wild yells.

Girls in flowered bras and grass skirts moved in and out under a grove of trees carrying slices of fresh fruit and glasses of punch.

"Kwakiutl Indians" stood by their hand-built longhouse with its symbol of a bullhead fish on the front prepared for a potlatch.

The whole affair was a festival climaxing an experiment in a cultural anthropology course in which students made thorough studies of two far distant peoples — the Trobriand Islanders who live off eastern New Guinea and the Kwakiutl Indians who live on Vancouver Island, B.C.

All semester, both groups of students researched their peoples and reproduced authentic clothing, houses, beads, pottery.

They also have done skits re-enacting marriage, garden magic and shamanistic curing ceremonies. They have also portrayed funeral and puberty rites. Some of the ceremonies were enacted yesterday.

The two cultures were chosen, student Mary Mohler said, because of their great differences. While the Trobrianders are much more isolated and have had few visitors, the Kwakiutls have felt the invasion of the western culture since 1700 and, hence, have become quite "dissipated" as a people.

"Getting into this required understanding the salient parts of the culture," said a feathered Trobriander, Jerry Lannigan. "We had to find these things (cultural aspects). We felt like Trobrianders."

Grass-skirted Ronnie DePasquale declared that when students did the skits they felt as if they were living in the respective culture.

"You get into this and you really see how deep these older cultures are. If we could grasp this idea," she continued. "we could get off the thing of Americans wanting everyone to be entirely like ourselves."

The Trobrianders are known for putting down their mothers-in-law and neighbors.

The Kwakiutls, who build longhouses and fishing boats, are known for their potlatch. This is a challenge between two chiefs where one challenger tries to improve his image by destroying as much of his own property as he can. Sometimes this property is blankets which Kwakiutls wear in the winter. In the summer they wear cedar bark wrap-arounds.

A source book, Bronislaw Malinowski's "Argonauts of the Western Pacific," wasn't too much help for fashion, reported Miss DePasquale. "But," she said, "they don't wear much anyway."

Other students made beads and student ceremicist Gabriel Perez turned out clay cooking pots at the college. Students built both a longhouse and a yam house in as authentic fashion as possible from their source books plus a Kwakiutl yam garden and a fishing dock suspended by ropes from a tree over Corte Madera Creek.

Dave Roscoe, who tended a roasting pig, said students started cooking it at 8 p.m. Thursday and the beast caught fire twice.

Anthropology teacher Diane Wickstrom, a geranium wreath around her hair, also stayed up all night with the pig. She reported she was "bushed" but she felt the experiment was highly successful.

Police Charge Marijuana Sale

A Petaluma man was held today on suspicion of marijuana possession following his arrest on a downtown street after a passing officer noticed an alleged purchase of the narcotic.

Officer Stanley Wells reported sighting the alleged "buy" as he cruised Fourth Street about 10:40 p.m. yesterday. He turned around and confronted two men on the sidewalk near a pool hall.

Wells said he found a vial of vegetable matter resembling marijuana and three hand-rolled cigarettes, also suspected marijuana, on Harlan E. Osborne, 22, 1297 Magnolia Avenue.

Osborne was arrested and transferred to Sonoma County Jail where he was held on $5,000 bail. The second man was not arrested.

Petaluman Dies Of Bullet Wound

A Petaluma man was found dead of a gunshot wound to the head in the bedroom of his home yesterday. Police said the wound was apparently self-inflicted.

Sgt. William Reed said a neighbor heard a shot from the home of Howard Lloyd Woolsey, 44, and called police. No notes were found at the home at 44 Sixth Street, police said.

Further details were not immediately available.

Floods Threaten Southern Valley; Army Keeps Watch

HANFORD (AP) — The Southern San Joequin Valley neared a state of emergency yesterday as water began washing over the banks of the area's two major river systems.

The rainy season ended more than two months ago, but the Kings and San Joaquin rivers reached flood stages this week as melting snow from the Sierra Nevada began filling upstream flood control reservoirs.

The reservoirs are on the lower slopes of the towering Sierra Nevada range that borders the valley on the east.

The lower Coast Range forms the western border of the long, flat, agriculturally rich valley.

Population in the threatened areas is sparse.

The San Joaquin River eventually winds north to the delta in central California and drains into San Francisco Bay.

The Kings River drains into Kings and Fresno counties. In normal water years its flow is diverted for irrigation and any surplus percolates into the ground.

This year the river volume has more than tripled. The excess has been diverted to Tulare Lake Basin to the south.

The basin, usually dry, now contains more than one million acre feet of water and covers nearly 90,000 acres of prime farm land.

Waters flowing over the banks of the Kings now threaten to inundate another 50,000 to 60,000 acres of farmland.

Volunteer crews have been on duty 24 hours daily shoring up levees.

Officials say they have a 50-50 chance of containing the water without further damage.

"We're holding our own," said Frank Irwin, administrative officer of the Kings County Public Works Department.

"But if Pine Flat Dam goes over the top, there is big trouble." The dam, the Kings River upstream control point, has a capacity of 1,024,000 acre feet.

Storage yesterday stood at 984,343 feet and was rapidly rising.

Police Charge Marijuana Sale

A Petaluma man was held today on suspicion of marijuana possession following his arrest on a downtown street after a passing officer noticed an alleged purchase of the narcotic.

Officer Stanley Wells reported sighting the alleged "buy" as he cruised Fourth Street about 10:40 p.m. yesterday. He turned around and confronted two men on the sidewalk near a pool hall.

Wells said he found a vial of vegetable matter resembling marijuana and three hand-rolled cigarettes, also suspected marijuana, on Harlan E. Osborne, 22, 1297 Magnolia Avenue.

Osborne was arrested and transferred to Sonoma County Jail where he was held on $5,000 bail. The second man was not arrested.

Petaluman Dies Of Bullet Wound

A Petaluma man was found dead of a gunshot wound to the head in the bedroom of his home yesterday. Police said the wound was apparently self-inflicted.

Sgt. William Reed said a neighbor heard a shot from the home of Howard Lloyd Woolsey, 44, and called police. No notes were found at the home at 44 Sixth Street, police said.

Further details were not immediately available.

Declarer At Notrump Contract Sometimes Safe On Short Suit

When you're the declarer at a notrump contract you usually try to develop the longest suit in the combined hands. This custom does not have the force of law; sometimes you're safe if you start on a shorter suit.

COUNTED

East put up the nine of spades at the first trick to force out South's queen. South counted his tricks and saw that he needed four tricks in clubs and diamonds combined.

Declarer could get his four tricks at once if the club finesse worked. Moreover, the clubs were the longest suit in the North-South hands, but South came a cropper when he led a heart to dummy and returned the queen of clubs for a finesse.

West took the king of clubs and returned a spade, setting up East's suit. Now when South eventually led a diamond, East took the ace of diamonds and the rest of his spades, defeating the contract.

WRONG SUIT

South should enter dummy with a heart at the second trick but then should lead a diamond rather than a club. If East takes the ace of diamonds and leads spades, South refuses one spade trick, and the East hand is then dead. If East ducks the first diamond, South takes the king and then goes after the clubs to get his nine tricks in perfect safety.

South would be safe even if West had the ace of diamonds and captured the king. No matter how the diamonds were divided, the defenders could take only four diamond tricks at most. In this case East would surely have the king of clubs for his opening bid, and the club finesse would eventually assure the contract.

ANSWER: Pass.

The hand is not quite worth an opening bid in first or second position. It is worth an opening bid of one spade in third position, after the first two players have passed.

Sharp Increase

THE HAGUE (UPI)—Credit on passenger cars in Holland rose almost 50 per cent in 1968 to a total of about 1.4 billion guilders ($390 million), according to the National Statistics Agency.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, June 7, the 158th day of 1969 with 207 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Saturn. The evening stars are Mars and Jupiter.

On this day in history:

In 1864 delegates meeting in Baltimore nominated Abraham Lincoln and Andrew Johnson to head the Republican presidential ticket.

In 1933 Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany signed a 10-year Peace Pact.

In 1939 King George VI and his queen became the first British monarchs to visit the United States.

In 1948 Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower became President of Columbia University.

A thought for the day: Ralph Waldo Emerson said: "Beauty without grace is the hook without the bait."

Barbecue Warning For The Summer

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — If you want food barbecued this summer, make sure the cooking is done outside.

State health officials warn that utilizing open flame broiling or barbecueing devices indoors could cause asphyxiation. Charcoal, they warn, generates large amounts of carbon monoxide.

On Increase

OSLO (UPI)—Liquor law violations brought fines to 1,656 Norwegians in 1968, an increase of 9 per cent over 1967. The offenses included sale of moonshine and smuggling of hard liquor from abroad.

New Hard Look At Tax-Exempt Status Of Churches

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

A growin gnumber of budget-pinched cities and states are taking a harder, hungry look at old American tradition—the tax-exempt status of the churches.

In at least a dozen cases, steps recently have been taken, or are under consideration, to require churches to pay levies for certain municipal services or on some kinds of church property, an Associated Press survey shows.

As state and local governments hunt new sources of revenue to meet swollen budget demands, the indications point toward tightening restrictions on religious exemptions. Some aspects of federal exemptions allowed religious organizations also are under review in Congress, particularly the provision enabling church-owned businesses to avoid the 50 per cent tax on profits.

An end to this exclusion has been recommended by national church bodies themselves, including Protestant, Orthodox and Roman Catholic representatives.

On the state and local scenes, too, many churchmen have supported moves for taxes on religious properties not devoted to specific religious uses, or to pay for certain government services. Some churches have chipped in voluntarily.

In other areas, however, the proposed tax changes have caused considerable controversy, and some court fights.

The question, "Should the churches be taxed?" is no longer the key issue, says an official denominational journal, the Episcopalian, adding that the issue has now become, "What kind of taxes should the churches pay?"

In Nashville, Tenn., a center of many national religious agencies, the metropolitan tax assessor last week issued a ruling revoking the exemption from property taxes on facilities of six major agencies, including:

The Southern Baptist Sunday School Board, the Methodist Publishing House, the Methodist Board of Evangelism, the Seventh Day Adventist Southern Publishing Association, the National Baptist Publishing Board and offices and National Baptist Convention, U.S.A.

"We will appeal," said Dr. James L. Sullivan, executive secretary of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board, the denomination's publishing arm.

In Oregon, where parsonages and various other church properties aready are taxed, the House of Representatives this year voted to subject churches themselves to 25 per cent of the going property tax to pay for fire and police protection, but a Senate committee killed the bill.

Catholic spokesmen opposed it, while Protestants offered no testimony.

In Washington State, legislation was introduced this year to tax church property, but it failed to clear a committee. The United Church of Olympia, Wash., gave the city $200 last fall as equivalent of taxes on the pastor's residence and budgeted $350 for the same purpose this year.

"We believe that all tax free property not used for worship should be on the tax roles says the pastor, Rev. Maurice Haehlen.

Altogether, religious assets in the United States have been estimated at $80 billion, in land, buildings and securities, most of it tax exempt.

Other untaxed property, of private educational and charitable institutions, amounts to even more, an estimated $135 billion, with government real estate bringing the total to an estimated $325 billion.

Studies indicate tax free property has increased in three decades from 12 per cent of the national total to 30 per cent of it.

In Boston, with its concentration of university and church facilities, about half the real estate is tax exempt. Mayor Kevin H. White has pleaded for change, to ease the strain on municipal resources.

Amid rising criticism of the situation, Massachusetts legislative bills for some form of tax on exempt properties this year were consolidated in a resolution to broaden the scope of a special commission named to draw up a master tax plan.

In Virginia, the Legislature has just completed constitutional revisions, subject to final action by a 1970 session before being submitted for voter registration, allowing localities to impose service charges on exempt groups.

The changes would permit levies on churches, foundations and other exempt institutions for police, fire department, garbage and other services.

In Kansas, the 1969 Legislature repealed a law granting tax exemption on buildings used as parsonages or dwellings for ministers.

Major Protestant denominations, through the Kansas Council of Churches, favored the change, while the Roman Catholic Church voiced some opposition, maintaining priests use their rectories as offices, as well as for living quarters.

Kansas courts also have interpreted the state tax exemption provisions to be limited to facilities used exclusively for religion, and not such properties as church-owned book stores and parking lots rented out for income.

In Florida, a bill is before the legislature restricting exemptions more narrowly, with automatic religious exemptions confined to the house of worship burial grounds and one rectory per church. Any other church property would be exempt only on evidence of its specific religious usage.

In Phoenix, Ariz., the Maricopa county assessor, Kenneth Kunes, recently ordered all church parsonages placed on the county tax rolls, and is investigating all church property with the aim of taxing any of it not used specifically for religious purposes.

The move touched off protests from some churches. Kunes says he understands the Catholic Church plans a court challenge to the parsonage tax.

He said "A very pious layman could have as much religious activity in his home as a minister in a parsonage. Therefore, they're not exempt."

The Santa Fe, N.M., county assessor also is pressing an effort, now in court, to tax church property not used solely for religion. Recent studies indicated such holdings valued in the millions of dollars.

Studies into property tax exemptions are under way in Minnesota, Idaho, Vermont, Pennsylvania and the city of Philadelphia.

In authorizing a broad two-year study, the Minnesota Legislature said, "Because of the change in circumstances through passage of time, or because of the need for increased revenue for state and local governments, such exemptions should be discontinued."

Some Minnesota church groups have started making volunteer payments in lieu of taxes for municipal services, as have a few others in New Jersey, New York City and elsewhere.

In Milwaukee, Wis., the city recently enacted an ordinance to impose a sewer fee on tax-exempt organizations, including churches, with the fee estimated at $8.78 per $1.000 of assessed valuation. But amid a wave of criticism, start of the plan was deferred until next January 1.

A ministerial group agreed "it is fair for churches to pay for this service, and perhaps other services," but argued that the charge should be based on actual usage rather than assessed valuation.

In Colorado, the state for several years has allowed taxation of church-owned property not used for specific religious purposes. Under a special scale, church-owned clergy residences are exempt, if their assessed value does not exceed $6,000, or about $20,000 sale value.

The Colorado Legislature also passed a bill specifically exempting homes for older people, if their incomes are near the poverty level, but subjecting other such homes, including those owned by churches, to taxes.

A Presbyterian-owned home in the Denver suburbs, where residents have substantial incomes, was ordered put on the tax rolls last year by the Colorado Supreme Court.

In New York City, where about a third of the real estate is tax exempt, proposals are being studied for enacting fees in lieu of taxes on exempt property owners to help pay for city services.

Argentine Bishops Advocate Reforms

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Argentina's traditionally conservative Roman Catholic council of bishops has issued its first document advocating reform.

The 18-page declaratiion was drafted at a recent four-day, closed-door conference of the nation's 70 bishops. They sought to apply to Argentina the principles of church modernization and social reform adopted by the synod of Latin American bishops last year in Columbia.

For nearly a year, more than 300 young, openly rebellious priests have been accusing both the church hierarchy and Argentina's military government of being out of touch with the nation's social and economic ills.

30 RESIGN

In march 30 priests resigned in the archdiocese of Rosario, the nation's second largest city. They accused Rosario's archbishop Guillermo Bollati, of paying too little attention to the problems of the poor and refusing to discuss these problems with his parish priests.

Both sides have sought the arbitration of Pope Paul VI. Archbishop Bollatti has been in Rome awaiting an audience.

The council of bishops declaration, although generally mild and abstract in its advocacy of reform, alluded to the Rosario conflict. It stated the need to "institutionalize church dialogue between the bishops and the priests and between the priests and the people." It also referred to the "changing mentalities" of rebellious priests.

The document declared that "after a long, historical process which is still going on, our country has acquired an unfair structure. Freedom must be sought because there is oppression in all sectors: the judicial, political, economic and social."

SOME PRAISE

Nevertheless, implied criticism of President Juan Carols Ongania's military regime was offset by praise for some Ongania policies.

The bishops, for example, called for the community participation approach to solving the nation's ills. Under this approach, Gen. Ongania wants to create community advisory groups — made up of representatives of each segment of society — to counsel the government. The president's critics claim Ongania really wants the advisory groups to replace political parties, which were banned with the closing of Congress after the 1966 coup.

Antonio Cardinal Caggiano, primate of the Argentine church, says constitutional, elected government should be restored as soon as possible. Ongania has stated that "elections are still far in the future."

The 80-year-old cardinal said priests should keep out of politics but he called for the legalization of political parties and commented that Argentines are capable of electing their leaders freely.

Cameras Need Special Permit

LONDON (AP) -- American and other tourists will no longer be able to use their cameras inside Westminster Abbey unless they have special permission from the Abbey's receiver-general.

During an experimental year they were allowed to take any pictures they liked, but the situtation got out of hand when some climbed on seats and monuments.

As one Abbey official put it, the interior of the Abbey sometimes looked "like a thunderstorm" from the popping of flash bulps, and worshippers were disturbed.

Soul Questioned

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Turning up paradoxical results, a survey of adult Helsinki residents found that 75 per cent of them believe that God exists, and 74 per cent believe in life after death, but only 52 per cent accept the idea that man has a soul.

The guest minister will preach at the 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m. services.

Roof Being Sold For New Church

TITCHFIELD, England (AP) — Rev. Norman Miller, vicar of St. Peter's, Titchfield, is selling off the roof of his 13th Century church to raise funds for a new covering.

As workmen take down the old oak beams, twisted with age and damp, the vicar and a few helpers cut the timbers into small blocks which are polished and mounted with plaques giving a brief history of the church.

Then they are sold at one pound ($2.40) each to help raise the 8,000 pounds ($19,200) needed to give the church a new roof. The blocks can be used as paperweights, bookends or doorstops. "We hope a few American tourists will come our way," says Vicar Miller.

Delegates Named For Conference

Fred Sumner will represent the Mill Valley Methodist as lay delegate at the 121st session of the California conference of the Methodist Church in Stockton beginning Wednesday.

Named as alternate to the four-day session is Scott Nelson. The conference will be held on the University of the Pacific campus.

Novatan Is New Leader Of Kol Shofar

David B. Block of Novato has been elected president of Congregation Kol Shofar to succeed Merrill Ring.

Serving with Block will be Dr. Robert Pedrin, first vice president; Philip Ruby, second vice president; Max Chodes, treasurer, and Harry Yaffee, corresponding and recording secretary.

Board members include Robert S. Gottesman, Irving Taznikov, Phil Sennette, Sid Koalkin and Dr. Howard Lang.

Also serving as part of the congregation's administration will be Mrs. Barbara Babow, newly elected president of the Kol Shofar Sisterhood.

Rabbi Jacob Milgrom has also been retained as spiritual leader. He is currently on a tour of Israel.

It was also announced at the recent annual meeting that the weekly Sabbath summer worship service will be held at the regular 8:30 Friday meeting time with lecturers to be announced at a later date.

500 Resolutions Due At Convention

DENVER (LC) — The 48th general convention of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, convening here July 11-18, will consider 500 resolutions, about half of which deal with the controversial issue of church relations.

Some 1,000 voting delegates, 600 advisers and 1,000 visitors are expected to attend the week-long session of 2.8 million-member denomination which, some observers predict, "might make minor ecclesiastical history by its decisions on church relationships."

A 50-Year Usher

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Charles H. Jokerst has been usher at the Old Cathedral on the St. Louis waterfront for 50 years. Now 74 years old, Jokerst says: "I hope I can serve 10 or 20 years more."

New Hard Look At Tax-Exempt Status Of Churches

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

A growin gnumber of budget-pinched cities and states are taking a harder, hungry look at old American tradition—the tax-exempt status of the churches.

In at least a dozen cases, steps recently have been taken, or are under consideration, to require churches to pay levies for certain municipal services or on some kinds of church property, an Associated Press survey shows.

As state and local governments hunt new sources of revenue to meet swollen budget demands, the indications point toward tightening restrictions on religious exemptions. Some aspects of federal exemptions allowed religious organizations also are under review in Congress, particularly the provision enabling church-owned businesses to avoid the 50 per cent tax on profits.

An end to this exclusion has been recommended by national church bodies themselves, including Protestant, Orthodox and Roman Catholic representatives.

On the state and local scenes, too, many churchmen have supported moves for taxes on religious properties not devoted to specific religious uses, or to pay for certain government services. Some churches have chipped in voluntarily.

In other areas, however, the proposed tax changes have caused considerable controversy, and some court fights.

The question, "Should the churches be taxed?" is no longer the key issue, says an official denominational journal, the Episcopalian, adding that the issue has now become, "What kind of taxes should the churches pay?"

In Nashville, Tenn., a center of many national religious agencies, the metropolitan tax assessor last week issued a ruling revoking the exemption from property taxes on facilities of six major agencies, including:

The Southern Baptist Sunday School Board, the Methodist Publishing House, the Methodist Board of Evangelism, the Seventh Day Adventist Southern Publishing Association, the National Baptist Publishing Board and offices and National Baptist Convention, U.S.A.

"We will appeal," said Dr. James L. Sullivan, executive secretary of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board, the denomination's publishing arm.

In Oregon, where parsonages and various other church properties aready are taxed, the House of Representatives this year voted to subject churches themselves to 25 per cent of the going property tax to pay for fire and police protection, but a Senate committee killed the bill.

Catholic spokesmen opposed it, while Protestants offered no testimony.

In Washington State, legislation was introduced this year to tax church property, but it failed to clear a committee. The United Church of Olympia, Wash., gave the city $200 last fall as equivalent of taxes on the pastor's residence and budgeted $350 for the same purpose this year.

"We believe that all tax free property not used for worship should be on the tax roles says the pastor, Rev. Maurice Haehlen.

Altogether, religious assets in the United States have been estimated at $80 billion, in land, buildings and securities, most of it tax exempt.

Other untaxed property, of private educational and charitable institutions, amounts to even more, an estimated $135 billion, with government real estate bringing the total to an estimated $325 billion.

Studies indicate tax free property has increased in three decades from 12 per cent of the national total to 30 per cent of it.

In Boston, with its concentration of university and church facilities, about half the real estate is tax exempt. Mayor Kevin H. White has pleaded for change, to ease the strain on municipal resources.

Amid rising criticism of the situation, Massachusetts legislative bills for some form of tax on exempt properties this year were consolidated in a resolution to broaden the scope of a special commission named to draw up a master tax plan.

In Virginia, the Legislature has just completed constitutional revisions, subject to final action by a 1970 session before being submitted for voter registration, allowing localities to impose service charges on exempt groups.

The changes would permit levies on churches, foundations and other exempt institutions for police, fire department, garbage and other services.

In Kansas, the 1969 Legislature repealed a law granting tax exemption on buildings used as parsonages or dwellings for ministers.

Major Protestant denominations, through the Kansas Council of Churches, favored the change, while the Roman Catholic Church voiced some opposition, maintaining priests use their rectories as offices, as well as for living quarters.

Kansas courts also have interpreted the state tax exemption provisions to be limited to facilities used exclusively for religion, and not such properties as church-owned book stores and parking lots rented out for income.

In Florida, a bill is before the legislature restricting exemptions more narrowly, with automatic religious exemptions confined to the house of worship burial grounds and one rectory per church. Any other church property would be exempt only on evidence of its specific religious usage.

In Phoenix, Ariz., the Maricopa county assessor, Kenneth Kunes, recently ordered all church parsonages placed on the county tax rolls, and is investigating all church property with the aim of taxing any of it not used specifically for religious purposes.

The move touched off protests from some churches. Kunes says he understands the Catholic Church plans a court challenge to the parsonage tax.

He said "A very pious layman could have as much religious activity in his home as a minister in a parsonage. Therefore, they're not exempt."

The Santa Fe, N.M., county assessor also is pressing an effort, now in court, to tax church property not used solely for religion. Recent studies indicated such holdings valued in the millions of dollars.

Studies into property tax exemptions are under way in Minnesota, Idaho, Vermont, Pennsylvania and the city of Philadelphia.

In authorizing a broad two-year study, the Minnesota Legislature said, "Because of the change in circumstances through passage of time, or because of the need for increased revenue for state and local governments, such exemptions should be discontinued."

Some Minnesota church groups have started making volunteer payments in lieu of taxes for municipal services, as have a few others in New Jersey, New York City and elsewhere.

In Milwaukee, Wis., the city recently enacted an ordinance to impose a sewer fee on tax-exempt organizations, including churches, with the fee estimated at $8.78 per $1.000 of assessed valuation. But amid a wave of criticism, start of the plan was deferred until next January 1.

A ministerial group agreed "it is fair for churches to pay for this service, and perhaps other services," but argued that the charge should be based on actual usage rather than assessed valuation.

In Colorado, the state for several years has allowed taxation of church-owned property not used for specific religious purposes. Under a special scale, church-owned clergy residences are exempt, if their assessed value does not exceed $6,000, or about $20,000 sale value.

The Colorado Legislature also passed a bill specifically exempting homes for older people, if their incomes are near the poverty level, but subjecting other such homes, including those owned by churches, to taxes.

A Presbyterian-owned home in the Denver suburbs, where residents have substantial incomes, was ordered put on the tax rolls last year by the Colorado Supreme Court.

In New York City, where about a third of the real estate is tax exempt, proposals are being studied for enacting fees in lieu of taxes on exempt property owners to help pay for city services.

A NEW LOOK

Argentine Bishops Advocate Reforms

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Argentina's traditionally conservative Roman Catholic council of bishops has issued its first document advocating reform.

The 18-page declaratiion was drafted at a recent four-day, closed-door conference of the nation's 70 bishops. They sought to apply to Argentina the principles of church modernization and social reform adopted by the synod of Latin American bishops last year in Columbia.

For nearly a year, more than 300 young, openly rebellious priests have been accusing both the church hierarchy and Argentina's military government of being out of touch with the nation's social and economic ills.

30 RESIGN

In march 30 priests resigned in the archdiocese of Rosario, the nation's second largest city. They accused Rosario's archbishop Guillermo Bollati, of paying too little attention to the problems of the poor and refusing to discuss these problems with his parish priests.

Both sides have sought the arbitration of Pope Paul VI. Archbishop Bollatti has been in Rome awaiting an audience.

The council of bishops declaration, although generally mild and abstract in its advocacy of reform, alluded to the Rosario conflict. It stated the need to "institutionalize church dialogue between the bishops and the priests and between the priests and the people." It also referred to the "changing mentalities" of rebellious priests.

The document declared that "after a long, historical process which is still going on, our country has acquired an unfair structure. Freedom must be sought because there is oppression in all sectors: the judicial, political, economic and social."

SOME PRAISE

Nevertheless, implied criticism of President Juan Carols Ongania's military regime was offset by praise for some Ongania policies.

The bishops, for example, called for the community participation approach to solving the nation's ills. Under this approach, Gen. Ongania wants to create community advisory groups — made up of representatives of each segment of society — to counsel the government. Novatan Is New Leader Of Kol Shofar

David B. Block of Novato has been elected president of Congregation Kol Shofar to succeed Merrill Ring.

Serving with Block will be Dr. Robert Pedrin, first vice president; Philip Ruby, second vice president; Max Chodes, treasurer, and Harry Yaffee, corresponding and recording secretary.

Board members include Robert S. Gottesman, Irving Taznikov, Phil Sennette, Sid Koalkin and Dr. Howard Lang.

Also serving as part of the congregation's administration will be Mrs. Barbara Babow, newly elected president of the Kol Shofar Sisterhood.

Rabbi Jacob Milgrom has also been retained as spiritual leader. He is currently on a tour of Israel.

It was also announced at the recent annual meeting that the weekly Sabbath summer worship service will be held at the regular 8:30 Friday meeting time with lecturers to be announced at a later date.

500 Resolutions Due At Convention

DENVER (LC) — The 48th general convention of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, convening here July 11-18, will consider 500 resolutions, about half of which deal with the controversial issue of church relations.

Some 1,000 voting delegates, 600 advisers and 1,000 visitors are expected to attend the week-long session of 2.8 million-member denomination which, some observers predict, "might make minor ecclesiastical history by its decisions on church relationships."

A 50-Year Usher

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Charles H. Jokerst has been usher at the Old Cathedral on the St. Louis waterfront for 50 years. Now 74 years old, Jokerst says: "I hope I can serve 10 or 20 years more."

Namath Leaves Door Wide Open For Quick Comeback

By MIKE RATHET

NEW YORK (AP) — Did Joe Namath really mean it?

Yes, Joe Namath really meant it when he said he was quitting.

But because he meant it when he said it doesn't mean that Namath won't be back taking the snap from center, the familiar No. 12 on his green and white Jet jersey stretched over his slouched shoulders, when the 1969 pro football season begins.

That Namath meant what he said was apparent yesterday when the shaggy-haired quarterback of the New York Jets, tears running down the cheeks that have so often been bussed by adoring mini-skirted girls, announced he was quitting pro football rather than sell his interest in an East Side cafe frequented by gamblers.

But Donn Clendenon announced his retirement, and changed his mind. Ken Harrelson announced his retirement, and changed his mind. Maury Wills announced his retirement, and changed his mind. Joe Namath announced his retirement, and can change his mind.

Namath, himself, left the door open when he was asked following his announcement at the Bachelors III night spot, center of the dispute, whether he thought his differences with Pro Football Commissioner Pete Rozelle could be resolved.

"I hope so," said Namath. "The last thing I want to do is quit football."

And what could make Namath change his mind? His loyalty to his teammates.

Namath's hand may already have been pushed in that direction by the quick support he received from three other members of the Jets — splitend George Sauer Jr., tight end Pete Lammons and defensive back Jim Hudson.

All three, first-stringers on the team that stunned the pro football world by upsetting the Baltimore Colts 16-7 in the Super Bowl less than five months ago, said they would join Namath in retirement.

But while Namath already has his first $400,000 contract in the bank, a string of lucrative drive-in restaurants and a possible movie career awaiting him, Sauer, Lammons and Hudson would be far less able to withstand the loss of their football salaries.

Realizing this in the days of lessening tension that lie ahead, it would be fully in Namath's character for his loyalty to those three teammates to override other considerations and lead him to renounce his retirement so they can renounce theirs.

Namath indicated his intense loyalty to his teammates following the Super Bowl victory over the Colts when he speculated that his ailing legs might force him to quit, but emphasized that any decision he would make along those lines would have to take his teammates into consideration.

"There would be," he said at the time, "a sense of letting them down if I quit."

In order to resolve his differences with Rozelle, however, Namath must divest himself of his interest in the swinging restaurant that apparently attracted a mixed clientele of fresh-faced girls and somewhat less fresh-faced gamblers.

"If he wants to reconsider," said Rozelle, "I'll be happy to talk to him privately. I'd like to see him play football very much. I was surprised at the news from the press conference because I thought last night (Thursday) that he had agreed to sell."

Rozelle had issued an ultima-

Phil Hurler Awed By McCovey Power

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pitcher Rick Wise of the Philadelphia Phillies, well qualified to speak on the subject, paid the ultimate compliment to Willie McCovey of the San Francisco Giants.

"Most sluggers are not good hitters, but McCovey is," Wise said after McCovey smashed a pair of tape-measure home runs off him last night as the Giants blanked the Phils 4-0.

"I would say McCovey is the most respected hitter in baseball right now," Wise added. "He's so strong that even when you keep the ball away from him, he can still hit it out of the park."

McCovey's first homer missed by a few feet of being the first ball ever to clear the bleachers in right field. It traveled an estimated 440 feet.

Willie's second homer went over the right center field fence and traveled 430 feet.

He now has 10 homers in the last 12 games and 19 for the season — high in the major leagues.

He was asked if he ever hit a ball farther than his first homer.

"I really don't know. As soon as I see the ball go out of the park, I stop watching," McCovey said.

"I have probably hit longer homers. It depends on lots of things like the wind," he added.

The Giants' first three hits last night off Wise were homers. Willie Mays got the other, a 410-footer over the center field fence. It was the 594th of Mays' major league career and seventh of the 1969 season.

The homer barrage made it easy for pitcher Gaylord Perry to post his eighth victory of the year. Perry pitched his second shutout of the season, both against the Phils. He allowed only two hits until the ninth inning, when the Phils added three singles but couldn't score. The Giant infield saved the shutout with a double play.

Perry hasn't set any victory goal for the season. "I would like to win 20 games again. Any pitcher would. But what I want to do most is pitch every four days and help the team as much as I can."

It was the third straight for the Giants and the sixth straight loss for the Phils.

Giants' Clyde King Lays Down The Law

Clyde King is sure the Giants are going to stop giving away ball games. He isn't going to tolerate it any longer. He so told the team in a closed-door clubhouse meeting at which the rookie manager laid down the law.

"I named names and cited misplays that cost us ball games," King told baseball writers traveling with the team on the recent road trip. "How many have we given away in the 8th and 9th innings? Eight? That's my count."

King called the writers into his office when the club reached Montreal. He briefed them in a 30-minute re-evaluation of the club, a re-evaluation based on his own observations since spring training. He acknowledged he had been guided by reports and opinions of others.

"Now I have my own opinions who the best players are," he said. "And we are going with our best men. We won in St. Louis and Chicago on our last road trip with the kids — no I don't like that description of them. They are our young subs, our bench."

Henderson Moved To Third

It was immediately after this briefing that Ken Henderson was moved from the outfield to third base, the ninth man to be used at third this season. The move of Henderson to third had been contemplated a couple of weeks. It held in abeyance, however, until Jim Davenport jammed his right shoulder in a head first dive back to first base on an attempted pickoff play during the Met series sweep of the Giants last weekend in New York.

When Willie Mays is resting in future games, Henderson will return to the outfield and Tito Fuentes will play third. There were other shifts announced by King such as Dave Marshall for Jim Ray Hart in left field and Don Mason for Ron Hunt at second base. Jack Hiatt is going to be the catcher for the time being because Hiatt has impressed him most.

Willie McCovey, of course, remains at first base. King not only praised McCovey's bat for keeping the Giants from falling out of sight but handed the palm to Stretch for "bearing down and hustling in every game."

He also praised Bobby Bonds for constantly "bearing down." Bonds will continue to shift from right to center when Mays is resting and Henderson will take Bonds' place in right.

'Our Pitching Let Us Down'

King reported that the overall feeling of the club was "Our pitching let us down." But he made an exception of Mike McCormick's recent efforts and he also predicted Rich Robertson is going to become a mentneedsmore experience.
winning pitcher in the major leagues but at the mo-

As for the relief pitching King made no effort to hide his disappointment. "I've been disappointed, very disappointed."

But nobody is in a state of despair on the ball club. Aside from all other reasons why the club has had its ups-and-downs, the main one may be traced to the absence of Juan Marichal from the starting rotation.

Marichal, a winner of only one game in the past five weeks, is expected to return to duty this weekend in Candlestick Park. Whether he will be effective depends on his left rib cage from which a muscle tore loose when Juan sneezed in the Astrodome. There now is a walnut sized lump where the tear occurred.

A's 'Kid' Dazzles Detroit

DETROIT AP) — "With a name like Lauzerique he would pitch every day in Montreal," someone quipped.

But George Lauzerique isn't French. And he doesn't play for the Expos.

And although he won't pitch everyday, he looked fully capable of joining the starting rotation as he pitched the Oakland Athletics to a 5-3 win over the Detroit Tigers last night.

It was only his second major league start, but it was his second straight win since being called up from Des Moines of the American Association May 28.

"That boy dazzled us with his motion," said Tiger Manager Mayo Smith.

CAMPY STARS

Bert Campaneris ripped three leadoff hits and scored three times and rookie catcher Gene Tenace hit his first major league homer for the decisive dun in the victory. Norm Cash hit a two-run homer and Bill Freehan a solo blast for the Tigers.

In today's game, Chuck Dobson, 5-4, faced Tiger ace Denny McLain, 8-5.

"It was a big thrill to win against the Tigers," said the 21-year-old Lauzerique, who was born in Cuba but spent most of his life in New York City.

"It was a special thrill to win against Mr. Wilson, Mr. Kaline, Mr. Freehan, and all the others," he said admiringly of members of the defending World Champion Tigers.

RESPECTS STARS

"They are stars and you have to respect them, but I wasn't scared of them."

Lauzerique did not stick with the Athletics team that started the season. The coaching staff wanted him to be a reliever but he felt he should be a starting pitcher.

"It was a disappointment when they sent me down (to Des Moines)," he said. "But I had a 5-0 record down there and was doing well and that must have convinced them."

In his debut last week he gave up seven hits and one run in a victory over Cleveland.

"I just hope I can keep it up," Lauzerique said. "I want to help the club and help myself."

But he doesn't think his two performances will make him a part of the regular starting rotation.

"I'm just an extra man right now," he said modestly. "Jim Nash has a sore shoulder and I'm just taking his place."

Cash's two-run home run in the eighth brought Rollie Fingers in relief of Lauzerique, but the Athletics never appeared in any real danger.

Cage Great Lucas Reported Retiring

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Enquirer says it has learned that Jerry Lucas, Cincinnati Royals forward and the top rebounder in National Basketball Association history, plans to retire shortly and devote full-time to his business interests.

Lucas, 29, has two years remaining on a five-year contract with the Royals. His salary is in the $65,000-a-year bracket.

He was not available for comment early today.

The newspaper said in its Saturday morning editions Lucas has been expanding his restaurant operations here and other enterprises in the past few years and recently merged his business with the Cook Coffee Co. of Cleveland.

"Under terms of the agreement," the newspaper said, "Lucas must retire from sports and spend 100 per cent of his energies on the running of the various businesses that will result from the merger."

'NAME' PARTNERS

The Enquirer said it understood that former jockey Eddie Arcaro, Green Bap Packer quarterback Bart Starr and former baseball star Mickey Mantle "will be involved with Lucas under the new management—although the exact nature of their involvement is not clear."

Lucas has been in the pro ranks for six years, all with Cincinnati, and was voted to the NBA All-Star team each of the six years.

Marin Athletes Fail to Qualify For State Finals

Five Marin County Athletic League athletes who earned the right to compete in this weekend's California High School Track and Field Championships in Los Angeles failed yesterday to qualify for today's finals.

Entered from Marin were the Redwood High School mile relay team composed of Rob Williams, Todd Norris, Tom Estudillo and Tom Poppin; Norris in the 880-yard run and Tamalpais High's Luther Brown in the 220-yard dash.

Only the first three finishers in each heat qualified for today's finals and neither of the Marin entries finished that high.

Movies Improve Brewer

MIDLOTHIAN, Ill. (AP) — Gay Brewer, who hasn't scored a regular tour victory since the 1967 Masters, says a refound putting strike is responsible for his lead going into today's third round in the $130,000 Western Golf Tournament.

"I've been in a kind of a slump for a year and a half," the pug-nosed pro said after shooting a second round 67 yesterday for 136 and a one-stroke lead over Frank Beard and a couple of non-winners, Dick Rhyan and Rocky Thompson.

"I really hadn't been playing that badly," he said. "But it was my play around the greens, my putting. Then I was watching some home movies of myself and I discovered what I was doing wrong on my putting.

GOOD SHAPE

"I was moving my head with the stroke. I corrected it just this week. Now I'm putting much better. I'm concentrating well, hitting my irons good. My whole game is in good shape."

And the home movie he watched?

"The 1967 Masters."

Beard, who opened with a 66, had to settle for a par 71 and was tied at 137 with Rhyan and Thompson, each with a 70. Ken Still had a 66 for a 138 and was alone at that figure.

150-MILE STOCK CAR HEADLINER AT SEARS

A 30-car field will battle for first place money tomorrow in the $12,000 Weibel 150-mile late model stock car race at Sears Point International Raceway in Sonoma County.

The NASCAR-sanctioned 60-lap race will start at 1:15 p.m. on the 12-turn 2.5-mile raceway circuit located near the intersections of Highways 37 and 121. Final qualifying will be held from 10:30 a.m. to noon.

Qualifying highlighted today's portion of the two-day program, sponsored by Weibel Champagne Vineyards.

Cost for tomorrow's race is $6 for adults, with children under 12 admitted free when accompanied by an adult. Paddock passes are available in spectator areas at $5 each.

"I really don't know. As soon as I see the ball go out of the park, I stop watching," McCovey said.

"I have probably hit longer homers. It depends on lots of things like the wind," he added.

The Giants' first three hits last night off Wise were homers. Willie Mays got the other, a 410-footer over the center field fence. It was the 594th of Mays' major league career and seventh of the 1969 season.

The homer barrage made it easy for pitcher Gaylord Perry to post his eighth victory of the year. Perry pitched his second shutout of the season, both against the Phils. He allowed only two hits until the ninth inning, when the Phils added three singles but couldn't score. The Giant infield saved the shutout with a double play.

Perry hasn't set any victory goal for the season. "I would like to win 20 games again. Any pitcher would. But what I want to do most is pitch every four days and help the team as much as I can."

It was the third straight for the Giants and the sixth straight loss for the Phils.

Giants' Clyde King Lays Down The Law

Clyde King is sure the Giants are going to stop giving away ball games. He isn't going to tolerate it any longer. He so told the team in a closed-door clubhouse meeting at which the rookie manager laid down the law.

"I named names and cited misplays that cost us ball games," King told baseball writers traveling with the team on the recent road trip. "How many have we given away in the 8th and 9th innings? Eight? That's my count."

King called the writers into his office when the club reached Montreal. He briefed them in a 30-minute re-evaluation of the club, a re-evaluation based on his own observations since spring training. He acknowledged he had been guided by reports and opinions of others.

"Now I have my own opinions who the best players are," he said. "And we are going with our best men. We won in St. Louis and Chicago on our last road trip with the kids — no I don't like that description of them. They are our young subs, our bench."

Henderson Moved To Third

It was immediately after this briefing that Ken Henderson was moved from the outfield to third base, the ninth man to be used at third this season. The move of Henderson to third had been contemplated a couple of weeks. It held in abeyance, however, until Jim Davenport jammed his right shoulder in a head first dive back to first base on an attempted pickoff play during the Met series sweep of the Giants last weekend in New York.

When Willie Mays is resting in future games, Henderson will return to the outfield and Tito Fuentes will play third. There were other shifts announced by King such as Dave Marshall for Jim Ray Hart in left field and Don Mason for Ron Hunt at second base. Jack Hiatt is going to be the catcher for the time being because Hiatt has impressed him most.

Willie McCovey, of course, remains at first base. King not only praised McCovey's bat for keeping the Giants from falling out of sight but handed the palm to Stretch for "bearing down and hustling in every game."

He also praised Bobby Bonds for constantly "bearing down." Bonds will continue to shift from right to center when Mays is resting and Henderson will take Bonds' place in right.

'Our Pitching Let Us Down'

King reported that the overall feeling of the club was "Our pitching let us down." But he made an exception of Mike McCormick's recent efforts and he also predicted Rich Robertson is going to become a mentneedsmore experience.
winning pitcher in the major leagues but at the mo-

As for the relief pitching King made no effort to hide his disappointment. "I've been disappointed, very disappointed."

But nobody is in a state of despair on the ball club. Aside from all other reasons why the club has had its ups-and-downs, the main one may be traced to the absence of Juan Marichal from the starting rotation.

Marichal, a winner of only one game in the past five weeks, is expected to return to duty this weekend in Candlestick Park. Whether he will be effective depends on his left rib cage from which a muscle tore loose when Juan sneezed in the Astrodome. There now is a walnut sized lump where the tear occurred.

A's 'Kid' Dazzles Detroit

DETROIT AP) — "With a name like Lauzerique he would pitch every day in Montreal," someone quipped.

But George Lauzerique isn't French. And he doesn't play for the Expos.

And although he won't pitch everyday, he looked fully capable of joining the starting rotation as he pitched the Oakland Athletics to a 5-3 win over the Detroit Tigers last night.

It was only his second major league start, but it was his second straight win since being called up from Des Moines of the American Association May 28.

"That boy dazzled us with his motion," said Tiger Manager Mayo Smith.

CAMPY STARS

Bert Campaneris ripped three leadoff hits and scored three times and rookie catcher Gene Tenace hit his first major league homer for the decisive dun in the victory. Norm Cash hit a two-run homer and Bill Freehan a solo blast for the Tigers.

In today's game, Chuck Dobson, 5-4, faced Tiger ace Denny McLain, 8-5.

"It was a big thrill to win against the Tigers," said the 21-year-old Lauzerique, who was born in Cuba but spent most of his life in New York City.

"It was a special thrill to win against Mr. Wilson, Mr. Kaline, Mr. Freehan, and all the others," he said admiringly of members of the defending World Champion Tigers.

RESPECTS STARS

"They are stars and you have to respect them, but I wasn't scared of them."

Lauzerique did not stick with the Athletics team that started the season. The coaching staff wanted him to be a reliever but he felt he should be a starting pitcher.

"It was a disappointment when they sent me down (to Des Moines)," he said. "But I had a 5-0 record down there and was doing well and that must have convinced them."

In his debut last week he gave up seven hits and one run in a victory over Cleveland.

"I just hope I can keep it up," Lauzerique said. "I want to help the club and help myself."

But he doesn't think his two performances will make him a part of the regular starting rotation.

"I'm just an extra man right now," he said modestly. "Jim Nash has a sore shoulder and I'm just taking his place."

Cash's two-run home run in the eighth brought Rollie Fingers in relief of Lauzerique, but the Athletics never appeared in any real danger.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE . . .

Mike Supinski, 2, follows in dad Ron's footsteps literally during a jog around the track at Tamalpais High School in Mill Valley. The Mill Valley youngster delighted members of the school's track team as he followed dad with surprising stamina and speed for such a little guy, although he did stop occasionally to toss a stray rock or detour through the empty grand stands.

Cage Great Lucas Reported Retiring

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Enquirer says it has learned that Jerry Lucas, Cincinnati Royals forward and the top rebounder in National Basketball Association history, plans to retire shortly and devote full-time to his business interests.

Lucas, 29, has two years remaining on a five-year contract with the Royals. His salary is in the $65,000-a-year bracket.

He was not available for comment early today.

The newspaper said in its Saturday morning editions Lucas has been expanding his restaurant operations here and other enterprises in the past few years and recently merged his business with the Cook Coffee Co. of Cleveland.

"Under terms of the agreement," the newspaper said, "Lucas must retire from sports and spend 100 per cent of his energies on the running of the various businesses that will result from the merger."

'NAME' PARTNERS

The Enquirer said it understood that former jockey Eddie Arcaro, Green Bap Packer quarterback Bart Starr and former baseball star Mickey Mantle "will be involved with Lucas under the new management—although the exact nature of their involvement is not clear."

Lucas has been in the pro ranks for six years, all with Cincinnati, and was voted to the NBA All-Star team each of the six years.

Marin Athletes Fail to Qualify For State Finals

Five Marin County Athletic League athletes who earned the right to compete in this weekend's California High School Track and Field Championships in Los Angeles failed yesterday to qualify for today's finals.

Entered from Marin were the Redwood High School mile relay team composed of Rob Williams, Todd Norris, Tom Estudillo and Tom Poppin; Norris in the 880-yard run and Tamalpais High's Luther Brown in the 220-yard dash.

Only the first three finishers in each heat qualified for today's finals and neither of the Marin entries finished that high.

Movies Improve Brewer

MIDLOTHIAN, Ill. (AP) — Gay Brewer, who hasn't scored a regular tour victory since the 1967 Masters, says a refound putting strike is responsible for his lead going into today's third round in the $130,000 Western Golf Tournament.

"I've been in a kind of a slump for a year and a half," the pug-nosed pro said after shooting a second round 67 yesterday for 136 and a one-stroke lead over Frank Beard and a couple of non-winners, Dick Rhyan and Rocky Thompson.

"I really hadn't been playing that badly," he said. "But it was my play around the greens, my putting. Then I was watching some home movies of myself and I discovered what I was doing wrong on my putting.

GOOD SHAPE

"I was moving my head with the stroke. I corrected it just this week. Now I'm putting much better. I'm concentrating well, hitting my irons good. My whole game is in good shape."

And the home movie he watched?

"The 1967 Masters."

Beard, who opened with a 66, had to settle for a par 71 and was tied at 137 with Rhyan and Thompson, each with a 70. Ken Still had a 66 for a 138 and was alone at that figure.

150-MILE STOCK CAR HEADLINER AT SEARS

A 30-car field will battle for first place money tomorrow in the $12,000 Weibel 150-mile late model stock car race at Sears Point International Raceway in Sonoma County.

The NASCAR-sanctioned 60-lap race will start at 1:15 p.m. on the 12-turn 2.5-mile raceway circuit located near the intersections of Highways 37 and 121. Final qualifying will be held from 10:30 a.m. to noon.

Qualifying highlighted today's portion of the two-day program, sponsored by Weibel Champagne Vineyards.

Cost for tomorrow's race is $6 for adults, with children under 12 admitted free when accompanied by an adult. Paddock passes are available in spectator areas at $5 each.

Pro Grid Moguls Adjourn; Dodgers, Cub Stars Injured

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Pro football's club owners adjourned their spring meeting yesterday without agreement on realignment of the National Football League. They did agree to retain the 40-man player limit and that interleague trading, effective for the 1970 season, will run from the day after last post-season game until March 1.

BASEBALL

LOS ANGELES — Hard luck Willie Davis, who missed the first three weeks of the season with a broken arm, will miss at least two more with a broken cheekbone, doctors said today.

Davis was hit on the right cheekbone last night by a Dan McGinn pitch. Davis was rushed to Daniel Freeman Hospital while the Dodgers were beating the Montreal Expos 4-2 for the Expos' 19th consecutive defeat.

CHICAGO — Glenn Beckert, Chicago Cubs second baseman, will be out of action for three to four weeks after suffering a fractured right thumb in the Cubs 14-8 victory Friday over the Cincinnati Reds.

GENERAL

CHERRY HILL, N.J. — Garden State Park, in New Jersey, and Hialeah, in Florida, two of the nation's leading thoroughbred race tracks, were sold by Eugene Mori to the Campbell Soup Co., Camden, N.J., in a $56 million package deal. The soup company, in turn, sold Garden State Park to the Man o' War Racing Association of Philadelphia.

GOLF

BALTIMORE — Carol Mann and Donna Caponi each shot five-under-par 68s and tied for the first round lead in the $20,000 Lady Carling Open.

NEW MAN—Michael (Mike) N. Hook, former top-ranked player on the Idaho State College tennis team, was recently named tennis professional at the Tiburon Peninsula Club. He is former teacher at the Racquet Club in Pocatello, Idaho; director of tennis for the City of Newport Beach, and associate pro at Seattle Tennis Club. Mike is 31, married and the father of three daughters. He and his family live in Tiburon. His most recent assignment was club pro at the Beach and Tennis Club, Del Monte Lodge, Pebble Beach.

TENNIS

MANCHESTER, England — Clark Graebner, top seed from New York, reached the final of the English Northern Lawn Tournament by defeating Tom Gorman of Seattle 6-4, 9-7.

PARIS — Nancy Richey of San Angelo, Tex., was beaten in the semifinals of the French Open Championships by Mrs. Margaret Court, Australia, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5.

HOCKEY

OAKLAND — The Oakland Seals said they have signed a working agreement with the Providence Reds of the American Hockey League.

The deal gives the Reds first choice of any players who do not make the Seals National Hockey League team.

LOS ANGELES — Hal Laycoe, coach of the Portland Buckaroos of the WHL, signed a two-year contract as the new coach of the Los Angeles Kings in the NHL.

DETROIT — Detroit traded center Pete Mahovlich and defenseman center Pete Mahovlich and defenseman Bart Crshley to Montreal for forward Garry Monahan and defenseman Doug Piper.

BOXING

LOS ANGELES — Mando Ramos, world lightweight champ, broke his hand in training and his title fight against Japan's Yoshiaki Numata June 14 was called off.

HORSE RACING

ALBANY — Fastperk, $11.60, won the feature at Golden Gate Fields.

Marinite Sparks Team To Pennant

Former College of Marin infielder Steve LeBeck singled home a run in the fifth inning last night to give Paul Koss Supply a 2-1 win over Sunset Club, a victory that clinched the San Francisco A League title.

In a game Thursday night, San Rafael's Bill Baxter homered, tripled and singled to give Koss Supply an upset 3-2 win over Fairchild, the leaders in the Hayward AA Softball League.

The Thursday night win moves Koss to within one game of first place in the Hayward League.

Elder Withdraws From Western Golf Tournament

MIDLOTHIAN, Ill. (AP) — Lee Elder, one of the few Negroes on the PGA tour, withdrew from the second round of the $130,000 Western Open Golf Tournament yesterday.

Elder, who claimed he had been misquoted in a recently published newspaper story, pulled out of the Western before teeing off in the second round, telling officials he was injured. He said he had injured his right knee, and was wearing a rubber brace on it.

He had a first round 76, far back in the field.

Elder was quoted in a story published Thursday in Washington, D.C. as saying he would never again play in Pensacola, Fla., because of racial incidents he has encountered there. He later denied the story.

Here's A Rundown On A's Draftees

NEW YORK (AP) — The Oakland Athletics drafted William F. Fitzgerald, a catcher from Tulane, as their major-league pick in the second day of baseball's annual draft yesterday.

Fitzgerald, 20, from Metairie, La., is 6-4, 190 pounds and bats and throws right handed.

The A's Triple-A choice was catcher Dennis Wallin, of Carmichael and American River J.C. He is 6-0, 190 pounds and a right-hander.

Russell Almquist, a left-handed pitcher from Northridge and Pierce J.C. was the A's Double-A choice. He is 6-0, 175 pounds.

Larry Prieto, a second baseman from Clovis and Fresno J.C. was Oakland's Class A pick. He is 5-9, 165 pounds and bats and throws right-handed.

Mays Rated Best Giant Of 'Em All

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Fans in San Francisco and New York have four disagreements over who should be on the baseball Giants' all-time team.

Balloting was conducted in both cities as part of baseball's centennial celebration for an all star team for the Giants, who moved from New York to San Francisco in 1958.

Both cities agreed that Willie Mays is the greatest Giant of them all and both agreed on Bill Terry at first base, Frank Frisch at second, Mays and Mel Ott in the outfield and Christy Mathewson and Carl Hubbell as the pitchers.

JACKSON VS. DARK

But New York fans chose Travis Jackson as the Giants' top shortstop, while San Francisco partisans voted for Alvin Dark. New York likes Fred Lindstrom at third base while San Francisco went for Jim Davenport.

San Francisco likes Bobby Thomson for the third outfield spot, while New York voted for Ross Young. Wes Westrum was the choice of San Francisco as catcher while New York voted for Roger Bresnahan.

San Francisco fans also chose an all-time San Francisco Giants team with Willie McCovey at first, Ron Hunt at second, Hal Lanier at shortstop, Davenport at third, Mays, Felipe Alou and Harvey Kuenn in the outfield, Tom Haller catching and Juan Marichal and Johnny Antonelli as pitchers.

MARIN DiMAG LEAGUE OPENS 1969 SEASON

The nine-team Marin area Joe Dimaggio Baseball League opens its 1969 season tomorrow with four games, and this year sports a new look with two divisions.

In the Northern Division are Healdsburg, Novato Annex Motors, Terra Linda Herb's Pool Service and San Rafael Holiday Magic. In the Southern Division are Drake, Redwood, Mill Valley Chiefs, Toby's Truckers and Presidio of San Francisco.

In the opening games tomorrow it will be Toby's Truckers vs. Mill Valley, 1 p.m. at Marin Catholic High School's field; Redwood vs. Annex Motors at Novato High's field, 5:30 p.m.; Healdsburg at Presidio, 1 p.m., and Holiday Magic vs Herb's Pool Service, Drake High's field, 1 p.m.

Expos Keep Going Down And Mets Keep Going Up

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Montreal Expos, like the New York Mets, might have to wait eight years before winning eight games in a row, but right now the Expos must be asking what it takes to win one straight.

The Expos failed to come up with the correct answer again last night when they dropped a 4-2 decision to the Los Angeles Dodgers, their 19th straight defeat.

Muddling through their first year of existence as one of four latest expansion teams, Montreal already has replaced the Mets' expansion record of 17 consecutive losses and now is closing in on the modern all-time record for 23 set by Philadelphia in 1961.

The Mets, in contrast, are setting an example for perserverence for all expansion clubs. After suffering through years of ineptitude as one of the first expansion teams, the Mets have suddenly become a team to be envied, rolling by the new San Diego team 5-3 for a club record eighth consecutive victory.

END IN SIGHT

The Expos could see the end in sight after 5½ innings as Dan McGinn, making his first start after 23 relief appearances, held a 2-1 lead on a run-scoring single by reappearing Maury Wills and a sacrifice fly by Mack Jones in the fifth.

But in the sixth, John Miller, who entered the line-up in the first inning when Willie Davis was hit in the face by a pitch, singled and Wes Parker blasted his fifth homer.

The Dodgers added an unearned run later and Don Sutton 8-4, with ninth inning relief from Jim Brewer, sent the Expos after another answer.

The Mets, on the other hand, after eight years of losing, have come up with all the answers as they ended San Diego's six-game winning streak. Art Shamsky was one of them, coming up as a pinch hitter in the eighth inning and singling in the tie-breaking run.

Tommie Agee doubled home another run in the ninth and rookie Gary Gentry, 5-4, giving only five hits before needing ninth inning relief, got the victory. The only runs off him were Ed Spiezio's homer and a two-run error by Ed Kranepool, who later doubled in the tying run in a two-run Mets' sixth.

Pro Grid Moguls Adjourn; Dodgers, Cub Stars Injured

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW MAN—Michael (Mike) N. Hook, former top-ranked player on the Idaho State College tennis team, was recently named tennis professional at the Tiburon Peninsula Club. He is former teacher at the Racquet Club in Pocatello, Idaho; director of tennis for the City of Newport Beach, and associate pro at Seattle Tennis Club. Mike is 31, married and the father of three daughters. He and his family live in Tiburon. His most recent assignment was club pro at the Beach and Tennis Club, Del Monte Lodge, Pebble Beach.

NEW YORK — Pro football's club owners adjourned their spring meeting yesterday without agreement on realignment of the National Football League. They did agree to retain the 40-man player limit and that interleague trading, effective for the 1970 season, will run from the day after last post-season game until March 1.

BASEBALL

LOS ANGELES — Hard luck Willie Davis, who missed the first three weeks of the season with a broken arm, will miss at least two more with a broken cheekbone, doctors said today.

Davis was hit on the right cheekbone last night by a Dan McGinn pitch. Davis was rushed to Daniel Freeman Hospital while the Dodgers were beating the Montreal Expos 4-2 for the Expos' 19th consecutive defeat.

CHICAGO — Glenn Beckert, Chicago Cubs second baseman, will be out of action for three to four weeks after suffering a fractured right thumb in the Cubs 14-8 victory Friday over the Cincinnati Reds.

GENERAL

CHERRY HILL, N.J. — Garden State Park, in New Jersey, and Hialeah, in Florida, two of the nation's leading thoroughbred race tracks, were sold by Eugene Mori to the Campbell Soup Co., Camden, N.J., in a $56 million package deal. The soup company, in turn, sold Garden State Park to the Man o' War Racing Association of Philadelphia.

GOLF

BALTIMORE — Carol Mann and Donna Caponi each shot five-under-par 68s and tied for the first round lead in the $20,000 Lady Carling Open.

TENNIS

MANCHESTER, England — Clark Graebner, top seed from New York, reached the final of the English Northern Lawn Tournament by defeating Tom Gorman of Seattle 6-4, 9-7.

PARIS — Nancy Richey of San Angelo, Tex., was beaten in the semifinals of the French Open Championships by Mrs. Margaret Court, Australia, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5.

HOCKEY

OAKLAND — The Oakland Seals said they have signed a working agreement with the Providence Reds of the American Hockey League.

The deal gives the Reds first choice of any players who do not make the Seals National Hockey League team.

LOS ANGELES — Hal Laycoe, coach of the Portland Buckaroos of the WHL, signed a two-year contract as the new coach of the Los Angeles Kings in the NHL.

DETROIT — Detroit traded center Pete Mahovlich and defenseman center Pete Mahovlich and defenseman Bart Crshley to Montreal for forward Garry Monahan and defenseman Doug Piper.

BOXING

LOS ANGELES — Mando Ramos, world lightweight champ, broke his hand in training and his title fight against Japan's Yoshiaki Numata June 14 was called off.

HORSE RACING

ALBANY — Fastperk, $11.60, won the feature at Golden Gate Fields.

Marinite Sparks Team To Pennant

Former College of Marin infielder Steve LeBeck singled home a run in the fifth inning last night to give Paul Koss Supply a 2-1 win over Sunset Club, a victory that clinched the San Francisco A League title.

In a game Thursday night, San Rafael's Bill Baxter homered, tripled and singled to give Koss Supply an upset 3-2 win over Fairchild, the leaders in the Hayward AA Softball League.

The Thursday night win moves Koss to within one game of first place in the Hayward League.

Elder Withdraws From Western Golf Tournament

MIDLOTHIAN, Ill. (AP) — Lee Elder, one of the few Negroes on the PGA tour, withdrew from the second round of the $130,000 Western Open Golf Tournament yesterday.

Elder, who claimed he had been misquoted in a recently published newspaper story, pulled out of the Western before teeing off in the second round, telling officials he was injured. He said he had injured his right knee, and was wearing a rubber brace on it.

He had a first round 76, far back in the field.

Elder was quoted in a story published Thursday in Washington, D.C. as saying he would never again play in Pensacola, Fla., because of racial incidents he has encountered there. He later denied the story.

BOWLING NOTES

Youngster Shows Up Old-Timers

Junior bowler Keith Ray showed the old-timers how it's done when he banged out a 267 game and 604 series to lead all scores in the Adult-Junior League at Greenbrae Lanes.

Mike Tauscher led scores at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael when he rolled a 259 game in the 555 Trios.

Action this week at Nave Lanes will be highlighted by the annual Tournament of Champions, open to champ men's teams from the recently concluded winter leagues.

There was some fine play in the Hi-Lo's League at Country Club Bowl this week. Wayne Tobin picked up the 6-7-10 split on his way to a 606 series; Barbara Tobin and Faith Hicklin made good on 8-10 splits; and John Brusatori (166 avg.) missed a 600 by one lousy pin.

Hardwick Wins Redwood City Pro Bowling

REDWOOD CITY (AP)—Billy Hardwick of Louisville, Ky., defeated Jim Stefanich of Joliet, Ill., 289-192 to win the $6,000 first prize yesterday in the Professional Bowler's Association's $70,000 Smallcomb Classic.

It was the 27-year-old Hardwick's fourth championship this year and raised his leading money winning figure to $41,725.

Hardwick, who qualified in the fourth spot among the five finalists, won four games to take the title. He started by eliminating Harry Booth of Mountain View, 267-245. He then defeated Wayne Zahn of Tempe, Ariz., 279-246, and he won his way into the title match with a 247-237 victory over Larry Laub of San Francisco.

Stefanich received $3,200 for second place; Laub got $2,500 for third; Zahn $2,000 for fourth, and Booth banked $1,500 for fifth place.

Meeting Slated For Softballers

San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department is holding a managers meeting for the Summer Softball League Thursday, June 12, 7:30 p.m., at San Rafael Community Recreation Center, Second and Brooks streets.

Plans call for six leagues this season, according to Andrew J. Snyder Jr., director of the parks and recreation department. He said there would be four leagues of regular softball and two "slow-pitch" loops.

Games will be played at Albert Field during the evenings, and will start June 23. Entry fee this year will be $100, according to Synder.

Weber Tops Bowlers

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Dick Weber of St. Louis is the leading money winner in the professional bowling tournament trail, having won $279,362 in official tournament money over the past decade.

tum to Namath to sell his interest in Bachelors III by Friday night or face suspension, pointing to the undesirable characters who were frequenting the cafe.

"I asked him if it made any difference if I had nothing to do with gamblers or gambling," Namath explained. "He told me it made no difference. He told me I'm a football player and I can't be associated with those kind of people."

Rozelle, in a formal statement, explained why he had issued the ultimatum even while emphasizing that no evidence exists that Namath was personally involved in any illegal activities.

DEEP CONCERN

"It is obviously impossible," Rozelle's statement said, "for a player to be aware of the background and habits of all persons to whom he is introduced. However, continuation of such associations after learning of a person's undesirable background and habits is cause for deep concern.

"Such conduct gives the appearance of evil whether or not it actually exists and therefore affects the player's reputation, the reputation of his fellow players and the integrity of his sport."

While Rozelle declined to specify the nature of the activities going on at Bachelors III, an unidentified high police official was quoted as saying:

"The place was crawling with the worst sort of characters. We had men in there and there were all sorts of things going on downstairs (where a bank of pay telephones was used by customers). It was a case of his not knowing what was going on down there.

"But it was pretty bad."

In light of those statements, why did Namath quit rather than sell what can't be more than a moderate money-making operation by comparison with some of his other ventures?

Namath, at his press conference, attired in bell-bottomed brown pants with wide stripes and a blue-high collared shirt, said:

"It's a matter of principle."

He went on to explain, his voice several times cracking with emotion:

"I'm doing something now because I think it's right. I don't want to do it but I don't have any choice. What it comes down to is because I'm a football player, I can't be in the restaur-

"So I quit, I'm retiring — finished."

Besides the principle involved in that, speculation gave rise to several other reasons for Namath's retirement announcement:

AILING LEGS

—His still ailing legs, the subject of the earlier hint at retirement.

—His naturally rebellious attitude which would lead him to resent authority as represented by Roselle.

—His intense loyalty to his friends, represented not only by teammates such as Sauer, Lammons and Hudson, but his two partners in Bachelors III, including Ray Abruzzese, a teammate of Namath's at Alabama and with the Jets.

It's that intense loyalty, on the other hand, which is cited as the main reason for a possible change of heart.

Denning Named Marin Catholic Best Athlete

Rick Denning, four-year varsity baseball star for the Marin Catholic High School Wildcats, was named the school's outstanding athlete, it was announced yesterday by Gary Hughes, co-athletic director at the Kentfield school.

Denning, who has played outfield, third base and shortstop during his prep baseball career at Marin Catholic, was named to the All-Marin County Athletic League first team three times.

Other Marin Catholic award winners as picked by the school's coaches are outstanding players Jim O'Brien, football; Mike Murray, basketball, and Terry Stempel, track and field.

BOWLING NOTES

Youngster Shows Up Old-Timers

Junior bowler Keith Ray showed the old-timers how it's done when he banged out a 267 game and 604 series to lead all scores in the Adult-Junior League at Greenbrae Lanes.

Mike Tauscher led scores at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael when he rolled a 259 game in the 555 Trios.

Action this week at Nave Lanes will be highlighted by the annual Tournament of Champions, open to champ men's teams from the recently concluded winter leagues.

There was some fine play in the Hi-Lo's League at Country Club Bowl this week. Wayne Tobin picked up the 6-7-10 split on his way to a 606 series; Barbara Tobin and Faith Hicklin made good on 8-10 splits; and John Brusatori (166 avg.) missed a 600 by one lousy pin.

Honor Roll scores this past week:

Ship, Electronics Merger Planned

NEW YORK (UPI) — American Steamship Co. of Buffalo and Reiss Steamship Co., both operators of Great Lakes fleets, have agreed to merge.

Although American Steamship is buyer in the deal for about $10.5 million in cash and notes, Reiss will be the corporate survivor. Eleven vessels owned by Reiss are included in the deal.

American steamship is a subsidiary of Oswego Shipping Corp.

Tyco Laboratories, Inc., of Waltham, Mass., has agreed to buy Micro-Power, Inc., of Long Island City, N.Y., and Custom Products Corp. of Menominee Falls, Wis., for a total of $4 million in stock. Both are custom components producers.

ITE Imperial Corp. of Philadelphia agreed to buy Ray Bobbs Air-Draulics, Inc., of Portland, Ore., for cash. Ray Bobbs has annual sales of $1 million.

Union America, Inc. of Los Angeles, the former Union Bancorp, has agreed to buy Securities-Intermountain, Inc., of Portland, Ore., a mortgage banking firm, for $4.2 million in stock.

Household Finance Corp. of Chicago disclosed that its proposed purchase of Von's Grocery Co. of Los Angeles will involve about $120 million in stock.

Von's Grocery shareholders will get 0.74 share of a new $2.50 annual dividend cumulative Household preferred convertible into common on a share-for-share basis and redeemable after five years at $52.50 a share, for each share of Von's.

Post Office Gain

NEW DELHI (UPI)—There were 102,156 post offices in India as of April 1 and the country is opening an average of 11 new post offices a day.

MUTUAL FUNDS

Ship, Electronics Merger Planned

NEW YORK (UPI) — American Steamship Co. of Buffalo and Reiss Steamship Co., both operators of Great Lakes fleets, have agreed to merge.

Although American Steamship is buyer in the deal for about $10.5 million in cash and notes, Reiss will be the corporate survivor. Eleven vessels owned by Reiss are included in the deal.

American steamship is a subsidiary of Oswego Shipping Corp.

Tyco Laboratories, Inc., of Waltham, Mass., has agreed to buy Micro-Power, Inc., of Long Island City, N.Y., and Custom Products Corp. of Menominee Falls, Wis., for a total of $4 million in stock. Both are custom components producers.

ITE Imperial Corp. of Philadelphia agreed to buy Ray Bobbs Air-Draulics, Inc., of Portland, Ore., for cash. Ray Bobbs has annual sales of $1 million.

Union America, Inc. of Los Angeles, the former Union Bancorp, has agreed to buy Securities-Intermountain, Inc., of Portland, Ore., a mortgage banking firm, for $4.2 million in stock.

Household Finance Corp. of Chicago disclosed that its proposed purchase of Von's Grocery Co. of Los Angeles will involve about $120 million in stock.

Von's Grocery shareholders will get 0.74 share of a new $2.50 annual dividend cumulative Household preferred convertible into common on a share-for-share basis and redeemable after five years at $52.50 a share, for each share of Von's.

Post Office Gain

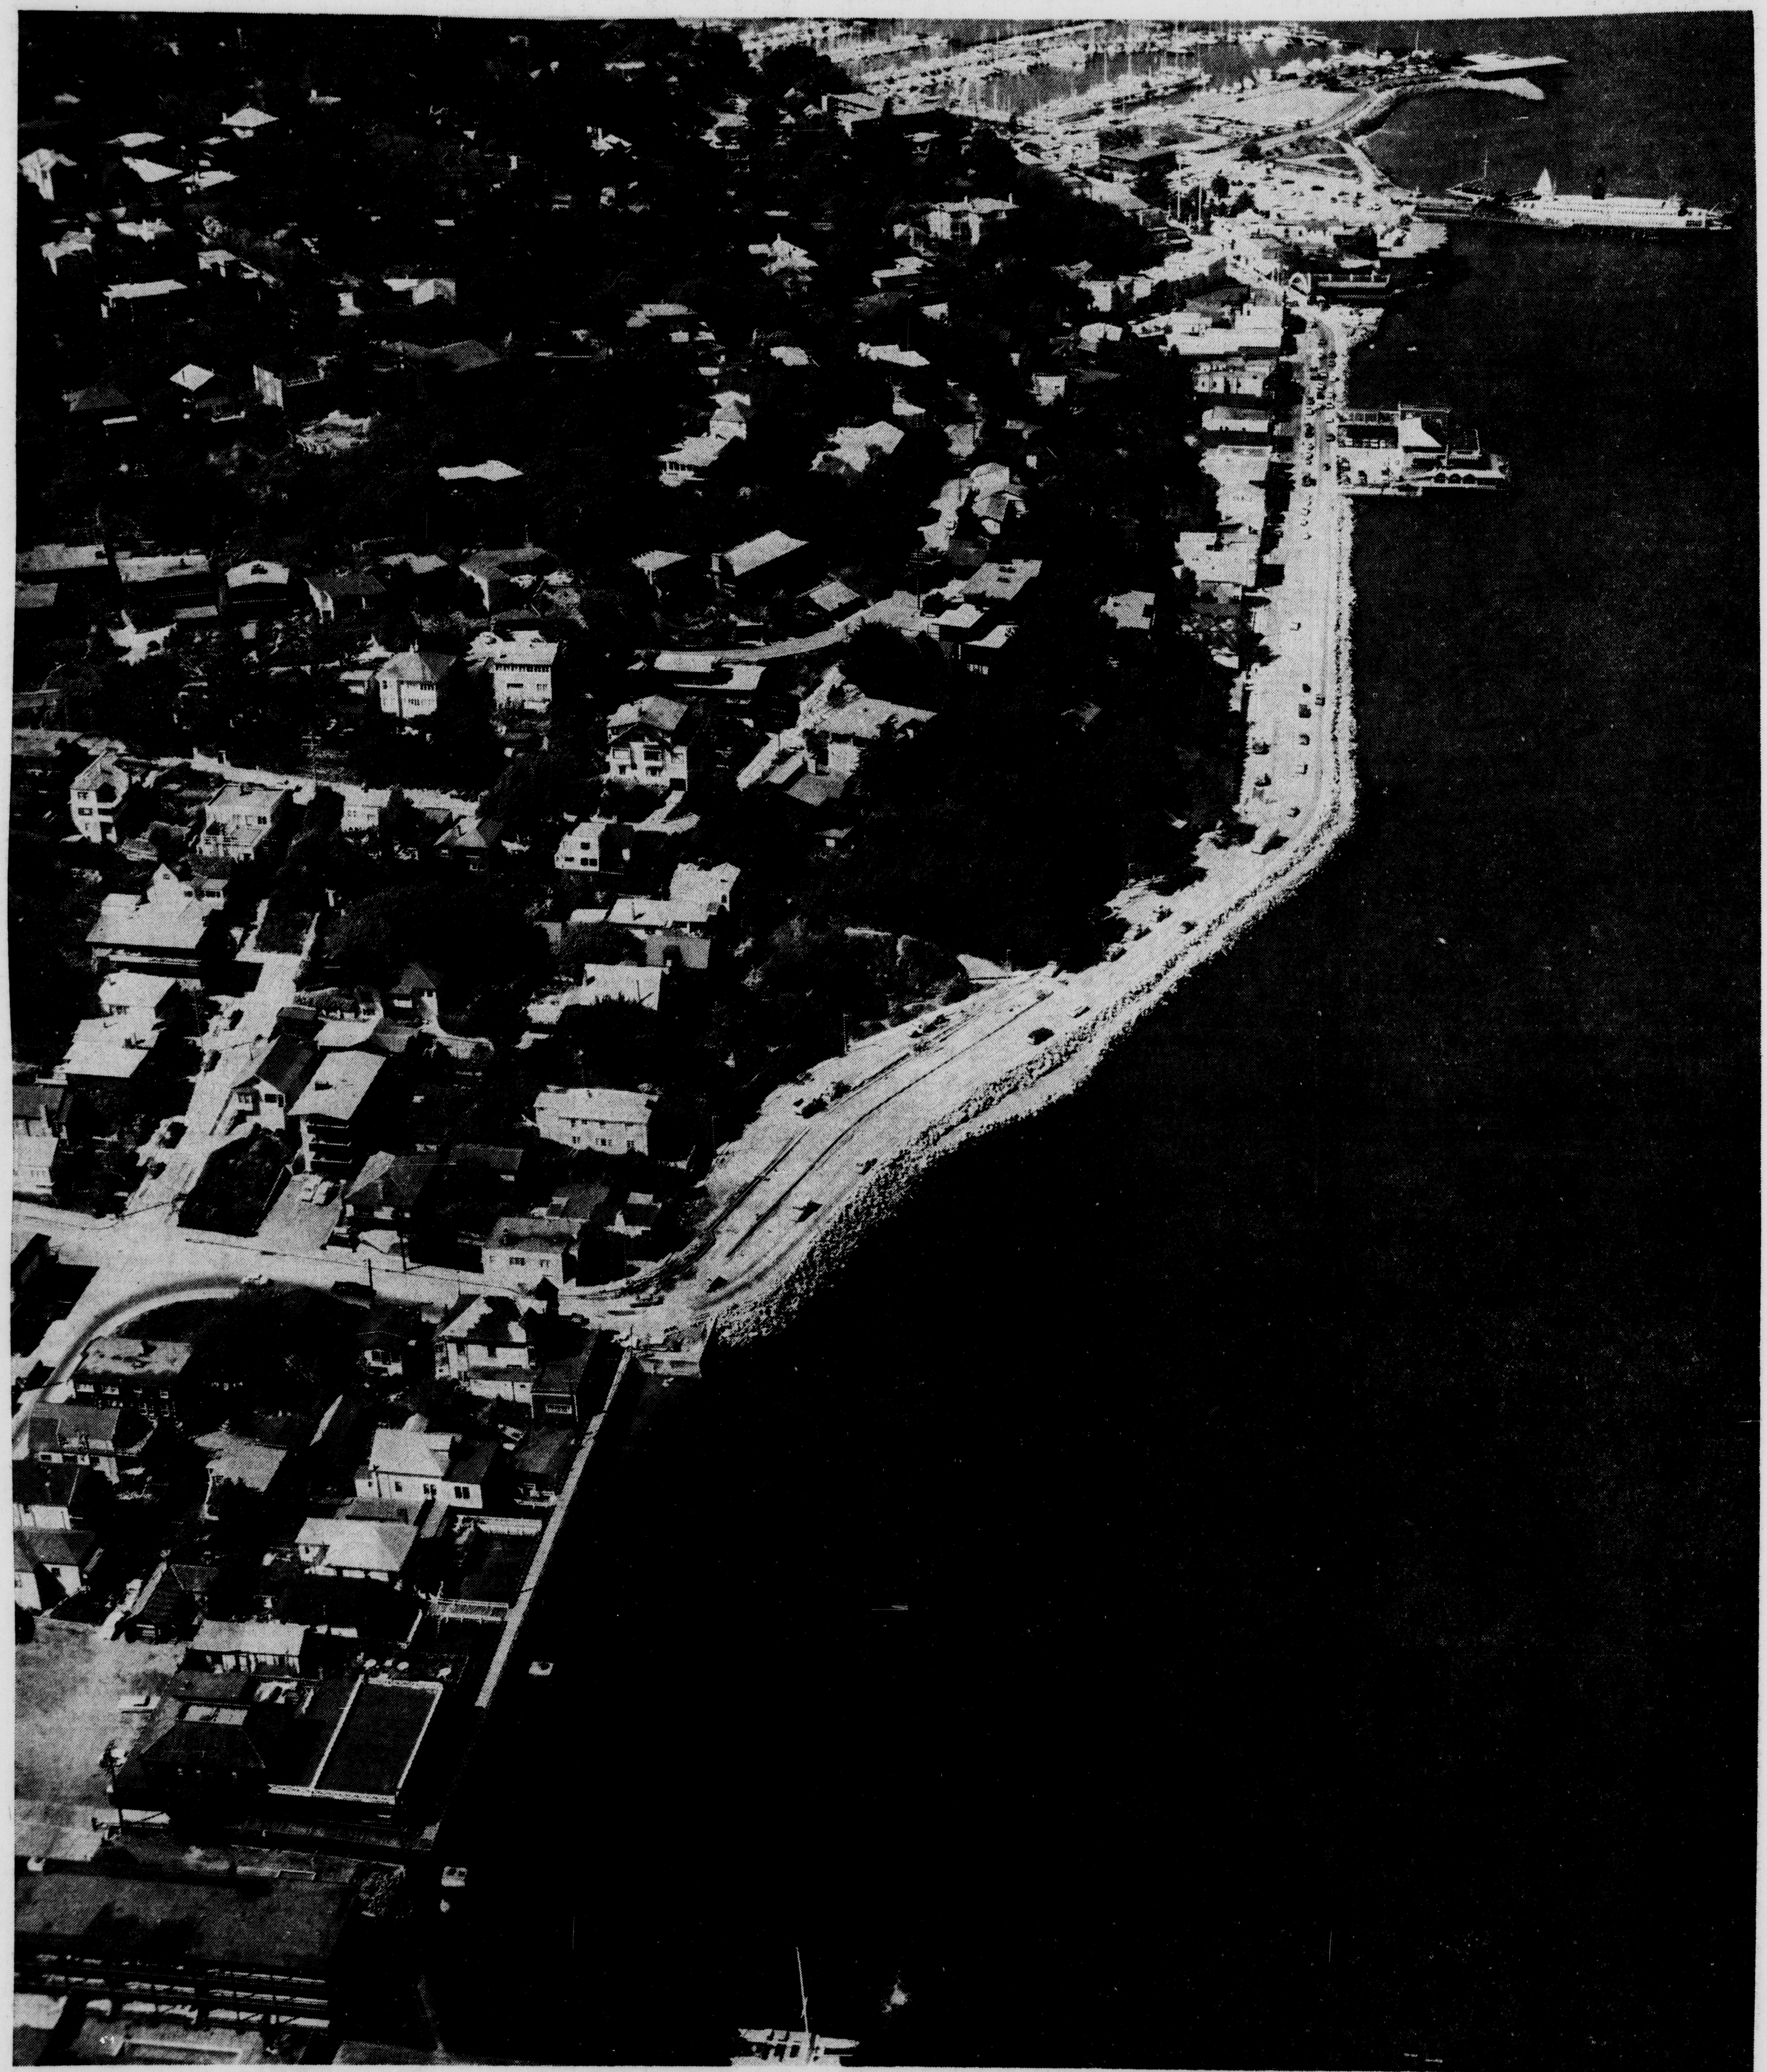
Sausalito: Toast Of The Waterfront



Hard by the water, like its small Mediterranean counterparts, Sausalito is a special jewel in the San Francisco Bay community. Contemporary, colorful and busy, it has something for everyone — from the prim tourist to garishly dressed street people. Shops have a special character, as those (top center) along Bridgeway. They dispense imports, clothing, sandwiches, sandals, gourmet foods. Good food also is found at Sally Stanford's Valhalla (bottom left) and Ondine and the Glad Hand on the waterfront (top.) Above Bridgeway, still being widened when this photograph was taken, is the Hearst house, hidden in the trees just above the stone seal (center.) Sausalito was once a busy ferry port, but now the old Berkeley (top right) stands idle. Downtown begins at Princess Street, across from the old Purity which is being remodeled. Part of it will become a restaurant with outdoor dining. Beyond are Plaza Vina Del Mar (named after Sausalito's sister city in Chile), the Bank of America building and the main Sausalito Yacht Harbor. The white-roofed building north of the Berkeley is the Spinnaker restaurant. (Photo by Aero Photographers, Sausalito)

The Editor's Notebook

Miss Ethel Tompkins A Modern St. Francis

IN DYING AS IN LIVING, Miss Ethel Tompkins of San Anselmo avoided the limelight.

She died quietly at home Monday of last week. A private funeral was held Wednesday. The Independent-Journal carried only a brief announcement of her passing on Thursday.

Such avoidance of the limelight would have pleased her immensely.

In dying as in living, she deserved more recognition than she received, or would accept.

SOME YEARS AGO, as she approached 90 still physically agile and mentally alert, she confided her sad feeling that she had lived too long.

Born in San Anselmo in the very home in which she died 93 years later, she was accustomed to transacting business only with people she had known for years. She outlived her own generation, she explained, and it was painful now to deal always with strangers, even at the grocery store.

Although known best publicly for her continuing efforts to insure humane treatment of animals, her personal relationships with people were one of her three great interests in life — as observed by this writer.

The multitude of people whom she regarded as special friends never were surprised to find on their doorsteps packages from "E. H. Tompkins." Such a package might contain the very finest Wisconsin cheese, the largest strawberries imaginable, the richest old-fashioned fruitcake imaginable, a flat of the largest flowered pansies you ever saw, or any one of a number of other specialties which she enjoyed.

Her chief joy, in later years, seemed to be to share these outstanding delicacies with her friends.

HER GARDEN WAS the second of her three great interests. She knew where to order the seeds for the most colorful, most profuse and the hugest blooms of her favorite annuals. Some of the nation's largest and best known seed houses knew her as their oldest customer and they lamented with her the intrusion of weed seeds into their seed packages because modern employees no longer had the love of quality for quality's sake which their predecessors of her generation venerated.

Finally, there was her concern for the welfare of animals. She was a late 19th and early 20th Century equivalent of St. Francis of Assisi.

She was the principal founder of the Marin County Humane Society, more than 60 years ago. She did not miss a single one of the first 50 annual meetings and she served as an officer or director for nearly 60 years.

But she regularly declined the presidency. She was by nature a behind-the-scenes worker. As late as 1950, she was instrumental in founding the World Federation for Protection of Animals, but she did not attend the first meeting of the organization in The Netherlands and she held no office in it.

PERHAPS HER GREATEST ability was that of recruiting effective workers for the causes she espoused.

Sometimes the Independent-Journal is damned as being too independent.

But there was one individual — and only one — who could and did regularly influence the I-J for decades.

In 1907 when she founded the Humane Society in Marin, Miss. Tompkins enlisted the support of M. F. Cochrane, publisher of the then weekly Independent.

Harry Lutgens, editor and publisher of the San Rafael Independent when it became a daily, ultimately served as president of the Humane Society. He instituted the practice of carrying free advertising for the Humane Society in the classified section, to assist in finding homes for animals at the pound.

Today's editor of the I-J serves on the Humane Society's board of directors.

No other person in the newspaper's 108-year history ever exercised such influence. It is unthinkable that any person ever will again.

What was the secret of this power of personal persuasion?

Miss Tompkins was a true lady. One just doesn't disagree with a lady who commands, deservedly, full respect.

WHEN MISS TOMPKINS DIED last week, the I-J library biographical file proved woefully lacking in details about her. She shunned personal publicity. She refused to permit pictures taken of her for publication. She refused to submit to biographical interviews. It was, she said, not proper for a lady's name to appear in a newspaper. She would then chuckle and say of course that idea was old-fashioned and obsolete, but she couldn't help it; that was the way she felt.

No amount of persuasive talk could change her feelings.

What could be learned of her biography was fascinating.

Her grandfather, Daniel D. Tompkins of New York, served as vice president under James Munroe, fifth president of these United States, from 1817 to 1825.

WHILE MISS TOMPKINS WAS at all time a proper lady in every respect, she was human.

On rare occasions she would recall the occasion when, as a girl, she was expelled from an exclusive girls' school on Riverside Drive in New York City.

She tossed a secret note from a dormitory window to a handsome policeman who rode a beautiful horse along the parkway below, asking if she could ride the horse. He signalled affirmatively. She left the dormitory after hours without authorization, was observed riding the beautiful horse, and thereafter was suspended.

Miss Tompkins died at 93. The incident with the policeman's horse had to have taken place 75 years ago.

IN 1951, MISS TOMPKINS was voted by the nation's 600 humane organizations to be the outstanding humane worker in the U.S.A. She was then 75.

Characteristically, she declined an invitation to go to New York to accept the award personally. Subsequently, it was handed over to her at a simple ceremony in the Humane Society's office in San Rafael. She didn't bother to take it home.

Compassion for dumb animals is a necessary prerequisite to genuine concern for one's fellow man.

So it was that Miss Tompkins was a 19th and 20th Century counterpart of St. Francis who sought "total denial of self."

Her departure fills us with sorrow. We shall not live to see another like her.

TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

The usual worried husband invaded the office of the usual society psychoanalyst to plead, "You've got to help my wife, doctor. She's convinced she's an elevator." "An elevator?" echoed the surprised analyst. "You'd better send her right up to see me." "I can't do that," demurred the husband. "She's an express elevator, and doesn't stop on your floor."

A leading dermatologist opines that a man scrapes away one-twentieth of his skin every time he shaves, with the result that in twenty shaves his face is gone entirely. Considering some faces I've seen lately, the system has its favorable aspects.

"When are we gonna' get around to a South Vietnam withdrawal?"

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Town Meeting Role Questioned

With reference to the recommendations to the San Anselmo City Council emanating from the "Town Meeting:"

Because the meeting this year was planned and conducted by a closed group of approximately 20 citizens who did not openly seek the participation of San Anselmo citizens at large, but meeting secretly throughout the year drew up a series of only six subjects for possible disucssion;

Because a great number of citizens did not see or have an opportunity to answer even these questions (3,800 questionnaires were said to have been distributed — only 100-200 were said to have been returned);

Because topics some citizens would like to have discussed were not taken up (not having been previously screened?);

Because the "Town Meeting' was represented to be sponsored this year by the San Anselmo Homes Association when in reality the last meeting of this body was in July 1968 and there was no discussion of such participation at that time. As a director (recording secretary — duly elected) of this organization, I have not been aware of any request for endorsement by the board of directors or the membership at large to sponsor this project. . . .

Because the hands of youngsters in the audience were counted in the "official" votes summing up the recommendations of the "Town Meeting" — and because a large proportion (almost half) of those guiding the separate discussion groups were not residents of San Anselmo;

Therefore, a number of San Anselmo citizens including myself earnestly hope that the individual members of the city council not abnegate their own responsibilities as elected officials to seek out and determine for themselves what are the real desires of the people of San Anselmo. The present recommendations are certainly not a mandate of the people of San Anselmo, but appear to be that of a controlled opinion-forming group.

Academic Senate Vote Criticized

The vote by the University of California Academic Senate to recommend turning a piece of state-owned property over to an irresponsible group of law-breakers, even though they are just overgrown children, is an excellent reason why the taxpayers should insist that their elected officials keep control of the activities of the educational system.

If, as the vote indicates, this property is not needed for academic use, it should be sold back to private ownership and returned to the tax rolls. This would not only help to relieve U. of C.'s money shortage but would save the cost of maintenance. Any program that had been planned for the property should be cancelled at an additional saving. Such a move might be a start on restoring some of the taxpayers confidence in the judgment of university officials.

The vote also confirms what productive members of society have long known, that, ability to learn and recall large amounts of knowledge does not always equate with ability to use that knowledge for constructive purposes, or to make workable decisions.

More Than One White In Class

I would like to complain about the article in the May 23 edition that's called "School Yard Race Strife." The part where it says, "The class which had eight white students when Chaka arrived now has only one" is a lie. I know of eight white students in his class now.

I think it is mean of you to put the article on the front page to ruin the school.

Judge 'Never Did A Day's Work'

Regarding the news item (May 27) about retiring Judge William O. Douglas, it is no wonder to me that people complain about the equities of life. Here is a man who received a large salary all his life, and probably never did a day's work in his life. Yet he will receive $60,000 a year for life. While some hard working person who built the country, and also may have served his country, may look forward to $149 a month frmm Social Security if and when he retires.

There is no social justice when things like this can happen.

LINES ON LIVING

Miracles All Around Us, Yet We See Them Not

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

I can never understand why some people find life so boring that they have to look for kicks and thrills to escape reality. As for myself, reality is miracle. The experience of the present moment is worth more than a thousand tales of magic and wonder.

Thus it was to Walt Whitman, who saw miracle in every hour of light and dark and in every cubic inch of space; to Voltaire, who perceived all miracle in the stupendous order of nature, the revolution of a hundred million worlds around a million suns; to W. Macneile Dixon, who sees miracles everywhere and observes nothing but the works of magic: "Nature is not natural, but supernatural, delighting in marvels. . . . "

YET, IT HAS ALL become a matter of routine for us, We have taken the familiar to become mundane, the everyday spectacle to be a bore, the wonder of the living moment in time and in space and in creation as a cosmic imbecility. We have found a convenient and useful word, "nature," to conceal deeper perceptions and meanings. We dismiss wonder, miracle and awe as the works of some stupendous "natural" compulsion and let it rest at that.

It often seems so senseless and visionless. Miracle is all around us. But when we ourselves partake of the miraculous, we soar closer to our destiny. Such has been the fate of our generation when we witnessed the breathtaking glimpses of our earthlings as they closed in with their spaceships on a suspended, cratered moon in a black and awesome sky.

Who says miracles don't happen in our time? They do. And, what's more important, we have made this one happen. Think of it: we have seen in our own days not the crossing of one marshy, unpassable Red Sea, but the navigating of vast oceans of the blackest black in a stark void of the universe! We are treading where angels were believed to soar: a quarter million miles in soundless and weightless space. Who else could have done this but miracle-maker, man?

MIRACLE, in truth, is in the nature of man. For what is miracle if not the ability to rise above the ordinary and to do that which has been established as natural limits? But the ordinary and natural of today have been impenetrable unknowns of yesterday.

The miraculous and wonderous are within the reach of every individual when he grasps the truth that with faith and resolution he faces (reasonably speaking) few limitations other than those that he alone has set for himself.

In this sense we don't look for a miracle as an enchanting rainbow in the sky, but as an opportunity to stretch our own human powers so as to make that which seems impossible today the possibility of tomorrow. We need not invoke magical outside powers in order to see wonder, to behold revelation. We have only to release the God-powers within us to perform those God-things we call miracle.

Rockefeller Mission's Failure More Than Personal Tragedy

WASHINGTON — The disaster of Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's Latin-American exploration is more than a personal tragedy, although it certainly is that. For most of his career Rockefeller has had an active concern with the Americas to the south. Through his own and his family's fortune he has made investments of at least $10 million in Venezuela, intended to show the way to modernize the economy.

Venezuela told him to keep out for fear that hostile demonstrations would get out of hand and result in widespread damage. Rockefeller's personal safety could not be assured.

The informed private view here is that the two later trips should be canceled or at least postponed until the contagion of unrest subsides. The first stop on the next schedule is Brazil, where there is a better chance of a relatively peaceful reception. But in Argentina the military dictatorship is trying to suppress a workers' revolt threatening to break out in new violence. A Rockefeller visit would be pouring gasoline on the smouldering fire.

President Eduardo Frei of Chile, beset by attackers on the left demanding nationalization of American properties and critics on the right calling for an end to social reform, will hardly welcome the American visitor. The deep unrest in Uruguay is not a proper setting for the mission of the unhappy governor.

WHAT IS SO hard to understand is that all this could not have been foreseen. Reports from U.S. diplomatic missions throughout the Americas fill huge files telling the story of poverty, unrest and deep disillusion with the Colossus of the North. The Alliance for Progress has failed to make a dent in fundamental problems besetting the vast semi-developed lands south of the Rio Grande.

Perhaps better than anyone else, through his long relationship, Rockefeller knows the cause and effect triggering the unrest. A staggeringly high birth rate is a root cause. With more than half the population in most Latin American countries under 25, the educational system, starved and enfeebled, simply cannot cope.

The oligarchies ruling in most Latin American countries have dug in their heels against evolutionary change that might have tempered the wind of hostility and rebellion. All too often the hierarchy of the church has been old and also resistant to any change.

ROCKEFELLER'S mission was singularly inept in its concept and planning. He had with him 23 advisers plus assistants and briefcase carriers. Together with the press the party added up to nearly a hundred. As one tart and knowledgeable critic put it:

"Why he's had almost as many men with him as Pizarro had when he conquered Peru."

If the New York governor had gone quietly and unostentatiously, with possibly two or three assistants, he might have been accepted as a fact finder. The publicity heralding his mission was in itself calculated to stir suspicion and resentment. Here was one more instance of the Yankee overlord coming down to report on the progress, or lack of it, of the natives.

THE ROCKEFELLER mission was said to have been inspired by Galo Plaza, secretary-general of the Organization of American States. Plaza is an old friend of the governor who seems to have been as unaware of what the visit would touch off as were American officials who bought the idea.

During the first two trips Rockefeller seemed to think that lavish praise could compensate for hasty stops. Arriving in Guatemala for a 3½-hour visit, he said he was happy to witness the triumph of democracy. In light of the terror of the Guatemalan right and left and a level of poverty and oppression so dismal that a group of Maryknoll priests and nuns went over to the side of the oppressed, his statement seemed a slight exaggeration.

One thing can be said for the Rocketeller facaso, that useful Spanish word meaning snafu on a grand scale. There is an urgent need for far-reaching changes in U.S. policy with a positive approach and not just the tired, old rhetoric.

Nader Chipping At Hard Rock When He Tries Teeners' Hearing

WASHINGTON — No one has more admiration for Ralph Nader than I do, but I believe he bit off more than he could chew when he urged the Senate recently to investigate the noise levels of rock 'n' roll music. Nader said that studies had shown that young people's hearing had been impaired by "hard rock" music, and he urged Senate hearings to see if some legislation could be passed to put restrictions on noise produced by rock 'n' roll bands.

I believe Nader's task is formidable. It's one thing to take on General Motors, but when you start messing with teenagers' tastes in music, you're really in a hornet's nest.

But I'm sympathetic with the project, and I've been doing my own studies concerning hearing and its relation to teen-agers, which I'll be very happy to let Nader have. The studies were done under laboratory conditions in my own home with the unwitting aid of my three teen-agers.

THESE WERE SOME of the conclusions I came to:

The first was that teen-agers do not actually hear the music they are listening to. I discovered this one night when the din of something called "Plasma Plus Five" was rocking the house. I went to my son's room and shouted through the locked door:

"TURN THAT DAMN THING DOWN."

When there was no response, I started hammering on the door. A few minutes later, when he opened it, I shouted, "GOOD GRAVY, DO YOU HAVE TO PLAY THAT MUSIC SO LOUD?"

He looked at me and said, "What music?"

"This music," I said, going over and turning it off. "Are you deaf?"

"I didn't hear it," he said. "I was doing my homework."

THE SECOND conclusion I came to was that while rock 'n' roll may play a part in the impairment of hearing, parents play a bigger part. Almost anything a parent says to the teen-ager falls on blocked ears.

For this experiment, I said in a loud voice to may daughter, "I want you to clean up your room."

"Huh?" she said.

"I SAID I WANT YOU TO CLEAN UP YOUR ROOM."

She still didn't seem to hear me.

"IF YOU DON'T CLEAN UP YOUR ROOM, YOU WILL NOT BE ABLE TO WATCH ANY TELEVISION TONIGHT."

"Television" was the only word that got through.

A FURTHER experiment with another daughter showed how bad teen-age hearing is getting.

"I want you in at 11 o'clock tonight."

When she came in at midnight, I said, "I told you I wanted you home at 11."

"I thought you said 12 o'clock."

Another conclusion I came to was that while teen-agers cannot hear things that parents tell them, they can hear things that they're not supposed to hear.

One night my wife barely whispered to me in our bedroom, "Did you hear the Merrills' high school daughter is pregnant?"

My teen-age daughter, who was listening to a rock 'n' roll record three bedrooms down the hall, came rushing in and said, "How old is she?"

MY RESEARCH revealed that teen-agers' hearing improves when they are on the telephone talking to other teen-agers, or asking a favor.

But it gets blocked up again when they're told to brush their teeth, comb their hair, take a bath or mow the lawn.

How much rock 'n' roll music has to do with this is something Nader is going to have to find out. I'm only turning over the raw research, and he has to take it from there.

DAILY Independent Journal Est. 1861

The Editor's Notebook

Miss Ethel Tompkins A Modern St. Francis

IN DYING AS IN LIVING, Miss Ethel Tompkins of San Anselmo avoided the limelight.

She died quietly at home Monday of last week. A private funeral was held Wednesday. The Independent-Journal carried only a brief announcement of her passing on Thursday.

Such avoidance of the limelight would have pleased her immensely.

In dying as in living, she deserved more recognition than she received, or would accept.

SOME YEARS AGO, as she approached 90 still physically agile and mentally alert, she confided her sad feeling that she had lived too long.

Born in San Anselmo in the very home in which she died 93 years later, she was accustomed to transacting business only with people she had known for years. She outlived her own generation, she explained, and it was painful now to deal always with strangers, even at the grocery store.

Although known best publicly for her continuing efforts to insure humane treatment of animals, her personal relationships with people were one of her three great interests in life — as observed by this writer.

The multitude of people whom she regarded as special friends never were surprised to find on their doorsteps packages from "E. H. Tompkins." Such a package might contain the very finest Wisconsin cheese, the largest strawberries imaginable, the richest old-fashioned fruitcake imaginable, a flat of the largest flowered pansies you ever saw, or any one of a number of other specialties which she enjoyed.

Her chief joy, in later years, seemed to be to share these outstanding delicacies with her friends.

HER GARDEN WAS the second of her three great interests. She knew where to order the seeds for the most colorful, most profuse and the hugest blooms of her favorite annuals. Some of the nation's largest and best known seed houses knew her as their oldest customer and they lamented with her the intrusion of weed seeds into their seed packages because modern employees no longer had the love of quality for quality's sake which their predecessors of her generation venerated.

Finally, there was her concern for the welfare of animals. She was a late 19th and early 20th Century equivalent of St. Francis of Assisi.

She was the principal founder of the Marin County Humane Society, more than 60 years ago. She did not miss a single one of the first 50 annual meetings and she served as an officer or director for nearly 60 years.

But she regularly declined the presidency. She was by nature a behind-the-scenes worker. As late as 1950, she was instrumental in founding the World Federation for Protection of Animals, but she did not attend the first meeting of the organization in The Netherlands and she held no office in it.

PERHAPS HER GREATEST ability was that of recruiting effective workers for the causes she espoused.

Sometimes the Independent-Journal is damned as being too independent.

But there was one individual — and only one — who could and did regularly influence the I-J for decades.

In 1907 when she founded the Humane Society in Marin, Miss. Tompkins enlisted the support of M. F. Cochrane, publisher of the then weekly Independent.

Harry Lutgens, editor and publisher of the San Rafael Independent when it became a daily, ultimately served as president of the Humane Society. He instituted the practice of carrying free advertising for the Humane Society in the classified section, to assist in finding homes for animals at the pound.

Today's editor of the I-J serves on the Humane Society's board of directors.

No other person in the newspaper's 108-year history ever exercised such influence. It is unthinkable that any person ever will again.

What was the secret of this power of personal persuasion?

Miss Tompkins was a true lady. One just doesn't disagree with a lady who commands, deservedly, full respect.

WHEN MISS TOMPKINS DIED last week, the I-J library biographical file proved woefully lacking in details about her. She shunned personal publicity. She refused to permit pictures taken of her for publication. She refused to submit to biographical interviews. It was, she said, not proper for a lady's name to appear in a newspaper. She would then chuckle and say of course that idea was old-fashioned and obsolete, but she couldn't help it; that was the way she felt.

No amount of persuasive talk could change her feelings.

What could be learned of her biography was fascinating.

Her grandfather, Daniel D. Tompkins of New York, served as vice president under James Munroe, fifth president of these United States, from 1817 to 1825.

WHILE MISS TOMPKINS WAS at all time a proper lady in every respect, she was human.

On rare occasions she would recall the occasion when, as a girl, she was expelled from an exclusive girls' school on Riverside Drive in New York City.

She tossed a secret note from a dormitory window to a handsome policeman who rode a beautiful horse along the parkway below, asking if she could ride the horse. He signalled affirmatively. She left the dormitory after hours without authorization, was observed riding the beautiful horse, and thereafter was suspended.

Miss Tompkins died at 93. The incident with the policeman's horse had to have taken place 75 years ago.

IN 1951, MISS TOMPKINS was voted by the nation's 600 humane organizations to be the outstanding humane worker in the U.S.A. She was then 75.

Characteristically, she declined an invitation to go to New York to accept the award personally. Subsequently, it was handed over to her at a simple ceremony in the Humane Society's office in San Rafael. She didn't bother to take it home.

Compassion for dumb animals is a necessary prerequisite to genuine concern for one's fellow man.

So it was that Miss Tompkins was a 19th and 20th Century counterpart of St. Francis who sought "total denial of self."

Her departure fills us with sorrow. We shall not live to see another like her.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Town Meeting Role Questioned

With reference to the recommendations to the San Anselmo City Council emanating from the "Town Meeting:"

Because the meeting this year was planned and conducted by a closed group of approximately 20 citizens who did not openly seek the participation of San Anselmo citizens at large, but meeting secretly throughout the year drew up a series of only six subjects for possible disucssion;

Because a great number of citizens did not see or have an opportunity to answer even these questions (3,800 questionnaires were said to have been distributed — only 100-200 were said to have been returned);

Because topics some citizens would like to have discussed were not taken up (not having been previously screened?);

Because the "Town Meeting' was represented to be sponsored this year by the San Anselmo Homes Association when in reality the last meeting of this body was in July 1968 and there was no discussion of such participation at that time. As a director (recording secretary — duly elected) of this organization, I have not been aware of any request for endorsement by the board of directors or the membership at large to sponsor this project. . . .

Because the hands of youngsters in the audience were counted in the "official" votes summing up the recommendations of the "Town Meeting" — and because a large proportion (almost half) of those guiding the separate discussion groups were not residents of San Anselmo;

Therefore, a number of San Anselmo citizens including myself earnestly hope that the individual members of the city council not abnegate their own responsibilities as elected officials to seek out and determine for themselves what are the real desires of the people of San Anselmo. The present recommendations are certainly not a mandate of the people of San Anselmo, but appear to be that of a controlled opinion-forming group.

Academic Senate Vote Criticized

The vote by the University of California Academic Senate to recommend turning a piece of state-owned property over to an irresponsible group of law-breakers, even though they are just overgrown children, is an excellent reason why the taxpayers should insist that their elected officials keep control of the activities of the educational system.

If, as the vote indicates, this property is not needed for academic use, it should be sold back to private ownership and returned to the tax rolls. This would not only help to relieve U. of C.'s money shortage but would save the cost of maintenance. Any program that had been planned for the property should be cancelled at an additional saving. Such a move might be a start on restoring some of the taxpayers confidence in the judgment of university officials.

The vote also confirms what productive members of society have long known, that, ability to learn and recall large amounts of knowledge does not always equate with ability to use that knowledge for constructive purposes, or to make workable decisions.

More Than One White In Class

I would like to complain about the article in the May 23 edition that's called "School Yard Race Strife." The part where it says, "The class which had eight white students when Chaka arrived now has only one" is a lie. I know of eight white students in his class now.

I think it is mean of you to put the article on the front page to ruin the school.

Judge 'Never Did A Day's Work'

Regarding the news item (May 27) about retiring Judge William O. Douglas, it is no wonder to me that people complain about the equities of life. Here is a man who received a large salary all his life, and probably never did a day's work in his life. Yet he will receive $60,000 a year for life. While some hard working person who built the country, and also may have served his country, may look forward to $149 a month frmm Social Security if and when he retires.

There is no social justice when things like this can happen.

LINES ON LIVING

Miracles All Around Us, Yet We See Them Not

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

I can never understand why some people find life so boring that they have to look for kicks and thrills to escape reality. As for myself, reality is miracle. The experience of the present moment is worth more than a thousand tales of magic and wonder.

Thus it was to Walt Whitman, who saw miracle in every hour of light and dark and in every cubic inch of space; to Voltaire, who perceived all miracle in the stupendous order of nature, the revolution of a hundred million worlds around a million suns; to W. Macneile Dixon, who sees miracles everywhere and observes nothing but the works of magic: "Nature is not natural, but supernatural, delighting in marvels. . . ."

YET, IT HAS ALL become a matter of routine for us, We have taken the familiar to become mundane, the everyday spectacle to be a bore, the wonder of the living moment in time and in space and in creation as a cosmic imbecility. We have found a convenient and useful word, "nature," to conceal deeper perceptions and meanings. We dismiss wonder, miracle and awe as the works of some stupendous "natural" compulsion and let it rest at that.

It often seems so senseless and visionless. Miracle is all around us. But when we ourselves partake of the miraculous, we soar closer to our destiny. Such has been the fate of our generation when we witnessed the breathtaking glimpses of our earthlings as they closed in with their spaceships on a suspended, cratered moon in a black and awesome sky.

Who says miracles don't happen in our time? They do. And, what's more important, we have made this one happen. Think of it: we have seen in our own days not the crossing of one marshy, unpassable Red Sea, but the navigating of vast oceans of the blackest black in a stark void of the universe! We are treading where angels were believed to soar: a quarter million miles in soundless and weightless space. Who else could have done this but miracle-maker, man?

DREAMS GO LONG WAY

San Rafael Railroader Gains High SP Position

By JOANNE BRANT

Long ago, Charles E. Neal dreamed of being a locomotive engineer — not an unusual ambition for a youngster who came from a long line of railroad men.

When he was 17, he went to work for the railroad, as a laborer in the roundhouse in Oakridge, Ore. And eventually, he did get to operate a train, but it wasn't to be his life's work.

Instead, he moved up through the ranks, as section foreman on the Shasta Division, then as general foreman supervising extension of the yard at Klamath Falls, Ore., next as a roadmaster and later as general track supervisor for all of Southern Pacific's west coast lines.

In 1953, he was assigned to San Rafael on a temporary basis as acting division engineer and shortly was appointed division engineer. Later he became vice president and general manager of Northwestern Pacific, a wholly owned subsidiary of Southern Pacific.

His most recent promotion moved him from his "temporary" San Rafael assignment to SP headquarters in San Francisco as assistant to the chief engineer of Southern Pacific.

Until that promotion last month, his only absence from the San Rafael office was from 1961 to 1963 when he was assistant engineer of maintenance of structures with duties in Texas and Louisiana. "I stayed right here and commuted by air," said Neal in an interview at his home, 27 Kinross Drive San Rafael.

His years with NWP in San Rafael were marked with disasters such as the 1955 floods in the Eel River Canyon which caused more than a million dollars worth of damage to the railroad.

"Looking back, that was just a prelude to the December 1964 flood," he recalled.

It was at the end of 1964 that flood waters in the Eel River canyon tore out two large steel bridges and heavily damaged a third and ruined 100 miles of roadbed, track and minor structures such as culverts.

Neal was in charge of the vast effort that went into rebuilding the road, but he tells the story like an observer, speaking frequently of the fantastic team effort by railroad employees and private contractors.

"We employed every modern machine we could use," Neal said, "and worked six or seven days a week." At one time, 900 men were working in 22 locations on various phases of the project.

It took only 177 days to get the trains running again and a total outlay of more than $13 million.

The road through the canyon took five or six years to build originally, with the work completed in September 1913. Its primary purpose, then and now, was to move forest products all over the United States.

Neal was also in charge of rebuilding the Puerto Suello hill tunnel which collapsed in 1961. He recalled it was necessary to line the tunnel with concrete to withstand the tremendous pressure.

Neal's wide knowledge of the work he loves so well shows, especially when he lets his pride surface. "Northwestern Pacific Railroad has 550 employees, 67 here in Marin. It does about $9.5 million to $10 million worth of transportation business a year.

"We are one of the largest taxpayers in the area," he added, noting city and county taxes in Marin and four other counties the line serves exceed a total of $270,000 a year.

He knows how many miles of track are in the system — 350 miles; the number of customers — 156; what they ship and how much — one area sends out as many as 900 to 1,000 carloads of pears a year.

In his 42 years with the company, he has seen dozens of changes, ranging from the transition from steam to diesel power to improvements in cars and equipment to the current switch to computers.

He has also watched, nostalgically, the disappearance of passenger trains. Northwestern Pacific still has one car, self-propelled, which operates between Willits and Eureka with a crew of three and sometimes has more crewmen than passengers.

"The trains didn't go away from the people; the people went away from the trains," he said, adding that he doesn't think they will ever be revived as more and more people travel by plane and private car.

He pointed out that in countries where trains are successfully carrying passengers such as Japan the government heavily subsidizes the operation.

However, he sees the freight business thriving and commented, "I sort of wish I were young again so I could start all over."

Outside of railroading, Neal's major interest is family, wife Norma who works at Crocker-Citizens bank; son Michael, a student at Sonoma State College, and daughter Norma Candice who will graduate from Oregon State University this month.

And next comes Junior Achievement, with Neal serving as a director of the San Francisco Bay Area Junior Achievement. "I derive a great deal of pleasure from working with young people," he said.

IN THE FIELD — Charles E. Neal, newly appointed assistant to the chief engineer of Southern Pacific, dons hard hat and takes to the field whenever the need arises. Neal, of San Rafael, had been vice president and general manager of Northwestern Pacific Railroad before his promotion.

DREAMS GO LONG WAY

San Rafael Railroader Gains High SP Position

By JOANNE BRANT

Long ago, Charles E. Neal dreamed of being a locomotive engineer — not an unusual ambition for a youngster who came from a long line of railroad men.

When he was 17, he went to work for the railroad, as a laborer in the roundhouse in Oakridge, Ore. And eventually, he did get to operate a train, but it wasn't to be his life's work.

Instead, he moved up through the ranks, as section foreman on the Shasta Division, then as general foreman supervising extension of the yard at Klamath Falls, Ore., next as a roadmaster and later as general track supervisor for all of Southern Pacific's west coast lines.

In 1953, he was assigned to San Rafael on a temporary basis as acting division engineer and shortly was appointed division engineer. Later he became vice president and general manager of Northwestern Pacific, a wholly owned subsidiary of Southern Pacific.

His most recent promotion moved him from his "temporary" San Rafael assignment to SP headquarters in San Francisco as assistant to the chief engineer of Southern Pacific.

Until that promotion last month, his only absence from the San Rafael office was from 1961 to 1963 when he was assistant engineer of maintenance of structures with duties in Texas and Louisiana. "I stayed right here and commuted by air," said Neal in an interview at his home, 27 Kinross Drive San Rafael.

His years with NWP in San Rafael were marked with disasters such as the 1955 floods in the Eel River Canyon which caused more than a million dollars worth of damage to the railroad.

"Looking back, that was just a prelude to the December 1964 flood," he recalled.

It was at the end of 1964 that flood waters in the Eel River canyon tore out two large steel bridges and heavily damaged a third and ruined 100 miles of roadbed, track and minor structures such as culverts.

Neal was in charge of the vast effort that went into rebuilding the road, but he tells the story like an observer, speaking frequently of the fantastic team effort by railroad employees and private contractors.

"We employed every modern machine we could use," Neal said, "and worked six or seven days a week." At one time, 900 men were working in 22 locations on various phases of the project.

It took only 177 days to get the trains running again and a total outlay of more than $13 million.

The road through the canyon took five or six years to build originally, with the work completed in September 1913. Its primary purpose, then and now, was to move forest products all over the United States.

Neal was also in charge of rebuilding the Puerto Suello hill tunnel which collapsed in 1961. He recalled it was necessary to line the tunnel with concrete to withstand the tremendous pressure.

Neal's wide knowledge of the work he loves so well shows, especially when he lets his pride surface. "Northwestern Pacific Railroad has 550 employees, 67 here in Marin. It does about $9.5 million to $10 million worth of transportation business a year.

"We are one of the largest taxpayers in the area," he added, noting city and county taxes in Marin and four other counties the line serves exceed a total of $270,000 a year.

He knows how many miles of track are in the system — 350 miles; the number of customers — 156; what they ship and how much — one area sends out as many as 900 to 1,000 carloads of pears a year.

In his 42 years with the company, he has seen dozens of changes, ranging from the transition from steam to diesel power to improvements in cars and equipment to the current switch to computers.

He has also watched, nostalgically, the disappearance of passenger trains. Northwestern Pacific still has one car, self-propelled, which operates between Willits and Eureka with a crew of three and sometimes has more crewmen than passengers.

"The trains didn't go away from the people; the people went away from the trains," he said, adding that he doesn't think they will ever be revived as more and more people travel by plane and private car.

He pointed out that in countries where trains are successfully carrying passengers such as Japan the government heavily subsidizes the operation.

However, he sees the freight business thriving and commented, "I sort of wish I were young again so I could start all over."

Outside of railroading, Neal's major interest is family, wife Norma who works at Crocker-Citizens bank; son Michael, a student at Sonoma State College, and daughter Norma Candice who will graduate from Oregon State University this month.

And next comes Junior Achievement, with Neal serving as a director of the San Francisco Bay Area Junior Achievement. "I derive a great deal of pleasure from working with young people," he said.

GRANT and GARRITSON,

TAYLORS, from Philadelphia,

TAKE this method of acquainting their Friends and the Public, that they now carry on their business in Market Street, two doors from Mrs. Chilton's Tavern, in this town, and will be greatly obliged to all Gentlemen who will be pleaſed to favour them with their commands, as they may depend on having their work done in the neateſt and moſt faſhionable manner, with care and diſpatch.

☞ As the above GRANT reſides and carries on the buſſineſs in PHILADELPHIA, he will be always ready to convey to his partner any new faſhions, either in making or in trimmings.

Mount Vernon in Virginia, July 15, 1773.

THE Subſcriber having obtained Patents for upwards of TWENTY THOUSAND Acres of LAND on the Ohio and Great Kanhawa (Ten Thouſand of which are ſituated on the banks of the firſt-mentioned river, between the mouths of the two Kanhawas, and the remainder on the Great Kanhawa, or New River, from the mouth, or near it, upwards, in one continued ſurvey) propoſes to divide the ſame into any ſized tenements that may be deſired, and leaſe them upon moderate terms, allowing a reaſonable number of years rent free, provided, within the ſpace of two years from next October, three acres for every ſifty contained in each lot, and proportionably for a leſſer quantity, ſhall be cleared, fenced, and tilled; and that, by or before the time limited for the commencement of the firſt rent, five acres for every hundred, and proportionably, as above, ſhall be encloſed and laid down in good graſs for meadow; and moreover, that at leaſt fifty good fruit trees for every like quantity of land ſhall be planted on the Premiſes. Any perſons inclinable to ſettle on theſe lands may be more fully informed of the terms by applying to the ſubſcriber, near Alexandria, or in his abſence, to Mr. LUND WASHINGTON; and would do well in communicating their intentions before the 1ſt of October next, in order that a ſufficient number of lots may be laid off to anſwer the demand.

As theſe lands are among the firſt which have been ſurveyed in the part of the country they lie in, it is almoſt needleſs to premiſe that none can exceed them in luxuriance of ſoil, or convenience of ſituation, all of them lying upon the banks either of the Ohio or Kanhawa, and abounding with fine fiſh and wild fowl of various kinds, as alſo in moſt excellent meadows, many of which (by the bountiful hand of nature) are, in their preſent ſtate, almoſt fit for the ſcythe. From every part of theſe lands water carriage is now had to Fort Pitt, by an eaſy communication; and from Fort Pitt, up the Monongahela, to Redſtone, veſſels of convenient burthen, may and do paſs continually; from whence, by means of Cheat River, and other navigable branches of the Monongahela, it is thought the portage to Powtowmack may, and will, be reduced within the compaſs of a few miles, to the great eaſe and convenience of the ſettlers in tranſporting the produce of their lands to market. To which may be added, that as patents have now actually paſſed the ſeals for the ſeveral tracts here offered to be leaſed, ſettlers on them may cultivate and enjoy the lands in peace and ſafety, notwithſtanding the unſettled counſels reſpecting a new colony on the Ohio; and as no right money is to be paid for theſe lands, and quitrent of two ſhillings ſterling a hundred, demandable ſome years hence only, it is highly preſumable that they will always be held upon a more deſirable footing than where both theſe are laid on with a very heavy hand. And it may not be amiſs further to obſerve, that if the ſcheme for eſtabliſhing a new government on the Ohio, in the manner talked of, ſhould ever be affected, theſe muſt be among the moſt valuable lands in it, not only on account of the goodneſs of ſoil, and the other advantages above enumerated, but from their contiguity to the ſeat of government, which more than probable will be fixed at the mouth of the Great Kanhawa.

ALTHOUGH HE stands four inches less than five feet tall, Robert Ray Burgan still uses standard appliances and fixtures to keep house in his Corte Madera home, thanks to a number of strategically-located two-step ladders. When You Stand But Four-Feet-Eight

By GIL PEARSON

If holding your job depended on loading a truck with 90-pound, five-foot sacks of fertilizer, and you stood but four-feet-eight-inches tall — what the heck would you do about it?

The solution becomes a matter of brain rather than brawn as worked out by one Robert Ray Burgan, a 125-pound employee of the California State Division of Highways.

"I can't lift that much bulk," Bob says, "so I break it open and load by bucketsful."

Marinites by the thousands know Bob by sight because he has held on to his Highway 101 landscape maintenance job between the Golden Gate Bridge and Marinwood and Tiburon over the past six years.

He says: "Weeding and brush-hidden litter clearing are my forte because I am close to the ground and don't have to stoop as far as tall people."

BOB BURGAN'S gutsy attitude toward his job is in character with his total outlook on life. He looks you right in the eye when he says:

"God put little people on earth for some reason. He would not have done this if there wasn't some calling for us."

And he adds:

"I can't believe that anybody, regardless of size, goes through life without problems. Other than being short, the little people lead lives very similar to average-sized persons. Our special hurdles are clothes and jobs.

"I used to buy clothes and then have them fitted. But today alteration cost is such that it pays to get made-to-order suits.

"I've had a job every since I finished Tamalpais High School because I found I liked the landscaping field and was willing to learn it in courses offered by College of Marin and the state highway department. I hope to eventually take the exam for foreman.

"But many little people have a hard time finding jobs. Those who can convince employers that they are just as capable as big people usually prove their abilities in a short time. We have people in all the different fields — machinists, teachers, accountants, engineers, and on and on.

"Contrary to popular speculation, only about 2 per cent of America's dwarfs are in show business."

WHEN WE HAD completed our interview and picture-taking at Bob Burgan's home in Corte Madera, we drove off with the feeling that we had just met a very fine clean-cut and sensible gentleman.

EXCITING NEWS FOR MARIN COUNTY HOME-BUYERS!

You name it... we'll build it on a view site at Peacock Crest

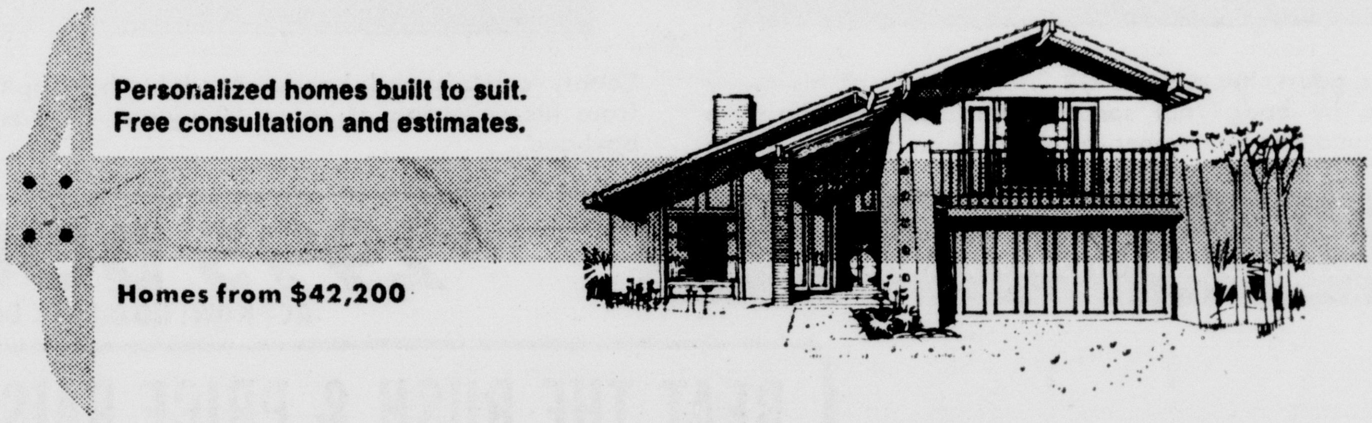
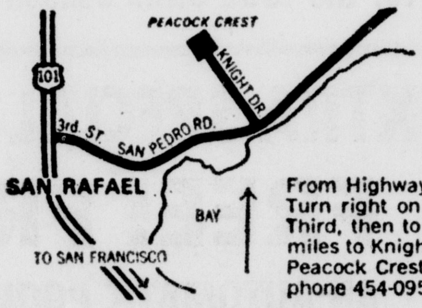
Never before a chance like this! A home built to your wishes at a fraction of the cost you'd expect. See Peacock Crest (with the famous view!). Inspect the models, and five basic plans. Decide what you'd like to "keep" or change. (You may want one exactly as is.) Work directly with our architects. Maybe another room? Special den? Recreation center? Studio? Larger? Smaller? You name it . . . we'll build it. You'll save thousands compared to conventional architect/builder methods – because you'll start with Boise Cascade's volume building techniques and basic plans already created. Imagine how costly it would be to spend hours with a private architect and work from scratch. Your Boise Cascade team provides a firm estimate and time schedule on the customized home you wish . . . built exactly as you want it for your family. No, you've never heard of this being done before by a volume builder with "volume savings." So hurry! See for yourself. NOW, at Peacock Crest.



Personalized homes built to suit.
Free consultation and estimates.

Homes from $42,200



From Highway 101, take San Rafael turnoff. Turn right on Second St., which changes to Third, then to San Pedro Road. Go about 2½ miles to Knight Drive, and left up the slope to Peacock Crest. Open 10 'til dark daily. Telephone 454-0950.

AND SEE PARKWOOD ESTATES IN NOVATO: UNIT #2 NOW OPEN!

Since Opening Day, a couple of months back, Parkwood Estates has proved to be one of the most exciting new communities in all Marin County. On opening day, 19 homes were sold in four hours. Buyers are delighted with the superb pastoral setting adjacent to San Marin Park in Novato. The first unit is now sold out, according to Division Manager Kenneth Johnson, and Unit Two's 34 homes are now available. Prices start at a pleasant $28,750, for all-new 3 and 4 bedroom homes featuring Boise Cascade's Panovista kitchen loaded with built-ins.

The rolling-hills environment of Parkwood Estates is like a serene world apart . . . yet just minutes from Marin shopping and an easy commute for San Francisco commuters. Furnished models are open daily until dark. From Highway 101, north of central Novato, take San Marin Road west (left) to San Andreas. Then turn left to San Miguel, where a right turn brings you to Parkwood Estates models. "Public demand for our new homes is so great," said Johnson, "that we can only urge people who want to live comfortably in Marvelous Marin to come out early while selection is still broad."

may marry within the next two years"), this only child of normal-sized parents lives alone with his cat in a neatly kept three-bedroom house which contains all modern appliances. His interests are widespread.

He is a camera bug ("just bought a new Spotmatic Pentax"). He has played the drums in various combos throughout Marin ("the Cordlords, in particular"). He directs the handbell choir at the Mill Valley Methodist Church where he also sings bass for the regular Sunday choir.

IN ADDITION, Bob can drive a motorcycle. And he rides horseback and has the hobby of collecting horse figurines, plaques and paintings. A large-scale copy of the painting "Free As The Wind" is featured in his living room.

He drives himself to work in a 1967 Dodge equipped with one-foot extensions of the foot pedals ("they cost me $50"). He cooks, and he does his laundry in an upright washer-over-dryer which he can reach by standing on one of a number of his specially-built two-step step ladders. He uses others for shaving and doing the dishes.

And he dances at parties given by little people.

WHILE BOB has a quick wit ("we little ones try to think big"), he does not smile readily. Perhaps this is because he is obsessed with the drive to help other, less aggressive little people.

We soon found out that his only interest in a feature story about him is that his experiences might provide opportunity and inspiration for other little people in Marin to learn that they can broaden their lives if they will but reach out, as he has, and overcome timidity.

He says, "I want little folks under four feet 10 inches or their parents to write me at 629 Meadowsweet Drive in Corte Madera. I want to tell them of the many advantages they can enjoy by joining our national association, the Little People of America Inc.

"I, myself, delayed joining for many years because I felt I should try getting along in the world of tall people on my own hook. But that was a mistake. The association really does a lot of good psychologically and practically.

"FOR INSTANCE, there is Mrs. Harriet Stickney who is a member of our District 12 in San Francisco and who is in charge of the Parent-Auxiliary. This service helps parents who have dwarfs to help these youngsters solve their problems in getting along with regular-size children.

"For example, parents who have a little person and also children of normal size are advised to treat the little one exactly like the others and not to show any deference."

"In my own case," Bob recalls, "my parents would tell me to go and get my own chair rather than get it for me. But I must also add that their affection is something I'll always cherish.

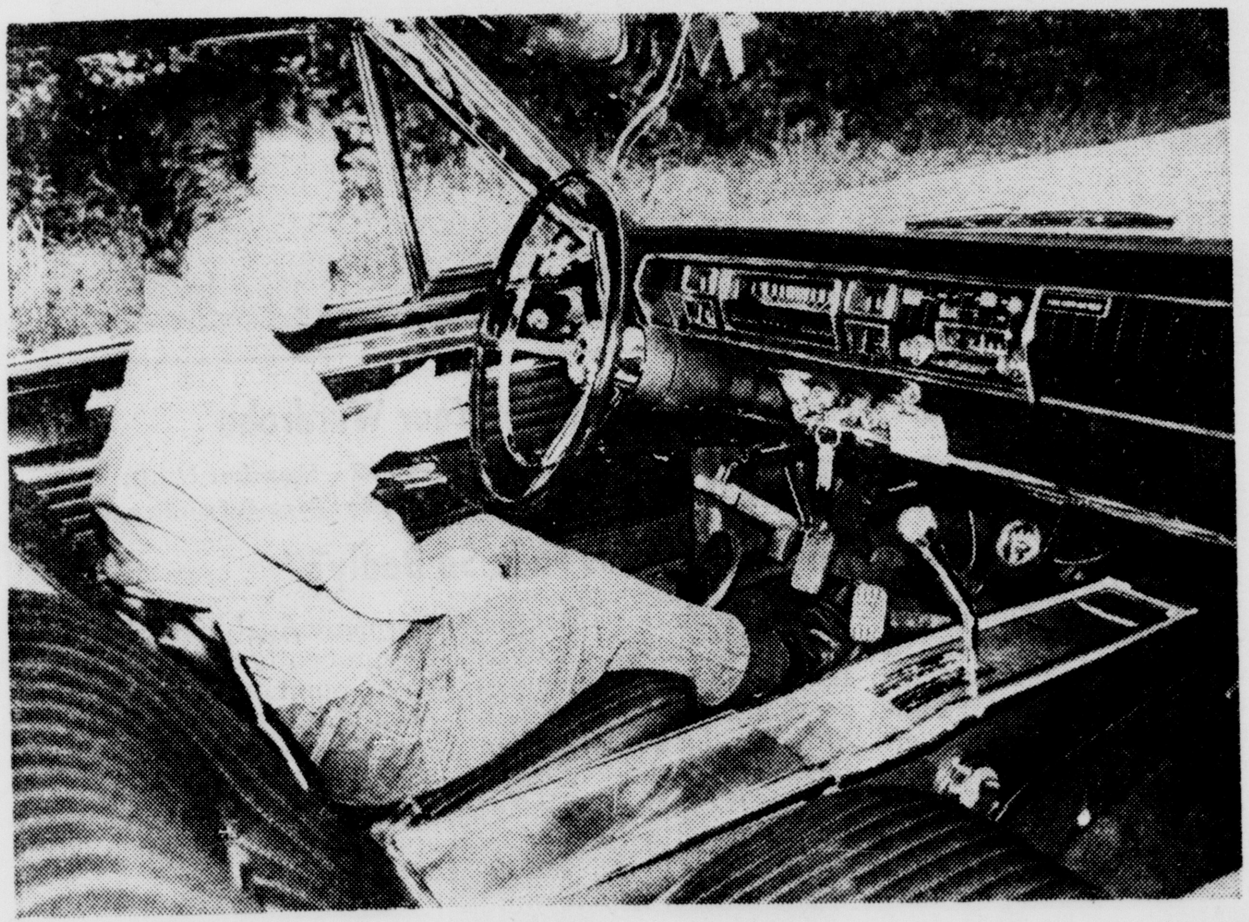
"As a child I was annoyed by the pranks of the big kids, but as I grew older (if not up) I got so I just laughed it off and forgot it."

Bob East, another member of Little People Of America, makes automobile pedal extensions for the little people all around the nation.

NO REPORTER today could close out a story of this type without editorializing that the 850 dwarf members of Little People Of America Inc., one of America's most overlooked minorities, take a positive posture toward meeting and resolving their problems.

Bob Burgan is representative of that affirmative attitude.

THE VERY busy Bob Burgan, at one of his several special interests and activities, directs the youthful handbell choir of Mill Valley's Methodist Church. He also sings bass with the church's voice choir.



THE 1967 DODGE automobile that Bob Burgan drives has been equipped with special one-foot extensions of the foot pedals so that they can be reached by the driver's short legs. The extensions were made by a friend.

IN RESTORING paintings removed from the walls of the University of California's Blake House during a renovation program, conservators Margit B. Jensen and Doreen M. Vallis came upon a particularly challenging canvas—a portrait of Nell Gwynne, mistress of England's King Charles I. In upper left photo, that painting is shown in an early stage of cleaning. At upper right, the detail of the woman's right hand has begun to emerge from the blackness of the canvas. At lower left, the hands are shown to be resting on a torture wheel. Also apparent is the contrast between those sections of the painting that have been cleaned and those that have not. At lower right, the fully restored portrait. "What Made My Print Dress Fade So Badly?"

Your dress faded because of the manner in which the design was applied. Bright, colorful summer prints on cotton, rayon or polyester blend garments usually are pigment-printed and do not hold up under drycleaning. This is not true of all, but the majority of such suits, blouses, slacks and dresses are dyed by this more economical method and will not retain their brilliant colors when drycleaned. Many of these garments can be wet-cleaned satisfactorily.

According to the National Institute of Drycleaning Garment Analysis Laboratory, recently an unusually large number of pigment printed fabrics have been received for testing and all had a substantial loss of color. It is the method of applying the dye which is at fault.

New Beauty From Some Old Paintings

By SUZANNE D. STAMLER

Despite the agitation of young militants, art circles these days are more likely to think of the University of California in Berkeley in connection with restoration than revolution.

This is because of the efforts of two women, art conservators Margit B. Jensen of Fairfax and Doreen M. Vallis of San Francisco.

Decrepit and obscured paintings removed from the walls of Blake House, the university president's residence in Berkeley, during its renovation, were sent to the team of Vallis and Jensen in their San Francisco studio for restoration. The result: some masterpieces that had gone unrecognized or at least unappreciated.

ONE OF special interest is a Sir Peter Lee portrait of Nell Gwynne, first mistress of England's King Charles I, pictured in the role of St. Catherine martyred at the torture wheel.

During their restoration, the art expert noticed a crackling quality on the left side of the canvas that was not apparent elsewhere. Their curiosity aroused by this irregularity, they cautiously proceeded to clean that area until, to their delight, they disclosed a previously entirely hidden hand, resting on a torture wheel.

Mrs. Jensen suspects that the hand had been concealed purposely by a coat of dark paint.

"It is possible," she says wryly, "that the church didn't want a woman of Nell's reputation to portray a saint."

IN THEIR unusual profession of restoration and conservation of paintings, murals and interiors, the two women say, there are continuous surprises such as frequent uncovering of disguises.

A Marin attorney entrusted Mrs. Jensen with the restoration of a painting, and unexpectedly wound up with two paintings.

Rarely, the restorer says, does she find two paintings in one. But this time she did — oil on canvas glued to each side of a piece of cardboard. The lawyer agreed to the separation of the canvases and the relining of each with a resinous wax band on linen.

HE PLANS now to take the two paintings to England to establish their authenticity as possible masterpieces.

Asked about other highlights from her career as a conservator, Mrs. Jensen recalls when she and her partner, who hails from England, rescued a painting badly in disrepair from a basement of a private home during an auction in San Francisco.

"Actually I was there to bid for a chair," she relates. "But I spied this neglected painting, asked if it was to be auctioned, and was told it was worthless and would be discarded."

INSTEAD, SHE says, it turned out to be a masterpiece by Gustave Dore of the interior of St. Lorenz Cathedral in Nuremberg. "It is now on sale, and we have hopes it will be sold rewardingly."

Mrs. Jensen is also known as Margit Melbye, artist and designer. She is a descendant of Wilhem and Anton Melbye, two illustrious Danish marine painters.

At 18 she turned her talents to the exacting art of china painting, a pursuit that was fashionable among young Danish ladies in that day. She was to become chief designer for Lennox Chinaware, and one of the Castleton designers of a White House dinner service for President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

THE DISCIPLINE from the exacting art of china painting, she says, has served her in good stead in her art restoration work, particularly the "in-painting" or detailed touching up within the damaged areas, that must be done flawlessly, sometimes almost miraculously.

Mrs. Jensen received her training in restoration as an apprentice to a renowned German restorer before establishing her partnership in San Francisco with Miss Vallis. The latter had worked with Henry Rusk at the DeYoung Memorial Museum.

In addition to the restoration of paintings, Mrs. Jensen and Miss Vallis have collaborated in supervising the conservation of three conference rooms in the historic U.S. Customs House in San Francisco.

THE TWO congenial conservators occupy a spacious studio and gallery at 3615 Sacramento Street, San Francisco.

There in the midst of work tables, stretcher boards, wax heaters and assorted chemicals stands a most impressive piece of equipment they call "the hot table."

Used for the wax-resinous relining of paintings, it is electronic, hydraulic and vacuum in its operation.

Miss Vallis recalls that "Mr. Murray Pease, the late conservator of the Metropolitan Museum in New York, once remarked that if he could re-design his own 'hot table,' it would be planned so that it would heat up absolutely evenly over its entire surface, and would cool down quickly in the event of an emergency."

THE VALLIS-JENSEN hot table does just that, and much more under their expert supervision and operation.

Asked about the hazards that confront fine art and particularly paintings, Mrs. Jensen replies:

"Fire, flood, earthquake and explosion are all minor mishaps compared to the disastrous results inflicted by the do-it-yourselfers — the artists and the owners of art who try to improve upon the paintings without adequate professional training or equipment."

And her partner nods her wholehearted agreement.

Despite the agitation of young militants, art circles these days are more likely to think of the University of California in Berkeley in connection with restoration than revolution.

This is because of the efforts of two women, art conservators Margit B. Jensen of Fairfax and Doreen M. Vallis of San Francisco.

Decrepit and obscured paintings removed from the walls of Blake House, the university president's residence in Berkeley, during its renovation, were sent to the team of Vallis and Jensen in their San Francisco studio for restoration. The result: some masterpieces that had gone unrecognized or at least unappreciated.

ONE OF special interest is a Sir Peter Lee portrait of Nell Gwynne, first mistress of England's King Charles I, pictured in the role of St. Catherine martyred at the torture wheel.

During their restoration, the art expert noticed a crackling quality on the left side of the canvas that was not apparent elsewhere. Their curiosity aroused by this irregularity, they cautiously proceeded to clean that area until, to their delight, they disclosed a previously entirely hidden hand, resting on a torture wheel.

Mrs. Jensen suspects that the hand had been concealed purposely by a coat of dark paint.

"It is possible," she says wryly, "that the church didn't want a woman of Nell's reputation to portray a saint."

IN THEIR unusual profession of restoration and conservation of paintings, murals and interiors, the two women say, there are continuous surprises such as frequent uncovering of disguises.

A Marin attorney entrusted Mrs. Jensen with the restoration of a painting, and unexpectedly wound up with two paintings.

Rarely, the restorer says, does she find two paintings in one. But this time she did — oil on canvas glued to each side of a piece of cardboard. The lawyer agreed to the separation of the canvases and the relining of each with a resinous wax band on linen.

HE PLANS now to take the two paintings to England to establish their authenticity as possible masterpieces.

Asked about other highlights from her career as a conservator, Mrs. Jensen recalls when she and her partner, who hails from England, rescued a painting badly in disrepair from a basement of a private home during an auction in San Francisco.

"Actually I was there to bid for a chair," she relates. "But I spied this neglected painting, asked if it was to be auctioned, and was told it was worthless and would be discarded."

INSTEAD, SHE says, it turned out to be a masterpiece by Gustave Dore of the interior of St. Lorenz Cathedral in Nuremberg. "It is now on sale, and we have hopes it will be sold rewardingly."

Mrs. Jensen is also known as Margit Melbye, artist and designer. She is a descendant of Wilhem and Anton Melbye, two illustrious Danish marine painters.

At 18 she turned her talents to the exacting art of china painting, a pursuit that was fashionable among young Danish ladies in that day. She was to become chief designer for Lennox Chinaware, and one of the Castleton designers of a White House dinner service for President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

THE DISCIPLINE from the exacting art of china painting, she says, has served her in good stead in her art restoration work, particularly the "in-painting" or detailed touching up within the damaged areas, that must be done flawlessly, sometimes almost miraculously.

Mrs. Jensen received her training in restoration as an apprentice to a renowned German restorer before establishing her partnership in San Francisco with Miss Vallis. The latter had worked with Henry Rusk at the DeYoung Memorial Museum.

In addition to the restoration of paintings, Mrs. Jensen and Miss Vallis have collaborated in supervising the conservation of three conference rooms in the historic U.S. Customs House in San Francisco.

THE TWO congenial conservators occupy a spacious studio and gallery at 3615 Sacramento Street, San Francisco.

There in the midst of work tables, stretcher boards, wax heaters and assorted chemicals stands a most impressive piece of equipment they call "the hot table."

Used for the wax-resinous relining of paintings, it is electronic, hydraulic and vacuum in its operation.

Miss Vallis recalls that "Mr. Murray Pease, the late conservator of the Metropolitan Museum in New York, once remarked that if he could re-design his own 'hot table,' it would be planned so that it would heat up absolutely evenly over its entire surface, and would cool down quickly in the event of an emergency."

THE VALLIS-JENSEN hot table does just that, and much more under their expert supervision and operation.

Asked about the hazards that confront fine art and particularly paintings, Mrs. Jensen replies:

"Fire, flood, earthquake and explosion are all minor mishaps compared to the disastrous results inflicted by the do-it-yourselfers — the artists and the owners of art who try to improve upon the paintings without adequate professional training or equipment."

And her partner nods her wholehearted agreement.

The Colonel's Collection Of Americana

The newspaper advertisement extolls the virtues of 20,000 acres of bottom land for lease in parcels along the banks of the Ohio and Great Kanhawa rivers in Virginia.

The property is rich in soil, fowl and fish, potential buyers are assured by its surveyor.

But even if you find the described real estate appealing, you are a little late — nearly two centuries late — to make a deal, as indicated by the printed signature of the surveyor and developer.

THE NAME is that of George Washington, the most famous surveyor of them all. And the year was 1773.

The advertisement appeared in the Aug. 20, 1773, issue of the Maryland Journal and Baltimore Advertiser. And a well-preserved copy of the newspaper is one of the prized possessions of Col. Alan B. White, deputy commander, Sixth Region, Army Air Defense Command, at Marin's Fort Baker.

In part the advertisement that ran over the signature of the man who never told a lie and who was to become this country's first President promised prospective settlers that "the most excellent meadows" were, thanks to "the bountiful hand of nature ... almost fit for the scythe."

A SECOND item of Americana belonging to Colonel White is a May 17, 1837, copy of The Baltimore Sun.

Its pages would indicate that credibility gaps and urban disorders are not entirely new to America.

Concerning a report of the capture of a band of hostile Indians in Florida, the skeptical editor wrote:

"WHILE WE hope that this report may prove to be true, we must candidly confess that we doubt it. Osceola has been reported to have been captured so often and yet has not been caught, and the Florida war has been so often closed, and yet not closed at all, that one is obliged to exercise unusual credulity before he can believe one word of anything received in relation to Florida or the famous Indian chieftain."

And in the same paper, under the headline "Anticipated Disorders," it was noted:

"The laboring portion of the New York population is becoming dissatisfied, discontented, mad by the prospect before them."

THE REASON, the newspaper reported, was a bank failure where the laborers had deposited their hard-earned savings.

"The aspect of these men was menacing in the extreme," the story went on. "... their half-suppressed murmurs, and whispered execrations, but too well and too fearfully indicated the approach of one of those civil convulsions which spread deso-

To the PUBLIC.

THE great Difficulty and experience of Speedily obtaining a proper Aſſortment of Printing Materials, an inadequate Number of Subſcribers to defray the Charge of printing a weekly News-Paper, added to ſeveral unfortunate Events which have happened to me, have been the Reaſons why the MARYLAND JOURNAL and BALTIMORE ADVERTISER, ſo long expected, hath not before made its appearance. This, I flatter myſelf, will be conſidered an ample Apology, in the Minds of the Candid, for the long Delay in publiſhing it.— Many Gentlemen, however, encouraging me to hope for a conſiderable Addition to my Liſt of Subſcribers, I now venture to ſend the firſt Number abroad; and while I ſolicit the further Encouragement of the Public, I humbly beſpeak a candid Reception for this Beginning, which, I am ſenſible, muſt appear under many Diſadvantages, as I have not yet been able to eſtabliſh a ſpecial Poſt from this Place to Philadelphia, for the Purpoſe of bringing down, in due Seaſon, the lateſt Papers.

MY LORD,

THOUGH I preſume to addreſs myſelf to your Lordſhip on a ſubject in which you are unfortunately but too much intereſted, it is not my intention, by any means, to wound the ſenſibility of your temper, or to queſtion the benevolence of your heart. I am ſure you are a brave man, and I hear you are as good a man as any to be found among the youth of condition in this kingdom; yet, pardon me, my Lord, if I ſay that our youth of condition do not want advice upon any point ſo much as upon the point of honour, with which they fancy themſelves ſo intimately acquainted; and let me inform you, a father of the Church now begs your moſt ſerious attention, that, through your Lordſhip, he may communicate a few obſervations to the world, no leſs neceſſary to maintain the laws of his country than to enforce the commandments of his God.

Be not, however, terrified, my Lord, though an old man, and that man of ſome eccleſiaſtical conſequence too, breaks this abruptly on your retirement: He will talk to you as faſhionably as if he did not think religiouſly, and make (the better to anſwer his purpoſe) a ſerious queſtion in morals, an object of polite inveſtigation. To drop the third perſon, my Lord, I know experimentally what the paſſions are at your time of life; young men prefer any criminality with which meanneſs is not connected, to the ſlighteſt idea of diſhonour; they do not fear to commit a flagitious action ſo much as to be concerned in a fooliſh one; and there are particular crimes, ſuch as duelling, for inſtance, in which cuſtom has made it glory not only to ſacrifice every dictate of our reaſon, but every we may be ſuppoſed to poſſeſs a little ſhare of underſtanding. Give me leave, therefore, to aſk you ſeriouſly, whether any thing can be ſo abſurd as the faſhionable practice of duelling? We receive an affront, and we endanger our lives; we expoſe the long liſt of our friends to diſtreſs; we hazard all the glowing expectations of our tendereſt ſocial ties, all our deareſt proſpects in this world, and all our greateſt in the next, to—to do what? I bluſh, my Lord, at my own queſtion, puniſh ſome act of incivillity that ſhould excite our contempt, or ſome diſreſpect which is wholly below our indignation. The man who is not ready to apologize for any offence he offers another does not deſerve to be conſidered as a gentleman; yet, ſuppoſing the caſe otherwiſe, the offence ought indeed to be deadly which induces us to take away a life. If it is of ſuch magnitude as to require a bloody expiation, it ſhould be left to the laws; and if it is not, we ſurely rebel againſt the majeſty of our own hearts where we endeavor to wipe it away with blood.

In whatever light we look upon duelling, my Lord, I am perſuaded you will concur with me in thinking that it is founded no leſs in folly than in barbarity. Where we are even the victors, what is our triumph? A triumph over humanity, a triumph over juſtice, a triumph over our families, our country and our God. If our reaſon, therefore, is not alarmed at the very dangers attending this horribly cuſtom, our pride ſhould be rouſed [illegible] of weakneſs, to which it expoſes our characters. Colonel White, a native of Pennsylvania who makes his home at Fort Baker, says the two historic newspapers have been "in the family" for so long that no one is quite certain who first found them or when. MRS. JOHN WESTON relaxes in the comfortable living room of her San Rafael Park home. The room is on the middle of three levels. Arthur Wasser, of Wasser's Furniture Accents, San Anselmo, who did the interior design, combined contemporary and Mediterranean furnishings effectively, stressing heavy textures and unusual materials, in the attractive living room.

ANOTHER VIEW of the John Weston living room features the recessed fireplace of used brick that lends a warm and hospitable touch to the room. The picture partially hidden by the lamp is a Keane portrait of Mrs. Weston, painted when she was a featured performer with the Ice Follies.

THE FAMILY ROOM of the John Weston residence is a gay and colorful place, dominated by bright reds and brilliant blues. It serves not only as a fun and relaxation spot for the family, but also as an office for Weston, the KPIX-TV newscaster heard daily on Channel 5. His desk can be seen at left next to the staircase. A well furnished and decorated room is not complete without the proper wall decor. Rugs, draperies and furniture are a must, but it is often the placement of a fine little sketch or water color that creates interest, and at the same time, conversation. We have never had a better selection of fine reproductions, beautifully framed, for your perusal; from a lovely sea scape by Homer to fine drawings by Michelangelo.
You may benefit from our experience in selecting fine pieces without it costing you anymore. Call us at 454-4870.

Colombia—A Horizon Widener

South American Republic Beckons Yankee Tourists

By MURRAY J. BROWN

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Americans seeking to broaden their travel horizons might well look towards Colombia. This South American republic is not only easy to get to, but the prices are right.

Take the capital city of Bogota whose top hotels compare favorably with those in major cities in the United States and Europe.

The deluxe Inter-Continental Hotel Tequendama, generally recognized as the city's best and one of the finest we have stayed at anywhere, offers single rooms from about $13 and doubles from around $19 a day, with bath or shower, during the off-season.

IN SEASON rates are only slightly higher.

For those on a tighter budget, there are several first class hotels with singles from as low as $6 and doubles from $10 daily.

All better class hotels operate on the European plan (no meals), but dining out is surprisingly inexpensive, too. We had a continental breakfast of juice, roll and coffee at the Tequendama for 85 cents and lunched on a thick steak with trimmings in its cafeteria for $1.85.

RESTAURANTS, coffee shops and cafeterias, featuring all types of cuisine — French, Italian, Spanish and native, among others—offer full meals for as low as $1, including Colombian coffee, naturally. Black coffee is usually served in small demitasse cups and called "tinto." But you can order U.S. style or cafe con leche, for which milk, usually boiled, will be provided.

Man-sized steaks, lobsters and other delicacies run to about $2 in the better restaurants and you can eat your fill of arroz con polla (rice and chicken) or paella Valenciana (seafood and rice) for about $1.50. There are several exceptional restaurants where prices are higher if you feel like splurging.

LIQUOR PRICES are comparatively high, except for the locally produced aguardiente, rum and beer, which are good. But top brand U.S. cigarettes sell for about 25 cents a pack.

Transportation, including taxis, is cheap. And taxi drivers do not have to be tipped.

Otherwise, the usual tip is 10 per cent of the bill if service charge has not been included. Porters get two pesos, or about 12 cents U.S., per bag, and it is customary to leave a few pesos for the chambermaid for longer than one-night stays.

INCIDENTALLY, don't panic if you get a bill for, say, $100.

The dollar sign is used in Colombia for pesos — and $100 in pesos equals only about $6.20 in U.S. currency.

Many international airlines serve Colombia from the U.S.

We flew here non-stop from New York aboard an Avianca Boeing 720 intercontinental jetliner in about five and a half hours. Avianca also flies non-stop from Miami, about three and a half hours, and from U.S. West Coast cities via Mexico and Panama.

AVIANCA offers extra dividends for visitors in a special "Visit Colombia" fare. For $50, the tourist can buy 30 days of almost unlimited air travel on domestic routes with the sole proviso that any route may be flown but once. Avianca flies to more than 150 cities and communities in this republic on the northwestern tip of the South American continent.

For another $20, or a total of $70, the traveler can include a visit to Leticia, a jungle outpost in the Upper Amazon about four hours flying time south of Bogota, and go alligator hunting at night with Indian guides.

FOR THE same $70, he also can jet to the new resort island of San Andres in the Caribbean — about one hour 40 minutes north of Bogota — for water sports and free-port shopping.

Shoppers can find bargains in Bogota and other mainland cities. Excellent buys are available in emeralds — Colombia produces about 90 per cent o the world supply. But deal only with reliable firms or shops.

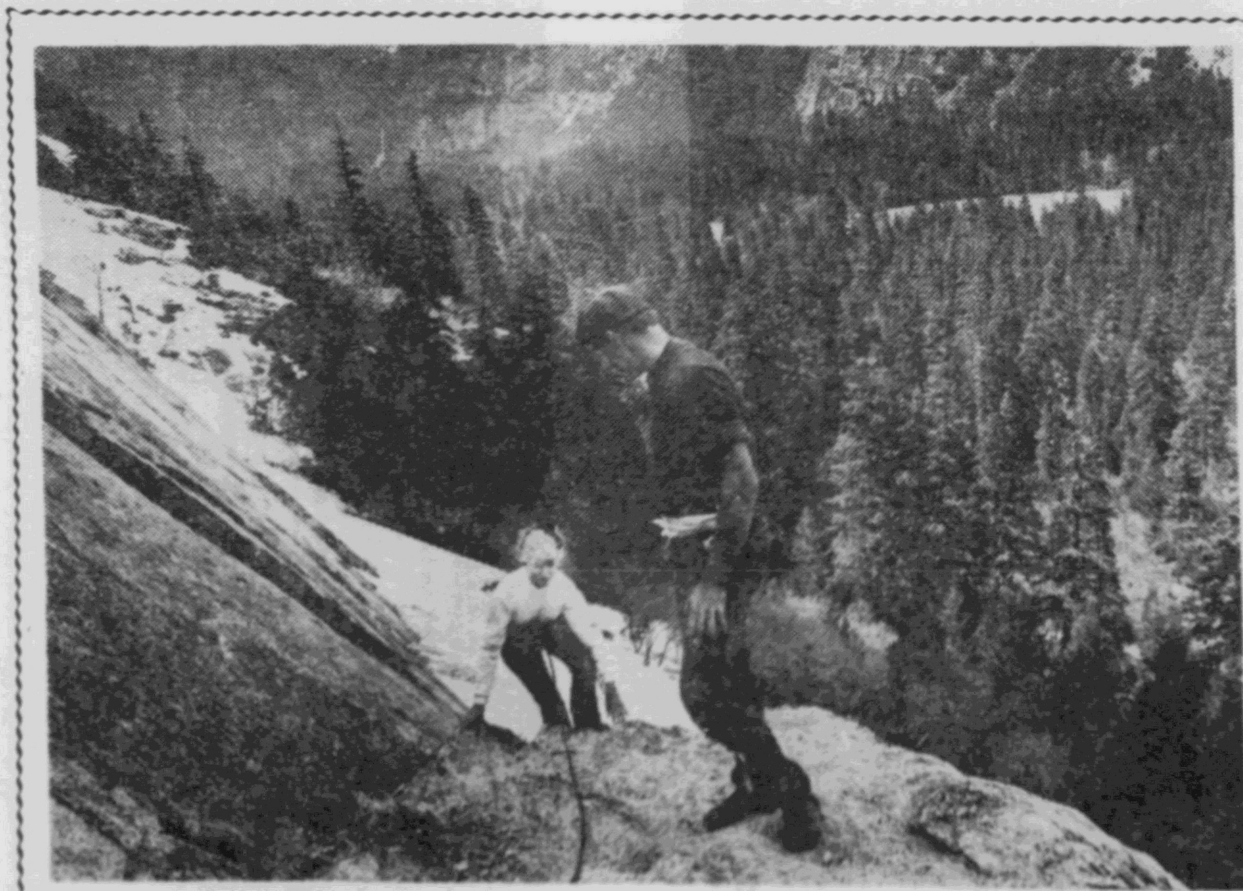
Other popular items includ gold and silver jewelry, alligator skin bags, woolen ruanas ponchos and other native handicrafts.

A RUANA could come i handy if you forget your top o rain coat. Temperatures in Bogota, about 9,000 feet up in th Andes, average 58 degree throughout the year. Both me and women wear ruanas.

For last-minute purchase there are tax-free shops at th El Dorado International Airpor But hold on to 75 pesos ($4.50 for your departure tax.

To visit Colombia, America tourists need proof of citizenshi (a passport is best), a touri card (two passport picture must be submitted) which ca be obtained free of charge, valid smallpox vaccination ce tificate and return or onwar passage ticket.

For additional information free booklets, you can write Avianca, 6 West 49th Stree New York, N.Y., 10020.



A NEW ATTRACTION at Yosemite National Park is the Yosemite Mountaineering School and Guide Service, operated by Yosemite Park and Curry Co. with National Park Service approval, and with veteran climber Wayne Merry as director. The new school is functioning from the Yosemite Lodge Sports Shop, but will move for the summer to the higher Tuolumne Meadows Lodge, returning to the valley in the fall. Courses offered include basic rock-climbing, intermediate rock-climbing, advanced rock-climbing, guided climbs and climbing tours. Says Merry: "You don't have to be a Paul Bunyan to be a mountain climber. The main ingredient is that you have a desire for a new experience unattainable in any other sport."

What To Do In Iceland?

You Can Stoke A Geyser Or Ogle The Blondes

Is there anything to do in Iceland?

Flense a whale! Stoke a geyser! Take a cross-country pony trek!

What else?

Climb a glacier! Cross the Arctic Circle! Drink "Black Death!" Fly over the world's newest volcanic island! Fish crystal streams and lakes for trout and salmon

Want more?

Swim with the president! Scale a sheer cliff for birds' eggs! Try a sauna bath! Play golf on an 18-hole volcanic lava course! Ogle the world's prettiest girls — tall, long-legged, mini-skirted blondes

Is that it?

Glide in the air! Descend into a volcanic crater! Pick bananas! Photograph the midnight sun! Stalk the rare Icelandic facon!

WHAT ABOUT social, cultural and culinary activities?

Swing at lively nightclubs! Eat Chinese food! Taste shark meat! Tour impressive museums and art galleries! Rhapsodize to a symphony led by an Israeli or Italian guest conductor! Enter the hallowed halls where the world's oldest parliament is in session!

The question really is not what you can do in Iceland, but what Iceland can do for you. There's a lot more, but why bother with details about 60-pound codfish, or visiting weird moon-like crater landscape where U.S. astronauts have trained.

IF YOU LIKE, skip any or all of these exciting attractions. There's incentive enough to go to Iceland on the simple basis that you won't have to tip your cab driver — or anyone else for that matter. There's no tipping in Iceland

Many of the 13,191 American tourists who visited Iceland last year will tell you that they "didn't pay a cent extra to get there," even though the island nation is 2,675 miles from New York. This is because they were passengers of Icelandic Airlines which permits stop-over in Iceland at no added air fare for travelers en route to the British Isles and mainland Europe.

First-time visitors are surprised to learn that the Kentucky-sized island sits right in the middle of the Gulf Stream and has a mild climate, despite its northern location. Temperatures in the lowlands average about 30 degrees in January, the coldest month. This is warmer than January in such cities as Boston, Chicago and Spokane.

Today, Iceland is populated largely by multi-colored sheep (they outnumber people four to one), many shaggy-maned little horses (the famed Icelandic "pony"), and some 200,000 descendants of Viking settlers and the comely lasses they kidnaped in raids along the Irish and Scottish coasts 1,000 years ago.

INDIVIDUALISTIC and rugged as their land, Icelanders nevertheless have built a dynamic welfare state in which they enjoy one of the highest standards of living in the world — spending more of their per capita income on education, health, cultural projects and other public works than any other people. Yet private industry thrives.

Also, on a per capita basis, play more, catch more fish, and are near the top of the list in number of telephones, cars and other modern amenities.

The island's per capita gross national product of $2,470 in 1965 topped such wealthy countries as the United Kingdom, West Germany and Denmark!

MORE THAN half the people live in or near the capital city of Reykjavik, the leading seaport and center of political, cultural and social activities. Attractions and facilities of the capital include the government buildings, University of Iceland, eight museums and art galleries, the National Theater and Symphony Orchestra, the Reykjavik City Theater, sports stadium, luxury hotels, nightclubs, restaurants, cinemas, modern department stores and quaint shops.

The two largest hotels, the 216-bed Loftleidir (opened 1966) and the 155-bed Saga (1962) share the distinction of being the northernmost luxury resorts in the world. Each has nightclubs, several cocktail bars and restaurants. All rooms in both have private bath or shower, telephone, artistic decor and other amenities. Both have Finnish-style sauna baths, and the Loftleidir has an indoor pool heated by hot spring water.

NIGHT LIFE moves at a frenzied pace in Reykjavik during summer months. There are more than a dozen night spots — and when they close, residents crowd the streets, under the midnight sun, walking or driving to the many all-night parties in progress at private homes.

The major clubs offer big-name international entertainment. Bands are lively, usually with the latest rock and mod beat.

Icelanders enjoy dining, drinking, dancing and dressing in style. When they speak about "Black Death," they're referring to the local, appropriately named, aquavitae.

THE DUTY-FREE store at Keflavik Airport offers a wide variety of imported liquors, perfumes, cameras and other goods at bargain prices. Best buys in local products include fluffy sheepskin rugs, $10 to $14; pony skins, $23 to $35 (extra large); handmade Icelandic wool sweaters, $12 for a pullover, $14 for a woman's cardigan, $15 for a man's cardigan; machine-made Icelandic sweaters, $10; silver filigree bracelets or earrings, $4 to $6; Icelandic wool shawls, $8.

Swimming is the most popular sport, enjoyed year-round in open air pools heated by natural hot springs. President Asgeir Asgeirsson of Iceland usually takes a dip every morning at one of the public pools in Reykjavik.

Gliding is popular (about $3 for 15 minutes) at a small airport near Reykjavik. You can golf at the capital's volcanic-strewn 18-hole course (under the midnight sun, if you desire night golf.)

PONY TREKKING is a favorite with visitors and residents. Ride for an hour ($3) or cross-country over glaciers and lava fields for a week ($12). Icelandic ponies have an easy, no bounce, "dog-like" gait which even novice riders can master in a matter of minutes.

Iceland's cold streams and lakes abound in brown trout (up to 26 pounds), char, salmon and other game species. The best streams, especially for salmon, are private, so arrangements for angling should be made beforehand through travel agents.

Fine sea angling (giant cod, ling, haddock, etc.) can be arranged by the Reykjavik Sea Anglers Club.

Hiking and mountain-climbing are popular, with several organized tours of three to 13 days.

WINTER SPORTS such as skiing or ice-skating are not always possible at Reykjavik because of the mild climate. However, there's a good ski hotel at Akureyi, third largest city in the country and main center in the north.

Sightseeing attractions include the original Great Geysir (for which all other spouting springs in the world were named). Geysir is getting old, but occasionally can be "stoked" into action by dropping soap flakes into its gaping mouth.

There are literally thousands of other geysers, boiling mudholes, steaming sulfur mountains and some of the world's largest waterfalls. These are fed by seven glaciers. Vatnajokull is larger than Rhode Island and Delaware combined.

YOU CAN FLY abut 70 miles south of Reykjavik and view the amazing island of Surtsey. Now tranquil and serene in the ocean ten miles from Iceland's coast, Surtsey rose from the sea in 1963 in a cataclysmic eruption that sent clouds of lava and steam five miles high in the sky. Surtsey now is more than a square mile in size; permanent and lava-covered — the newest island on earth!

Americans can remain in Iceland for up to three months without a visa. A passport is all that is needed.

The Travel Pages

BILLED AS THE "oldest railroad west of the Rockies," the 115-year-old Arcata and Mad River ("Annie and Mary") Railroad is running a restored 50-ton steam locomotive and four bright red passenger coaches on an 11-mile round-trip route out of its Blue Lake Depot near Eureka on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. The train leaves the depot at 1:30 p.m. and again at 3 p.m. Round trip fare is $2.50 for adults, $1.75 for children under 14. The railroad is owned by the Simpson Timber Co. and is a common carrier serving 11 lumber mills in the lower Mad River Valley. Says John W. Thompson, general superintendent, of his seven-and-a-half-mile-of-track line: "We are not as long as a lot of railroads, but we are just as wide as any of them."

NOTES TO TRAVEL BY

The $7 a year Golden Eagle Passport valid through March 31, 1970, is now on sale at all U.S. Forest Service stations and offices, and permits the holder and all companions in a private automobile to enter federal recreational sites without payment of the usual $1 daily fee . . . Hawaii's State Legislature has rejected all bills that would have imposed hotel, head or airport taxes upon tourists for the 1969-70 fiscal year . . . Available from Canadian Government Travel Bureau in Ottawa: a new publication, "Canada — Adventure Tours from the Trans-Canada Highway."

A Trite, Tedious Effort

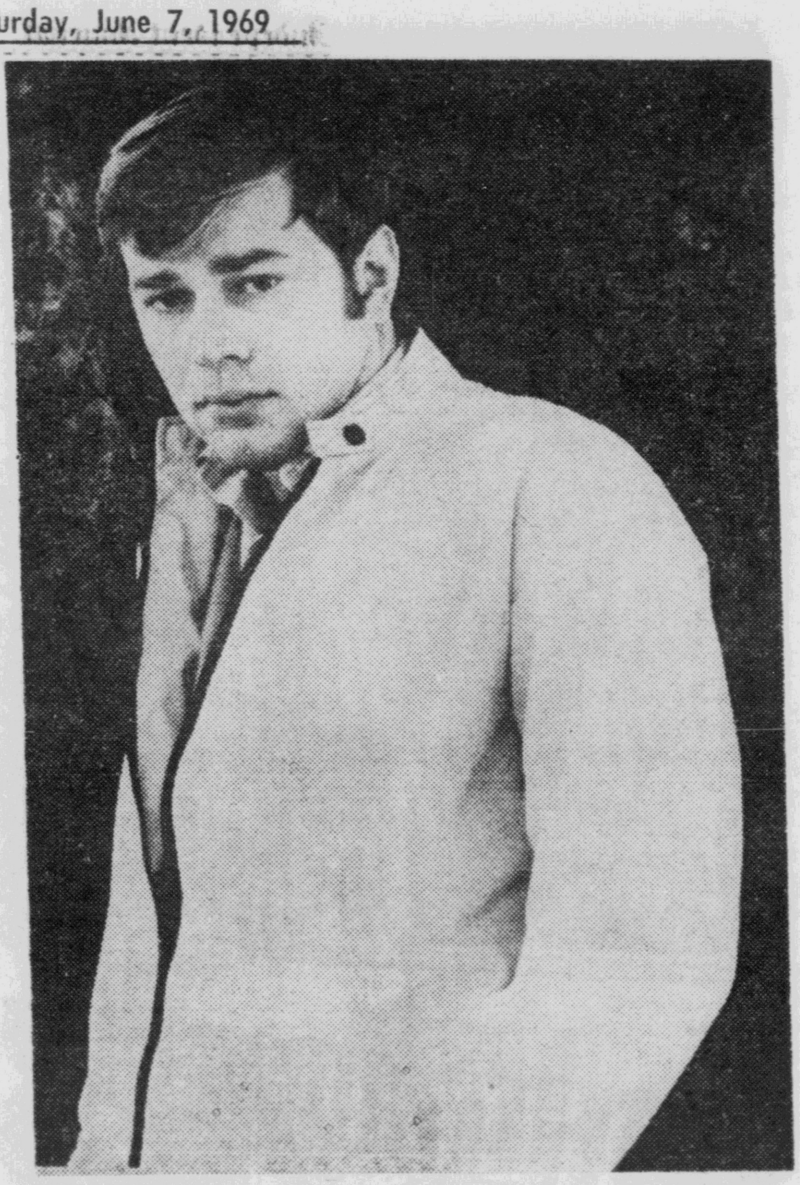
CHUCK by Carl Sterland; Doubleday, 181 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Suzanne D. Stamler.

Triteness is exceeded only by tedium in a poorly-tailored yarn that swings from contrived vulgarity to mushy melodrama.

The pseudonymonous author's autobiography opens as he is fading into 40 in Clèveland's upper suburbia with a common malaise — ennui — that comes from a so-so marriage, superficial friends, three normally demanding creature-comfort-oriented children and a middling career as a freelance writer. Faltering in this fashion, the writer falls upon a seed of a former passion—his illegitimate 21-year-old son, Chuck, whose life he feels obliged to save from a bleeding ulcer and heroin-soaked-bitch.

His monthly jaunts to Los Angeles, where Chuck is hacking cabs, give way to pot-smoking forays (son turning on dad), man-to-man soirees in Mexican bordellos, smuggling "horse" across the border for "The Bitch," an older woman who is using Chuck as a runner and a stud, while father and son swap pasts too identical to be believable.

Each man trapped in his own unfulfilled existence establishes a band of affection beyond any thing he has ever known.



THE PHOTOGRAPH is from the jacket of "Chuck" by Carl Sterland, a pseudonym, about the new relationship of a father to his illegitimate son.

While dad is rediscovering his intensity and recapturing his fading youth through his escapades and all-night bull sessions with his son, Chuck confesses his love and admiration for his father whom he claims to have seen in a psychedelic flash of insight. "I'm only telling you what I saw, Carl. You were there. You will be there. I don't know what's going on between us, but there's more to come. I'm beginning to think I'll be okay, because of you in a way. I guess you've got to love something before it turns out right."

To confirm this, Chuck's ulcer too rapidly heals and incidentally Chuck coincidentally has talent — and not just a little. He wants to be a Hollywood actor. His father arranges tests for him and is told that his son will one day be a star. He wants to write and our rescuer romps with Chuck through Europe on assignment, while taking literary criticism from him from time to time. Chuck seems to have a knack for hacking away at professional writers' hackneyed phrases — thus giving dad greater insight into his own medium and even greater admiration for his son.

All of which proves that there are ways of closing the generation gap by opening ourselves up to each other, but there must be better ways to write about it and possibly wiser ways to do it.

Mill Valley Poet Has Fun With The Foibles Of Society

LECHEROUS, LICENTIOUS, LASCIVIOUS LYRICS IS NOT THE TITLE OF THIS BOOK. THE ACTUAL TITLE IS THE VIOLENT VIOLET by John Milton Hagen; A. S. Barnes, 104 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Readers of the Independent-Journal are familiar with the pithy and witty two-line and four-line verse of Mill Valley's John Milton Hagen from the I-J's "What Our Readers Say" column and from the Marin Magazine's "Poet's Corner." A good many of them have chuckled as well over his satirical collection published under the title "The Shrewd Nude."

He has followed that success with another book of typical Hagen verse, and this time he begins poking fun at our foibles right from the outset with a title that spoofs the modern literary trend toward pornography.

Inside, Hagen has his fun with hippies, De Gaulle, the pharmacist, politicians, Mother Goose, the bus company and a wide diversity of other targets.

A few Hagenisms from "Lecherous, Licentious . . .":

"Beware of the barbiturate—
You may become habituate!"

"Do you care who's Miss Universe? We don't — hence this puny verse."

"Youth more evil today is myth — They've merely more tools to do it with."

And: "Jack and Jill once bought a pill; Like 'twas no moral question. For, (in big print) 'twas SODA MINT, 'cause Jill had indigestion."

Hagen obviously had a picnic putting together this book, and his readers are not long in getting into the spirit with him. As Erskine Caldwell says in the brief introductory note he has written for "Lecherous, Licentious. . .":

"The world is in dire need of verse and verses the way John Milton Hagen does it and them."

New Nabokov Novel Fitting Climax To Magnificent Career

ADA by Vladimir Nabokov; McGraw-Hill, 589 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

To celebrate his 70th birthday, Nabokov has published what, when the dust settles, might well be seen as a masterpiece on the massive scale of a "Ulysses" or a "Remembrance of Times Past."

An erotic tour de force, it is also a mighty exploration of the interaction of time and love, and a joyous illumination of life and literature.

For this epic, Nabokov has invented his own world, or rather twin worlds: "Anti-Terra" which in many ways resembles the late 19th Century European milieu and "Terra" whose debatable existence is clearest to those whose minds are most unstable. It is a land that bears a striking resemblance to 20th Century America.

This superbly Nabokovian device gives the author access to two times, as it were. Thus one moment the scene is all 19th Century Russian country house — governesses, liveried picnics, duels and gigs; without losing a step on the next page the characters may be carrying on in a crease of "Terra" time, with bikini-coke-Hollywood swimming pool trappings.

The heart of "Ada" is Ardis Hall, the Veen family home ("ardis" in Greek is the point of the arrow, "the point of time"), and most of the first half of the book is devoted to the launching of the affair there between 14-year-old Van Veen, who is to become a renowned psychologist-philosopher of the nature of time, and what the family tree shows to be his first cousin, Ada, a nymphet of 12.

However it becomes evident (after a while, these introductory chapters are heavy going) that the relationship between the two children is far closer. They are in fact full sister and brother, and the account of their nevertheless idyllic summer is a triumphant celebration of sexual love on a scale rarely, i ever, achieved in print: fo when it comes to evocating the heat and passion of a physica encounter (and just about every other kind of encounter, as well Nabokov, operating on a leve far above raw four-letter banalities, has the field all to himself

Ada's and Van's lifelong love cultimates with their collaborating, in their extreme old age, on this book of memoirs. (Throughout their running comments and marginal notes are generously included.) And thus at the en we are again at the beginning o time, and love, and the vita communion between them tha is the backbone of the novel.

This last section also include a report by Van, now 97, on th vicissitudes of old age, one o the most poignant and cuttingl witty accounts of that state o fered in all literature.

For a good many years t come, one would guess, "Ada will be read for many reasons not all concerned with Veen' philosophy of time-love. It wi be read for the sheer delight o the grand-scale, full-passione (incestuous) love affair, and fo the masterly opulence of th sexual passages. One would further guess that more than on PhD candidate in English wi find his dissertation in the endless wealth of literary tribute and/or parodies, puns, conundrums, myths and general erudite fun (some of it at the expense of his fellow writers).

One is tempted to say tha Nabokov's material is as loade as that of Joyce.

Certainly his grand them the balance of time and love, worthy of his myriad talent "Ada" is a staggering achievement, and as such, a fitting climax to the magnificent body work he has produced.

Neglected Novel

THE TREMOR OF FORGERY by Patricia Highsmith; Doubleday, 254 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

This novel by a young American now living in France should be receiving greater attention and more praise than it has been accorded.

An unpretentious but splendidly told tale, it deals with an American writer in Tunisia attempting to work and to reestablish his identity.

What makes the novel so enjoyable is Miss Highsmith's fine feeling for characterization. Every member of her cast in individualistic and interesting. Furthermore, she has a gift for capturing the flavor of a culture — in this case Arabic — without sentimentality but nonetheless sympathetically.

That Howard Ingham does eventually arrive at new values and goals is both satisfying and acceptable to the reader, for Miss Highsmith has laid her foundation well.

An Elector Raps America's Outmoded Election System

PRESIDENTIAL LOTTERY by James A. Michener; Random House, 240 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Novelist James Michener was a presidential elector from Pennsylvania. That experience confirmed and reinforced his disgust with the outmoded and unreliable "electoral college" system and resulted in his book, "Presidential Lottery."

The system by which faceless men — mostly unknown to the voters — are placed in a position to negate the popular will in presidential elections has put American democracy in trouble in the past.

As Michener points out, the electors are not required by law to vote for the presidential candidates to whom they are pledged on the ballot and some of them sometimes hav not done so. In a close electio deals to switch electors' vot are possible; they were talk of when it was thought that ne ther Nixon nor Humphrey mig get a majority of the elector vote last year.

Michener prefers a refor that would retain the apportio ment of electoral votes to t states, but cast them automa cally for whichever candida won a plurality in each stat He would, however, support ther the direct election of t President, now under conside ation in Congress, or a syste of apportioning electoral vot by congressional districts.

Anyone who regards retenti or abolition of the electoral c lege as a more-or-less academ matter will get an eye-open from "Presidential Lottery."

Gets to a Major Cause of Hemorrhoids

Now! Most complete 3-way relief!

Important development: unlike every other hemorrhoid product, Counternoid™ works in 3 ways:
1. Lessens pain fast.
2. Coats, soothes and protects injured tissue.
3. Gets to a major cause of hemorrhoids: painful hard constipation.

In hospital X-ray tests, doctors have demonstrated that the exclusive Counternoid formulation with DSS$_{30}$™ penetrates in minutes to the top of the rectal area to soften the stool and ease the bowel movement, to make natural healing possible.
Remember: Counternoid. For temporary relief of minor hemorrhoid troubles. The most complete 3-way relief you can get without a prescription or without surgery. At all drug counters.

Some Light Reading To While Away The Warm-Weather Days

Cunningham

By DON KEOWN

A FARMHOUSE IN PROVENCE by Mary Roblee Henry; Knopf, 196 pages, $5.95.

THE SINO-VARIANT by Allison Ind; McKay, 306 pages, $5.95.

THE MAN ON THE RAFFLES VERANDAH by Lydia Kirk; Doubleday, 184 pages, $4.95.

ANYTIME, ANYWHERE by Martin Caidin; Dutton, 248 pages, $5.95.

This week, four books strictly for light, non-serious summer reading:

"A FARMHOUSE in Provence" is Vogue editor Mary Roblee Henry's account of how she and her diplomat husband acquired a historic but dilapidated farmhouse in France's wine country and transformed it into a refuge where they can enjoy a far different kind of life from what they had been accustomed to as city-dwellers.

Mrs. Henry writes very well, with a descriptive style that is especially well suited to this kind of material and reflecting her years as a writer of travel articles for her magazine. Her story of how La Serafine was found on a hillside in the Vaucluse and of how it was rehabilitated and given a new life is warmly humorous, and highly entertaining.

One flinches at what seems the vast amounts of money the Henrys have poured into their project. Few of us could afford it. But in this age of hustle and bustle and continuous pressure, one can understand their dedication to and affection for their quiet retreat.

Mrs. Henry offers us, too, some fine insight into the character of the Provencaux. They are individualists well worth your acquaintance. On the other hand, personally, we felt Mrs. Henry to be burdened with one of the most annoying fathers-in-law we ever encountered, although she obviously loves the old windbag and nuisance.

Mrs. Henry avoids cuteness and over-sentimentality, yet succeeds in capturing the charm and flavor of a region and its distinctive culture. Those of us who cannot create La Serafines of our own can share, through her book, at least some of the rewards and delights.

MARY ROBLEE HENRY
Among the vineyards

"THE SINO-Variant" is a spy thriller by Col. Allison Ind, U. S. Army retired, who has drawn upon his own background as a biochemist and as an intelligence officer, agent and technician.

Colonel Ind has written two well-regarded fact books on espionage, but, for us, his fiction is not quite so successful.

His latest novel strikes this reader as a curious blending of the old Fu Manchu school of thrillers, with its sinister yellow peril, and the newer James Bond school, with its gimmicks and its pretty girls.

His hero, Cornelius Craig, is, like the author, a retired U.S. intelligence agent living in England. He is somewhere between the flamboyant Bond and the LeCarre-Deighton non-hero, not as flashy as the former, less nondescript than the latter.

Craig believes his old career is behind him. But scattered outbreaks of meningitis around the globe pose the possibility of a new kind of threat to the West. Craig, with special training in microbiology, is drawn inevitably into the affair, and is soon hopping around England and eventually around the world, matching wits and scientific devices with the evil powers behind the menace.

Weaknesses of Ind's novel include a tendency to get carried away, so that his premises become less and less credible as the book progresses, and perhaps a too great preoccupation with gimmicks and a too frequent reliance upon cooincidence.

Yet the novel is unquestionably entertaining. It does not boost Ind into the top ranks of authors of spy thrillers, but your attention is unlikely to stray until you have seen Colonel Craig safely through his last encounter with the forces of "the New Dawn."

SURPRISINGLY, "The Man on the Raffles Verandah" is more convincing and in some ways superior to "The Sino-Variant."

We say surprising, because the photo of the author, Lydia Kirk, shows a pleasant-faced little old lady in her 70s.

And her biography does not indicate that Mrs. Kirk has had any personal experience with espionage.

She does know Singapore and England, however, where her novel is set. She is the much traveled widow of a former admiral who also served the U.S. extensively as a diplomat. Her lone previous book was a collection of letters written in Russia and entitled "Postmarked Moscow." Now she has set about carving herself a new career as a suspense novelist.

She, too, has as her hero a retired agent. But her Maj. Malcolm Gordon is British and considerably more conservative than Ind's Cornelius Craig. He is past the age of romantic involvement, and there are no devilish new devices or weapons at his command. But when he is called out of retirement to play deadly games against a Singapore smuggling and spy ring with Communist China connections, he shows considerable ingenuity and cool courage.

Mrs. Kirk's writing shows some stiffness at times, a tendency she will probably overcome with practice. And the mystery or surprise element in her story is minimal. But her background of one of the Orient's most intriguing cities is splendid, and her characters are generally interesting if not deeply etched. The septuagenarian has done rather well in her first outing in a highly competitive field and rates better than just a passing grade.

"ANYTIME, Anywhere" by Martin Caidin seems like another of those action novels that have been made into so many John Wayne movies, with the late Ward Bond as his sidekick, the two of them blustering and brawling.

Or, for more finesse, the late Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy could have played the lead roles.

Whoever actually turns up on screen, if the picture is made, it will probably be a better movie than it is a novel. For one thing, some of the rampant and sickening sadism will have to be omitted or toned down a bit. And the four-letter words thinned out somewhat.

Caidin, incidentally, has already sold three novels to Hollywood.

He is a specialist on aviation and the military, and is highly regarded for his knowledge of and writing on those subjects. Not surprisingly, the best parts of "Anytime, Anywhere" are to be found in those episodes of airmen and aircraft in the sky, particularly a splendid opening description of two pilots and their planes battling a tremendous electrical storm over the Atlantic.

The story itself is contrived and tiresome. It centers around tough Matt Bowden, flyer and aviation maverick in the risky business of ferrying old craft and flying stunt planes for the movies. When an opportunity for a dubious venture that offers bigger rewards presents itself, Matt decides to take the chance. Unfortunately, Matt Bowden is not an appealing character. His girl friend, Diane Kelly, is thinly drawn and almost lost in the masculine cast. Some of Matt's flying cohorts are mildly interesting.

No doubt the men in this rough and dangerous business do spew a stream of obscenities and profanities, as Caidin has them doing. But somehow he makes it sound unlikely and all quite self-conscious.

Aviation buffs and fans of "he-man" literature should enjoy the book. But for others, there is better reading around.

LOUISE TEATHER, a student of the history of the Tiburon Peninsula-Belvedere Island area where she resides, has written "Island of Six Names: A History of Belvedere, Calif., 1834-1890."

The booklet is sponsored by the Belvedere-Tiburon Landmarks Society through a memorial fund for Marjorie Rey Rickard, nature and history enthusiast, and all profits will go to the society.

Mrs. Teather, a former Independent-Journal correspondent, directs her attention upon Belvedere, following it through successive periods when it was known as El Potrero de la Punta del Tiburon (the Pasture of Point Tiburon), Kashow's Island for Israel Kashow, Peninsula Island, Promontory Island, Still Island and finally Belvedere Island, although throughout all these island titles it was actually connected by causeway to the larger Tiburon Peninsula.

The book was lithographed by Graphic Arts of Marin and is illustrated with maps and old sketches.

It can be ordered from the Landmarks Society, Post Office Box 134, Belvedere-Tiburon, 94920, at $3.20 per copy, including tax and mailing charge.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE TALLYMAN by Bill Knox; Doubleday, 188 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

The police team of Colin Thane and Phil Moss functions in the toughest district of what has to be one of the most unprepossessing cities on earth, Glasgow, Scotland, working efficiently and humanely, while confronted with many of the same daily living frustrations and problems as you and I.

This time they are up against a loan shark, or tallyman, who doesn't hesitate to use muscle and even murder when his victims welsh or others get in his way.

Thane and Moss struggle to uncover the identity of the tallyman, and their quest takes them into both high finance and the underworld. The mystery element isn't all that perplexing. But Knox is adept at making his characters interesting and meaningful.

THE CONTINUITY OF LIFE

If we Ourselves
Create our futures, in truth
Is it volitional?
Or do we unleash the force of "destiny"
Within us?
Is it then outside our control?

By accepting "destiny" as existent
We give it credence and value
And act upon it, Celeste.

Thus, we at once unleash ourselves to create our futures
According to the patterns of our inspiration.
And control becomes a constant process of decision-making.

When we begin to feel the continuity of life
Within us
And see it manifest
Without,
Is
To observe and identify God,
To find ourselves,
To be seriously happy,
To become free to do God's work,
To sing,
And dance
And laugh with the sun.

MILL VALLEY — CELESTE SARLATTE

A TEACHER'S CONTEMPLATION

My words were wise, not always;
my manner, not always mild;
And now I gaze tall—
to what once was the child.

Oh, think on the day
you will look at the man;
And remember with awe
having touched the child's hand.

NOVATO — GLORIA KNOEBEL TOVANI

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

TCHEREPNIN: Piano Concerti Nos. 2 and 5 — Alexander Tcherepnin, piano/Bavarian Radio Symphony Orchestra/ Kubelik—DGG (Deutsche Grammophon) 139 379:

Russian composer Tcherepnin is one of the few composers still living who seem to span the musical style of the post-Romantic turn-of-the-century and the serialized music of today.

The Concerto No. 2 of 1923 makes use of a type of polyphony which he invented himself, based on a nine-note scale. The Oriental influences on the composer are here evident.

The Fifth Concerto comes from 1963 and is quite personal and unique-sounding in a rather traditional way. Its finale is especially brilliant, highlighting the still-considerable keyboard skills of its composer.

KARL HARTMANN: Symphonies Nos. 4 and 8 — Bavarian Radio Symphony Orchestra/ Kubelik — DGG 139 359:

This is Hartmann's first entry in the record catalog in the U.S., except for an old mono disc on Capitol many years ago.

The composer died only in 1963, and some authorities feel he deserved the title "the last symphonist" more than either Bruckner or Mahler. His symphonies are grand structures which cover much of the same ground as those of Bruckner or Mahler, and in a considerably more abbreviated time-span.

No. 4 is for string orchestra, a form for which several 20th Century composers have been able to accomplish wonders. The Eighth is distinguished by a gorgeous slow movement — Hartmann was one of the great creators of adagios in this century. His love of Bach is also heard in his monumental formal structure and grasp of complex counterpoint.

It is difficult to praise too highly the consistently excellent sound quality of Deutsche Grammophon's pressings. They probably possess the best signal-to-noise ratio of any classical recordings, and without a doubt their quiet surfaces are bettered nowhere. If only U.S.-pressed LPs had this amount of craftsmanship and care invested in their manufacture! Some collectors have even begun ordering the European versions of albums recorded in the U.S. — paying a much higher price plus import duties and postage in order to bypass the seemingly increasing deterioration in U.S.-pressed LPs.

HANS WERNER HENZE: Muses of Sicily; Moralities — Soloists/The Dresden Kreuzchor/Dresden State Orchestra/ Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra/ Henze conducting — DGG 133 374:

Deutsche Grammophon's series of albums devoted to Germany's acclaimed young composer continues with these two vocal works.

The Muses are for chorus and orchestra and employ fragments from Virgil's "Ecologues."

Henze was turned on to the Rolling Stones shortly before composing this work, and while it is far from classical rock, it does turn to a more primitive and simpler type of structure than Henze's previous work. The circling around one tonal center and repetition bear some resemblance to the German primitivist, Carl Orff.

The Moralities were written also for performance by amateur or school ensembles; they may be staged like mini-operas or just performed in concert version. Their light-hearted sense of fun is apparent.

Translations of the German texts are, of course, included in the album.

PIANO MUSIC OF MENDELSSOHN: Anton Kuerti, piano — Monitor MCSC 2128:

Mendelssohn's piano music seems to be rather "out" at the moment, but one listen to these rich and stirring performances will make the listener wonder why this is so. The well-known "Rondo Capriccioso" opens the disc spectacularly, and besides the "Fantasy in F Sharp Minor," three of the Bach-influenced preludes and fugues are included in the LP.

THE EXPLOITERS

Imperiled Pleasure Of Growing Up

ASSAULT ON CHILDHOOD! by Ron Goulart; Sherbourne Press, 278 pages, $6.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.

In affluent, child-oriented America, it seems impossible that there could be an "Assault on Childhood!," but writer Ron Goulart proves one exists in his book of that title.

He demonstrates conclusively that even while our youngsters might be under-disciplined in the home, they can also be over-regimented by society. That parents who pamper outrageously often also fail to protect their children from the exploitation of others.

"The child," Goulart writes, "is on his way to adolescence, and from there to adulthood, and his transition shouldn't be interfered with by the giants of the kid business. The meaning and pleasures of growing up should not be imposed from the outside."

Children, he claims, are more likely to be regarded and treated as consumers than as kids. "Everyone has the right to be left alone, the right to occasional solitude. Everyone, that is, except children."

Many of the producers of mass products regard the words "consumer" and "child-like" as synonymous, Goulart charges, and would like to see "the worst characteristics of children . . . survive into adult life. Too much advertising presupposes a residue of childishness in the viewer. The advertising aimed at children begins what can be a lifelong assault."

Some of Goulart's specific targets:

Toys, which are often only scaled-down models of adult appliances, or war toys that glamorize killing and encourage aggressions, or dolls such as Barbie that require extravagant spending that teaches small girls "to expect to be valued by an ever-increasing wardrobe and their ability to manipulate their fathers, and, later, their husbands into buying clothes and more clothes."

The Walt Disney organization, which Goulart describes as "a gigantic sprawling mechanism, antiseptic and incredibly efficient, with the driving purpose of making money from children. The Disney machine may be bigger and cuter than a slot machine, but it thinks the same way . . ." It is, the writer claims, a manufacturer of "the false dream . . . a world without the rigors of cause and effect . . . (it is) sugary sentiment coupled with engulfing commercialism." And: "America is not so much a sick as a childish society. Walt Disney did much to encourage this retreat from maturity."

Children's television programming, termed "a mass of indiscriminate entertainment dominated by some 40 animated program series which in turn are dominated by ugliness, noise and violence. . . . The history of the last two decades of children's television is a history of carelessness and exploitation." Violence, Goulart suggests, should be criticized not so much for quantity as the way in which it is presented.

Comic books — the surviving ones "are not for kids at all" and the ones that came before them were saturated with sadism, sex and racism.

And "empty-calories foods" — the soft drinks, candies, sugare cereals, pastries, and othe heavily carbohydrate snack that, thanks to coaxing, mak up so much of the diet of chil dren and teen-agers.

"Every childhood now is i danger of ceasing to be a voy age of discovery and turnin into a prearranged tour," Gou lart asserts.

"To let ourselves be force into thinking we can prove ou love and concern (for our chi dren) with objects and gifts is . . wrong," he also declares.

What can parents do to resis these exploiters?

For one thing, Goulart advis es, they can complain loud an long — about bad TV progran ming and commercials, abo dangerous and unwholesom toys, about misrepresente foods, etc.

They can become "label rea ers," especially in the supe market, making certain befo they buy exactly what the co tents are inside the package.

"The most applicable mea of overthrowing the entire k business, of minimizing its e fects, involves getting our n tions about being parents sort out," Goulart writes. "If we' not sure, if we're impressed the propaganda of the kid bu ness, then we can't really fun tion as mentors, guides a teachers. We become either ca ualties or implements of the a sault on childhood."

"Don't let the juggernaut the kid business run you ove the author implores.

In the great outpouring "muckraking" books trigger by Rachel Carson and stimul ed by Ralph Nader, Goular "Assault on Childhood!" must regarded as one of the most i portant and most convinci He seems sometimes s contradictory, criticizing so (the toymakers, for instan for too much realism, and o ers (Disney) for too little. repeats that old saw ab newspapers and magazines p ing attention to children o when they have done someth wrong — an infuriating n statement to any reporter w has spent hours recording accomplishments of child and youth for the reading p lic. MRS. JOHN WESTON relaxes in the comfortable living room of her San Rafael Park home. The room is on the middle of three levels. Arthur Wasser, of Wasser's Furniture Accents, San Anselmo, who did the interior design, combined contemporary and Mediterranean furnishings effectively, stressing heavy textures and unusual materials, in the attractive living room.

A Home With 3 Levels, Plus Elegance, Comfort

Television Personality John Weston And Family Enjoy New Residence

The new home of Mr. and Mrs. John Weston, in growing San Rafael Park overlooking the Marin Civic Center, makes excellent and unusual use of a tri-level arrangement, joined by a double stairway.

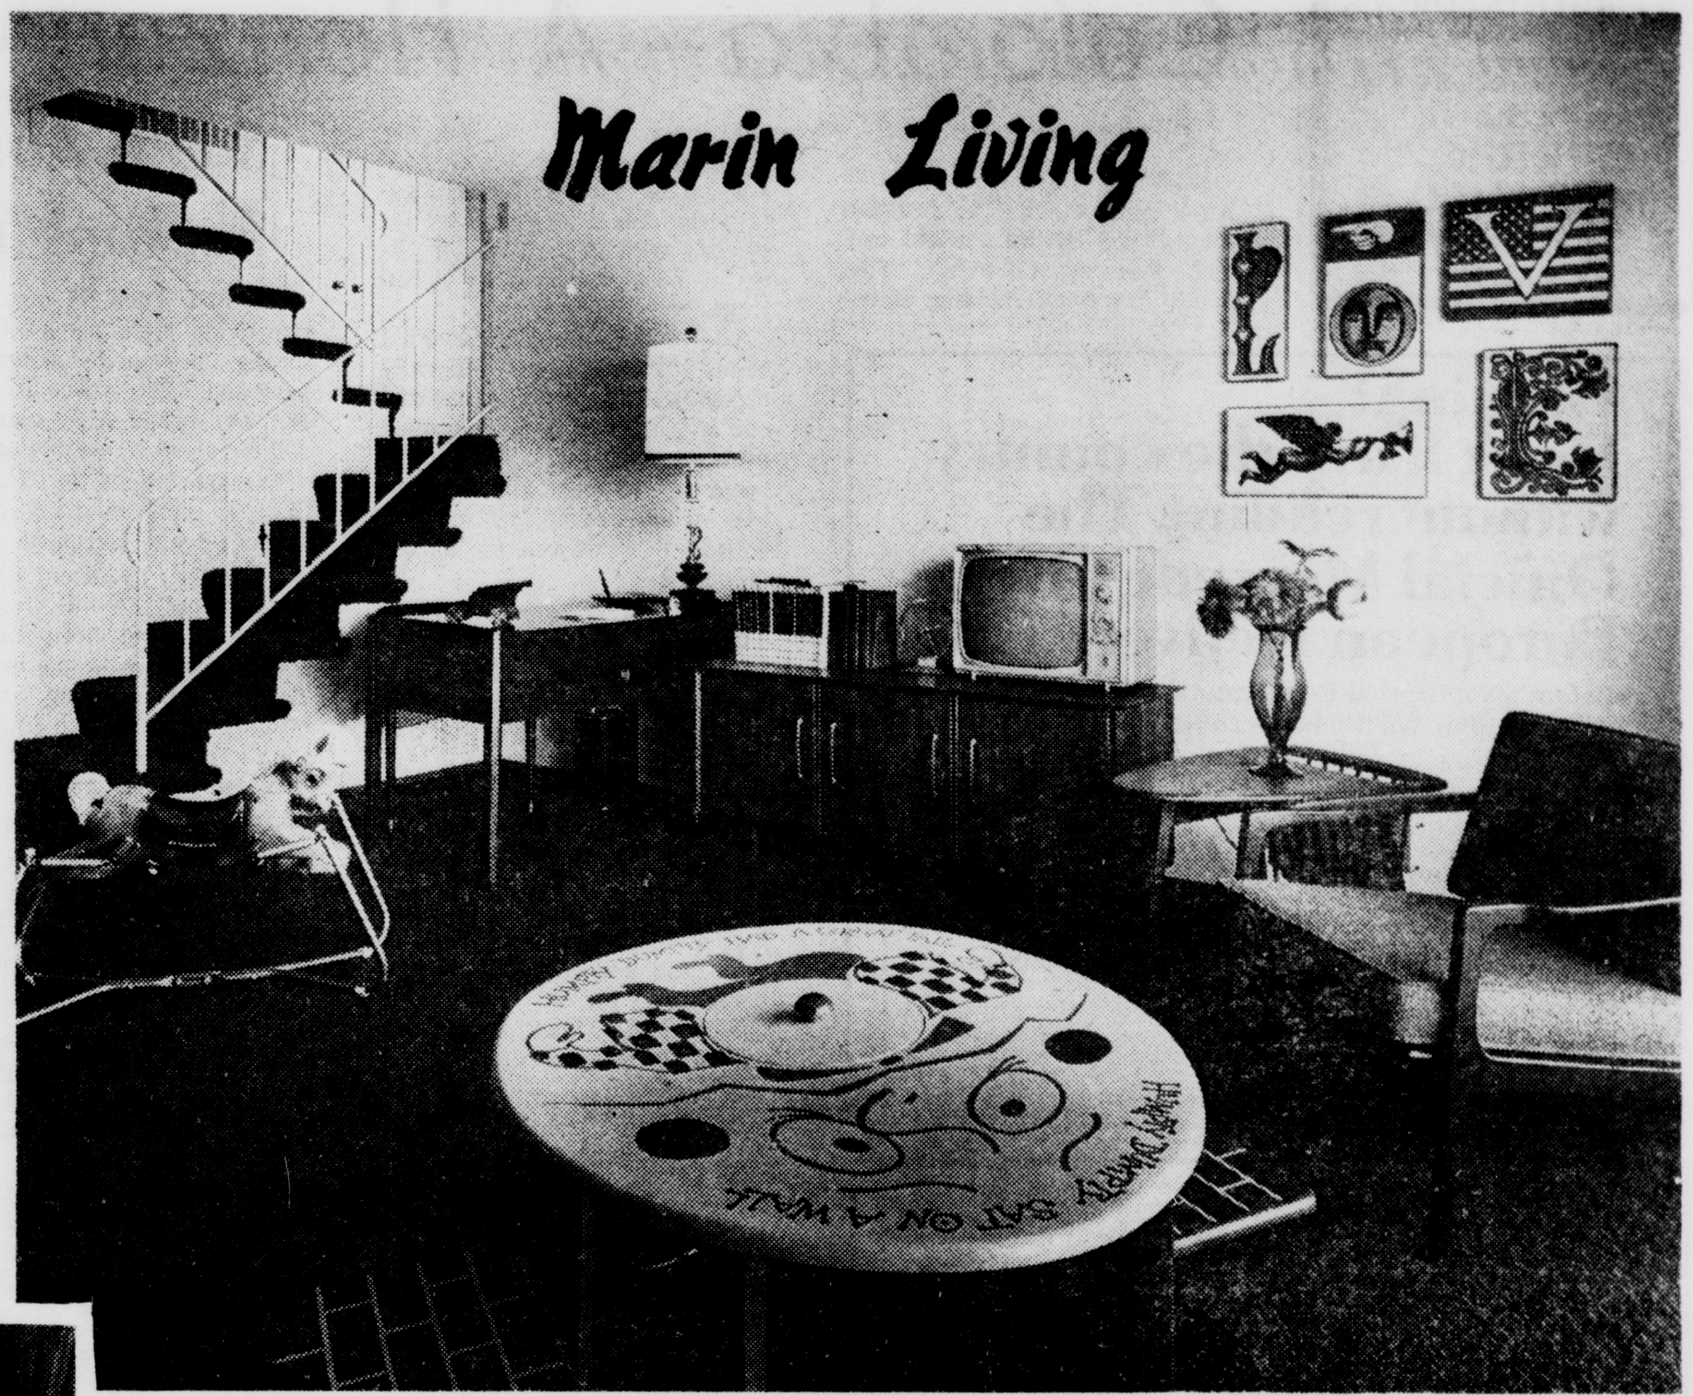
The living room is on the second level. It was furnished by Arthur Wasser of Wasser's Furniture Accents, San Anselmo, with a combination of contemporary and Mediterranean pieces. An antique copper coal hod sits on the hearth of the used brick fireplace beneath a Florentine leafed-branch of metal. Rare burl and gold leaf octagonal bunching tables are used before the sofa of green, deep gold and blue, colors that are repeated in floral chairs. A collection of old glass adds interest. Sliding doors separate a dining area from the living room.

The lower level functions as a brightly-colored family room and office for Weston, the KPIX-TV (Channel 5) newscaster. The upper level contains the bedrooms.

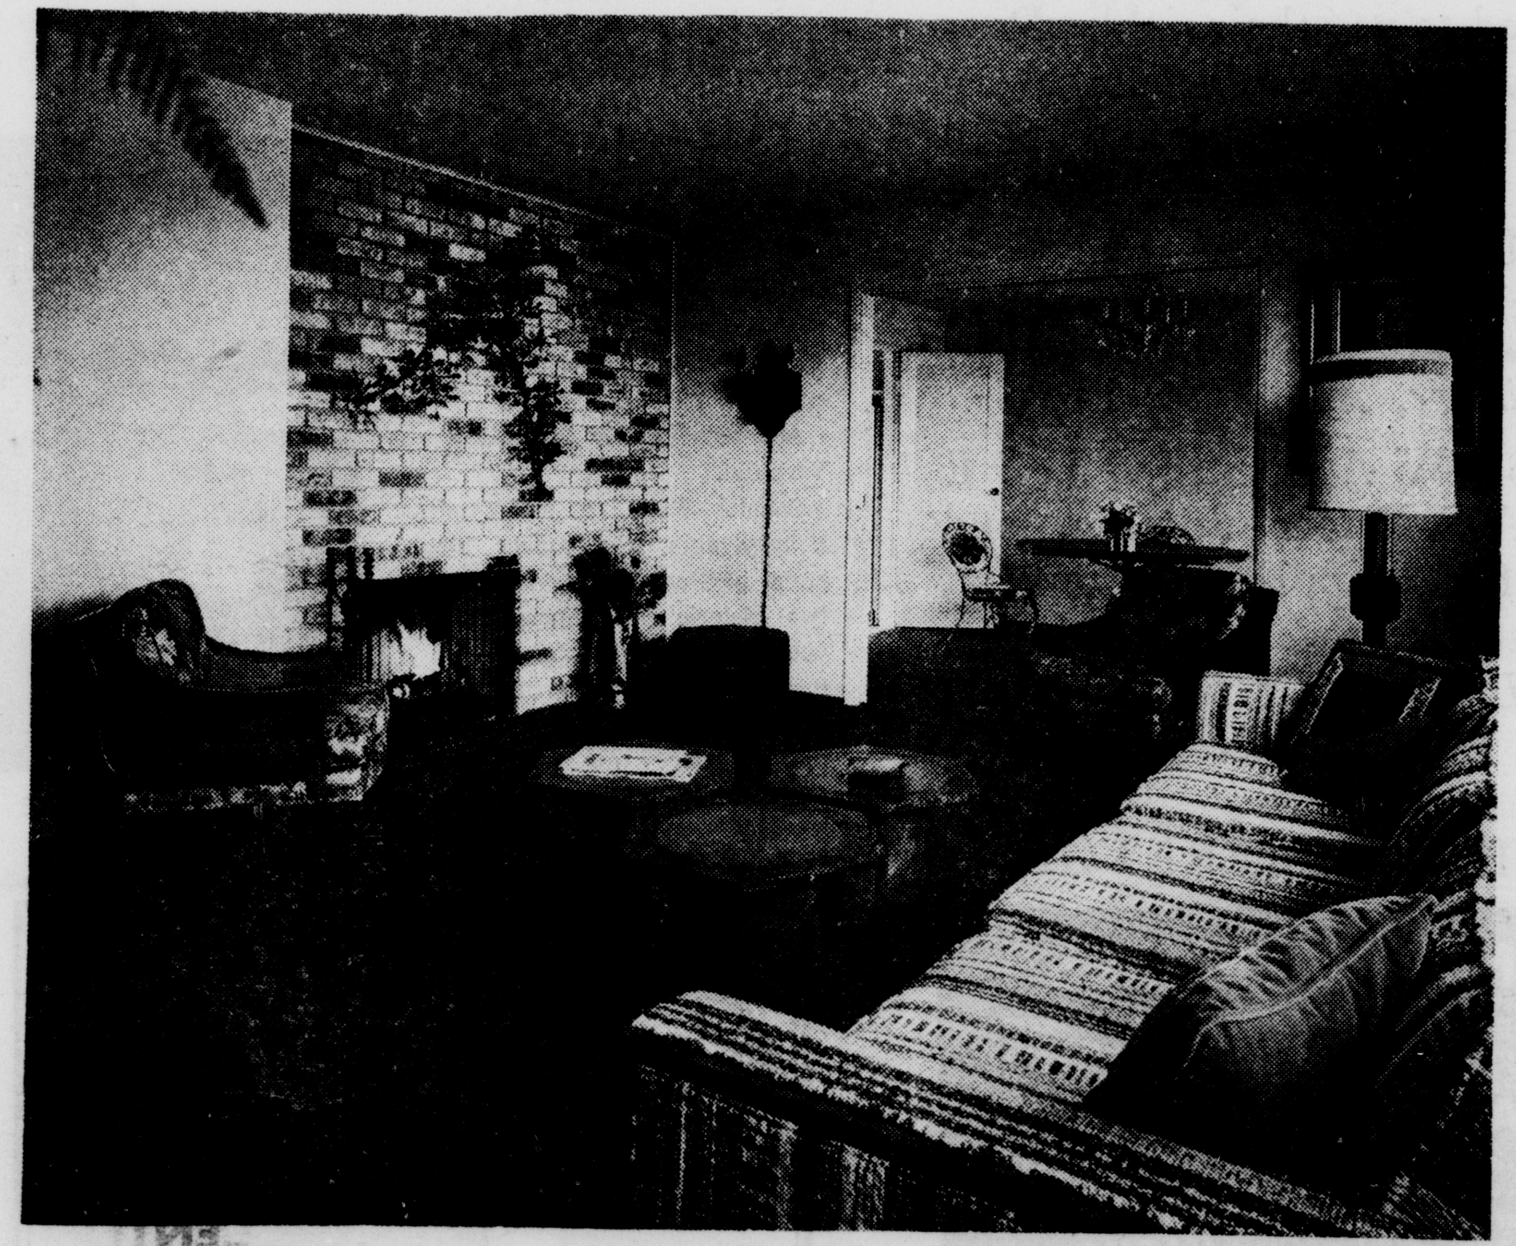
And the connecting stairwell between the levels has a special function, too — as a gallery for the display of the Westons' collection of Walter and Margaret Keane paintings.

The decor worked out by Wasser and the Westons combines stylish elegance with comfortable hospitality. And the Westons are already feeling very much at home in their new residence.

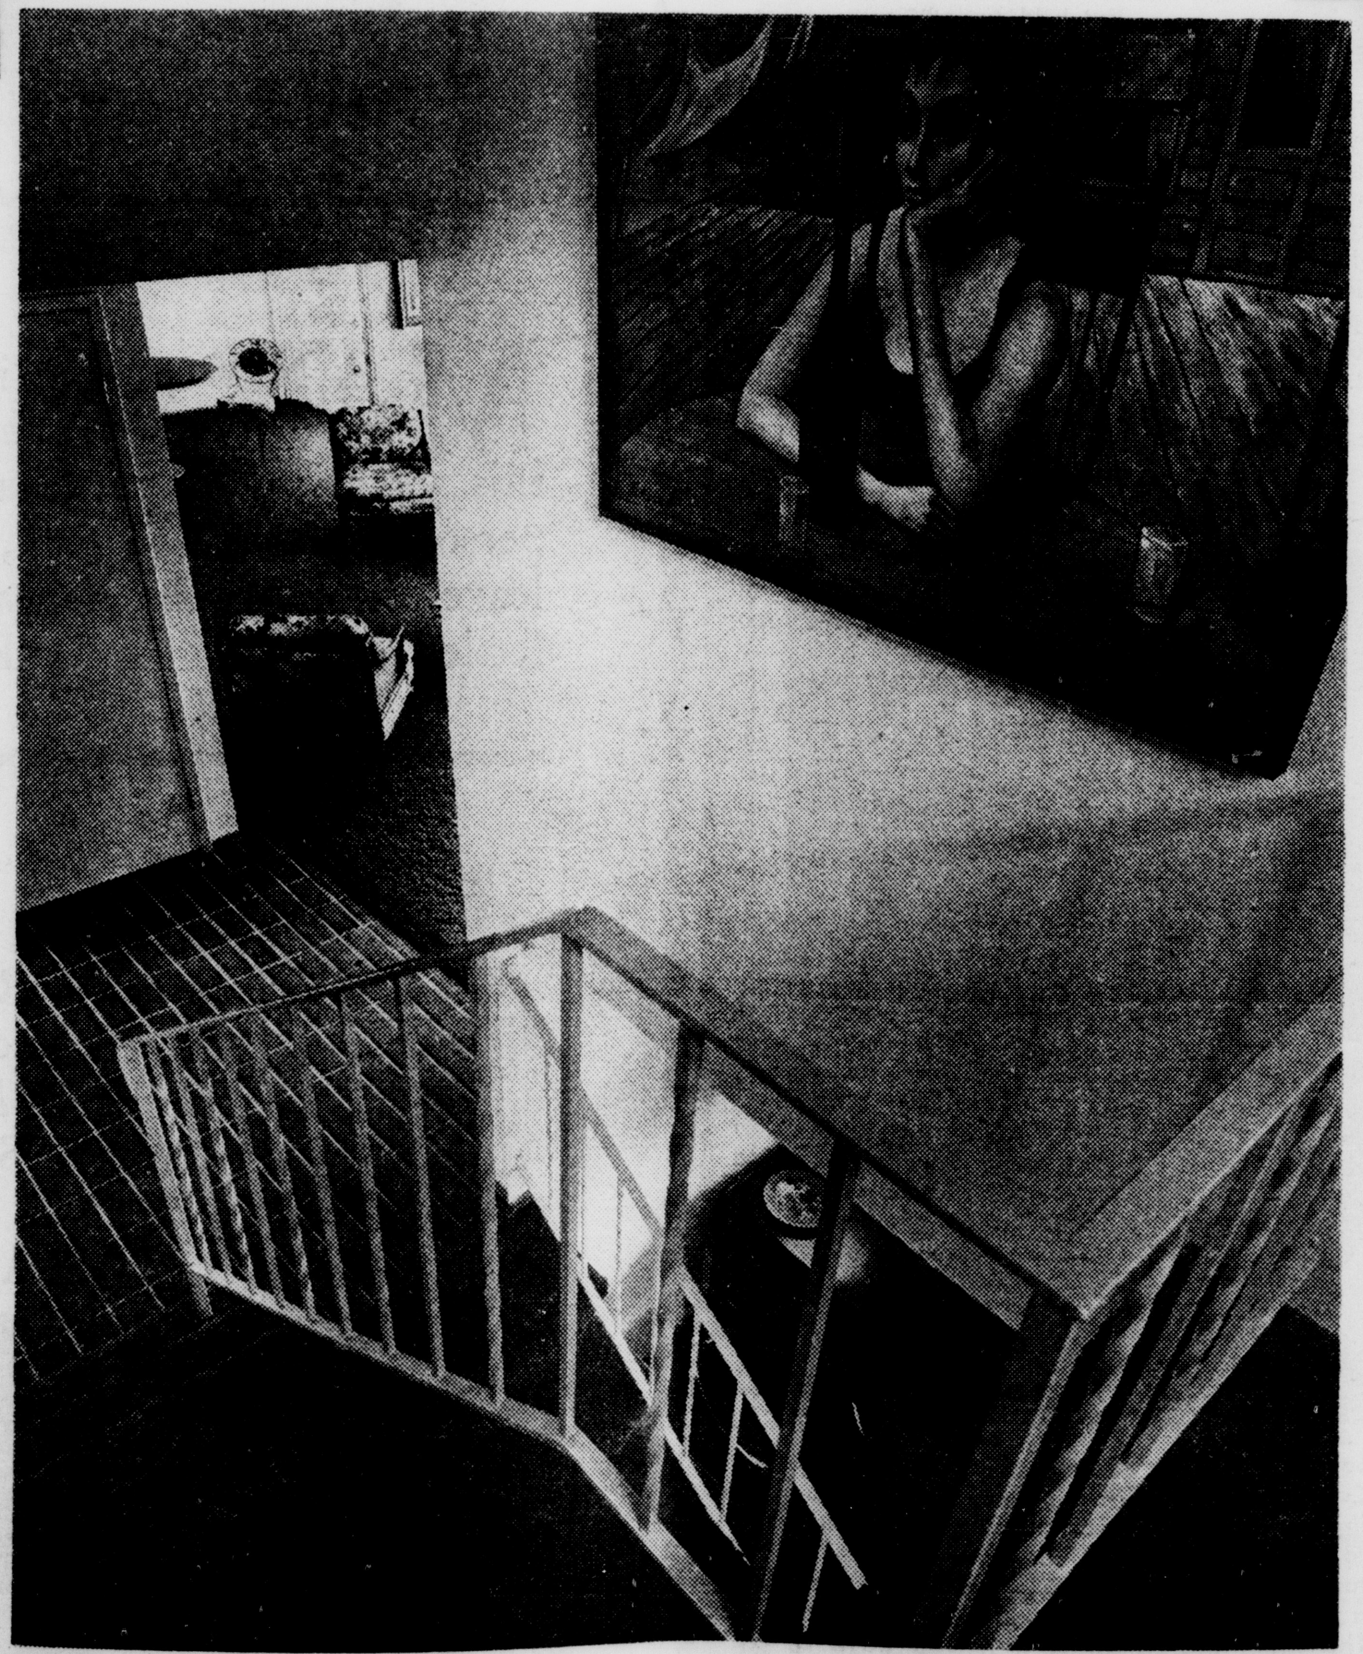
Marin Living



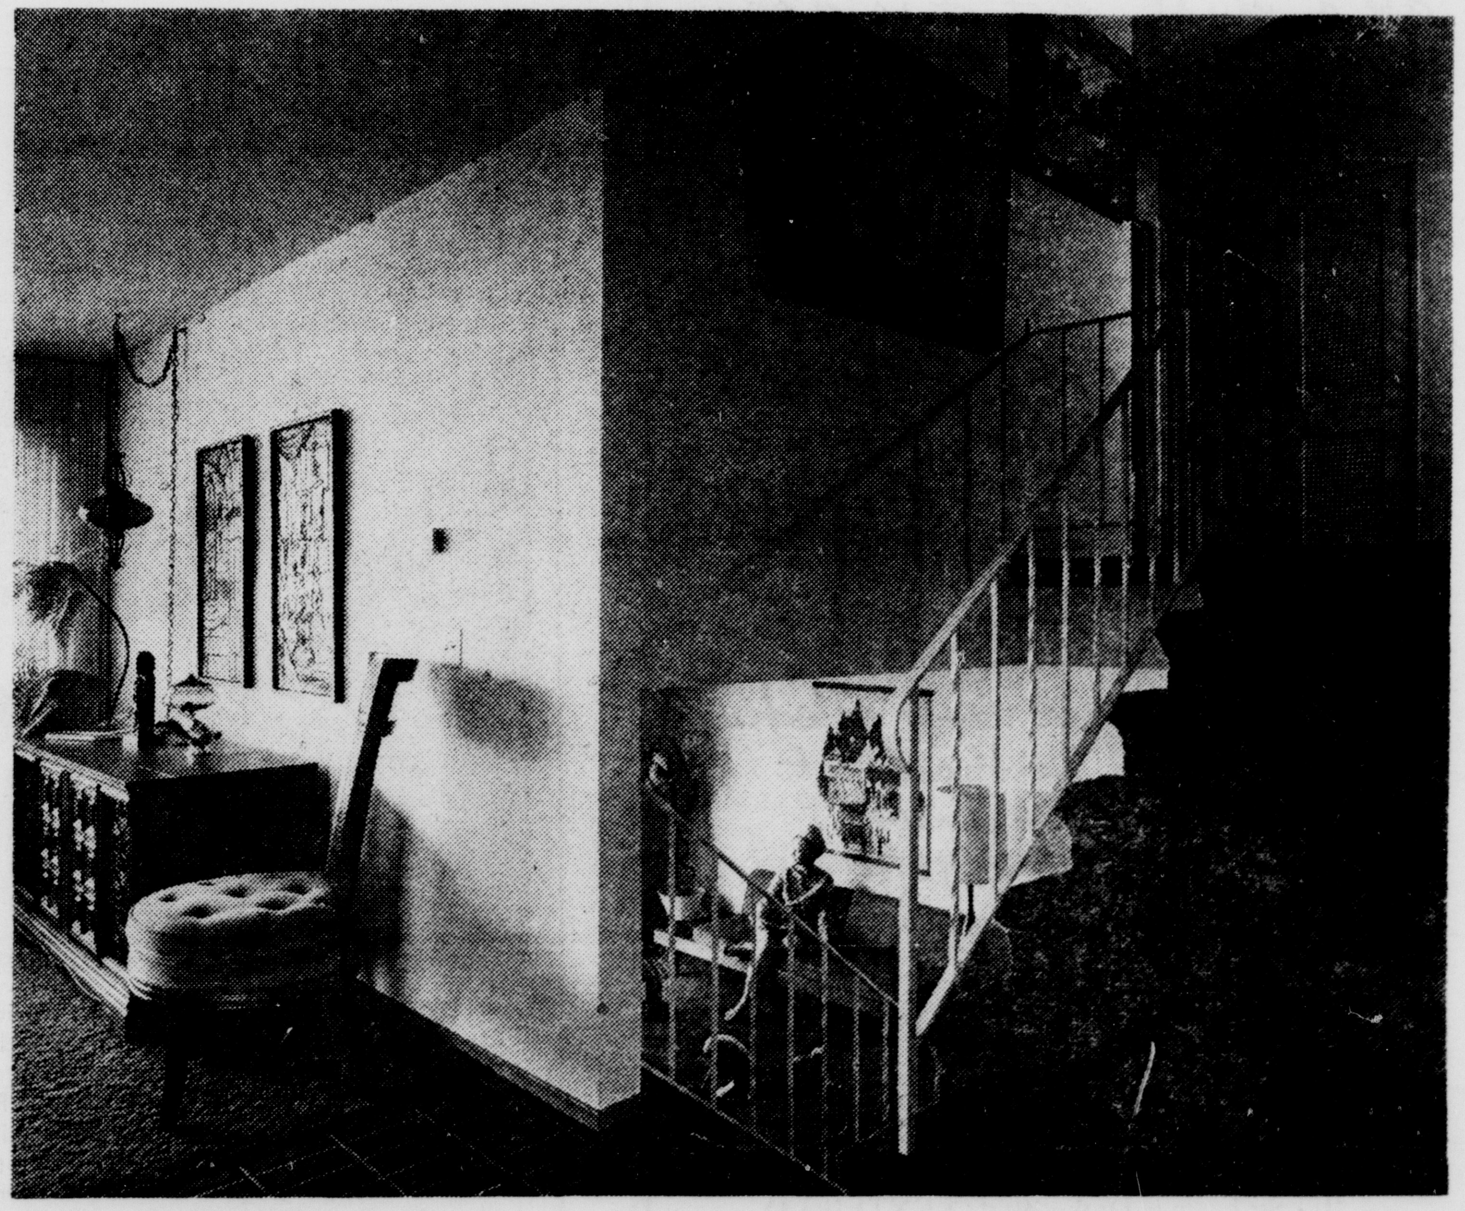
THE FAMILY ROOM of the John Weston residence is a gay and colorful place, dominated by bright reds and brilliant blues. It serves not only as a fun and relaxation spot for the family, but also as an office for Weston, the KPIX-TV newscaster heard daily on Channel 5. His desk can be seen at left next to the staircase. (Photos by Ken Molino)



ANOTHER VIEW of the John Weston living room features the recessed fireplace of used brick that lends a warm and hospitable touch to the room. The picture partially hidden by the lamp is a Keane portrait of Mrs. Weston, painted when she was a featured performer with the Ice Follies.



THE STAIRWELL and upper hall of the John Weston home serve as a gallery for the display of the Westons' collection of paintings by Walter and Margaret Keane and turn that area into one of the focal points of the house.



STANDING INSIDE the entry way to the Weston residence, photographer Ken Molino caught portions of all three levels of the home and its Arthur Wasser-designed decor. Mrs. Weston is seated in the family room on the bottom level. A portion of the second-level living room is seen at the left.

Colombia—A Horizon Widener

South American Republic Beckons Yankee Tourists

By MURRAY J. BROWN

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Americans seeking to broaden their travel horizons might well look towards Colombia. This South American republic is not only easy to get to, but the prices are right.

Take the capital city of Bogota whose top hotels compare favorably with those in major cities in the United States and Europe.

The deluxe Inter-Continental Hotel Tequendama, generally recognized as the city's best and one of the finest we have stayed at anywhere, offers single rooms from about $13 and doubles from around $19 a day, with bath or shower, during the off-season.

IN SEASON rates are only slightly higher.

For those on a tighter budget, there are several first class hotels with singles from as low as $6 and doubles from $10 daily.

All better class hotels operate on the European plan (no meals), but dining out is surprisingly inexpensive, too. We had a continental breakfast of juice, roll and coffee at the Tequendama for 85 cents and lunched on a thick steak with trimmings in its cafeteria for $1.85.

RESTAURANTS, coffee shops and cafeterias, featuring all types of cuisine — French, Italian, Spanish and native, among others—offer full meals for as low as $1, including Colombian coffee, naturally. Black coffee is usually served in small demitasse cups and called "tinto." But you can order U.S. style or cafe con leche, for which milk, usually boiled, will be provided.

Man-sized steaks, lobsters and other delicacies run to about $2 in the better restaurants and you can eat your fill of arroz con polla (rice and chicken) or paella Valenciana (seafood and rice) for about $1.50. There are several exceptional restaurants where prices are higher if you feel like splurging.

LIQUOR PRICES are comparatively high, except for the locally produced aguardiente, rum and beer, which are good. But top brand U.S. cigarettes sell for about 25 cents a pack.

Transportation, including taxis, is cheap. And taxi drivers do not have to be tipped.

Otherwise, the usual tip is 10 per cent of the bill if service charge has not been included. Porters get two pesos, or about 12 cents U.S., per bag, and it is customary to leave a few pesos for the chambermaid for longer than one-night stays.

INCIDENTALLY, don't panic if you get a bill for, say, $100.

The dollar sign is used in Colombia for pesos — and $100 in pesos equals only about $6.20 in U.S. currency.

Many international airlines serve Colombia from the U.S.

We flew here non-stop from New York aboard an Avianca Boeing 720 intercontinental jetliner in about five and a half hours. Avianca also flies non-stop from Miami, about three and a half hours, and from U.S. West Coast cities via Mexico and Panama.

AVIANCA offers extra dividends for visitors in a special "Visit Colombia" fare. For $50, the tourist can buy 30 days of almost unlimited air travel on domestic routes with the sole proviso that any route may be flown but once. Avianca flies to more than 150 cities and communities in this republic on the northwestern tip of the South American continent.

For another $20, or a total of $70, the traveler can include a visit to Leticia, a jungle outpost in the Upper Amazon about four hours flying time south of Bogota, and go alligator hunting at night with Indian guides.

FOR THE same $70, he also can jet to the new resort island of San Andres in the Caribbean — about one hour 40 minutes north of Bogota — for water sports and free-port shopping.

Shoppers can find bargains in Bogota and other mainland cities. Excellent buys are available in emeralds — Colombia produces about 90 per cent of the world supply. But deal only with reliable firms or shops.

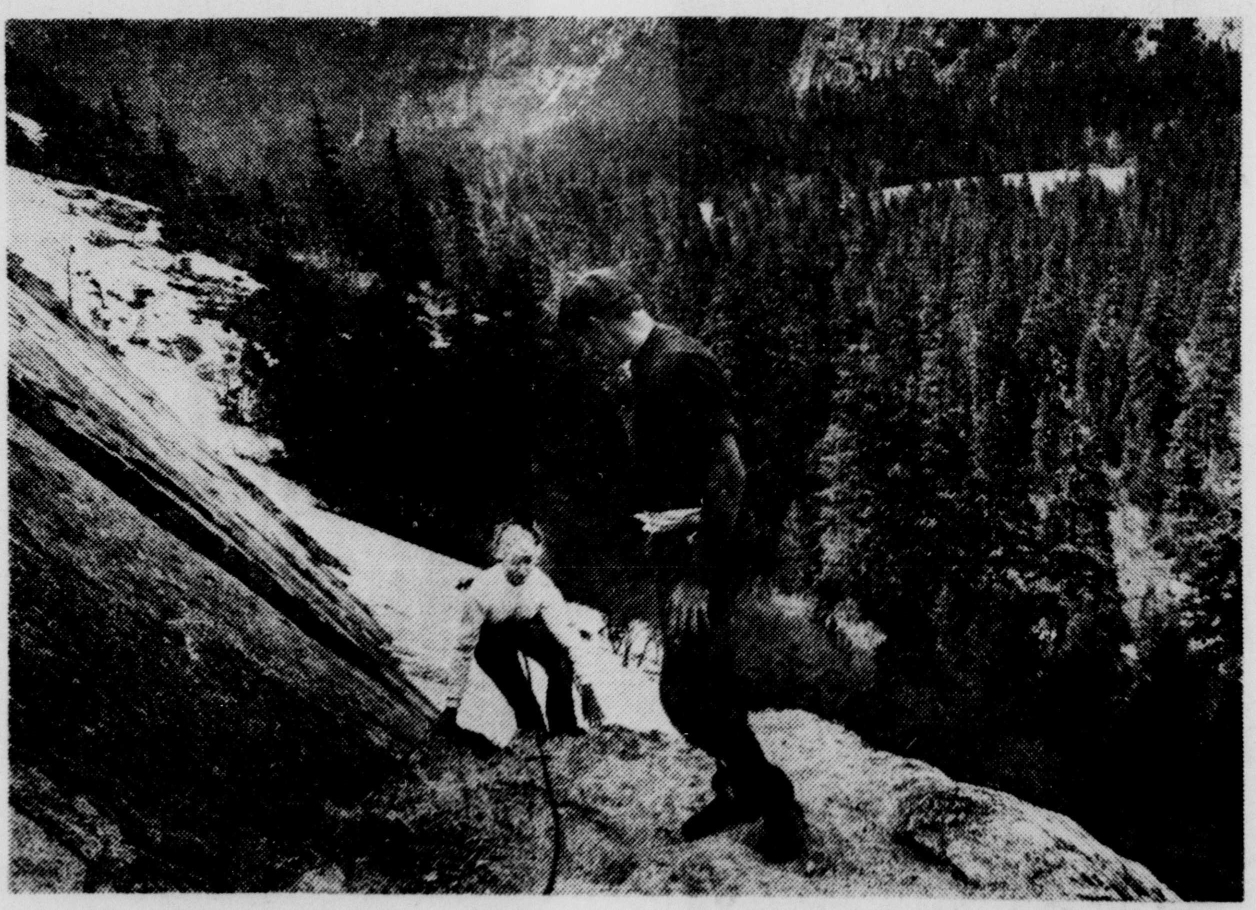
Other popular items include gold and silver jewelry, alligator skin bags, woolen ruanas, ponchos and other native handicrafts.

A RUANA could come in handy if you forget your top or rain coat. Temperatures in Bogota, about 9,000 feet up in the Andes, average 58 degrees throughout the year. Both men and women wear ruanas.

For last-minute purchases there are tax-free shops at the El Dorado International Airport. But hold on to 75 pesos ($4.50) for your departure tax.

To visit Colombia, American tourists need proof of citizenship (a passport is best), a tourist card (two passport pictures must be submitted) which can be obtained free of charge, a valid smallpox vaccination certificate and return or onward passage ticket.

For additional information or free booklets, you can write to Avianca, 6 West 49th Street, New York, N.Y., 10020.



A NEW ATTRACTION at Yosemite National Park is the Yosemite Mountaineering School and Guide Service, operated by Yosemite Park and Curry Co. with National Park Service approval, and with veteran climber Wayne Merry as director. The new school is functioning from the Yosemite Lodge Sports Shop, but will move for the summer to the higher Tuolumne Meadows Lodge, returning to the valley in the fall. Courses offered include basic rock-climbing, intermediate rock-climbing, advanced rock-climbing, guided climbs and climbing tours. Says Merry: "You don't have to be a Paul Bunyan to be a mountain climber. The main ingredient is that you have a desire for a new experience unattainable in any other sport."

Sometimes even a close inspection doesn't instantly reveal whether the "overcoat," as builders call it, is made of wood in its natural state, plywood, hardboard, asphalt, asbestos-cement, aluminum, vinyl or whatever. New advances in coatings and finishes have tended to bring together the appearances of the various materials so that one resembles the other.

THIS INABILITY to distinguish which is which is of no real importance, except perhaps to some home owners who choose one material but want it to seem like something else. In much the same way, a householder will often select something like a coffee table because it has a laminated plastic top — provided it has a wood-grained finish.

Two examples of siding which come in a large variety of styles, finishes and colors are aluminum and hardboard.

Aluminum now comes in many colors, among them deep browns, green, gold and earth tone. Patterns and designs are many, including textured wood grains that you can actually feel. These are embossed directly on aluminum sections. In some cases, the metal and coating are embossed at the same time; in others, only the coating is embossed.

TEXTURES RANGE from smooth marble-like finishes to rough-sawn lumber to wood clapboard.

Hardboard sidings are available as horizontal lap and vertical panels, with V-grooved surfaces embossed with wood grains and other textures, or in plain panels for board-and-batten applications. Pre-primed hardboard sidings take and hold finish paint exceptionally well.

Technological advances have done more than merely provide house sidings with eye appeal.

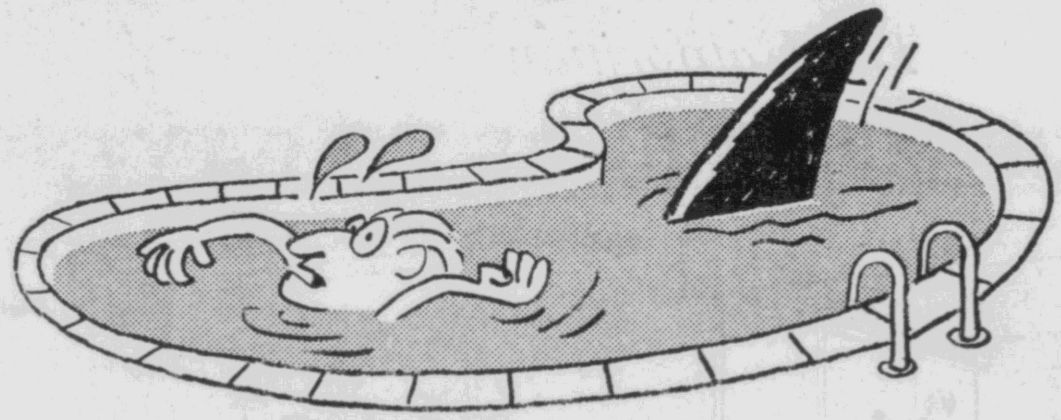
Again using aluminum and hardboard as examples and not because they are unique: the new aluminum coatings have maximum resistance to fading, corrosion, abrasion, staining, salt spray, humidity, grease and oil; hardboard sidings can withstand hammer blows, hail, thrown objects and surface impacts without denting, won't split or splinter even when nailed close to the panel edges, are moisture-resistant and will not rust or corrode.

THE MATERIAL you select is largely a matter of personal preference — whether you are having a house built, having new siding installed or doing the job yourself — and the amount of money you want to spend.

It is important, in any case, that the workmanship be good. If you are having the project done professionally, which is the more likely eventuality, select a reliable contractor, ideally one who has been recommended by a friend or neighbor who has had similar work performed.

A LITTLE imagination put this corner to work. First a recess was built into the wall so that books and interesting accessories could be displayed in an attractive showcase. Then a small refreshment bar was added. The bar provides the base for other conveniences, such as a "communications center." The stools provide a comfortable spot for a phone chat or a quick letter. Children also will find this a good place for games or homework when their own room becomes boring. Easy maintenance was included in the design. Washable Marlite paneling was used on all the walls — a textured oak on the back wall and a contrasting white on the adjacent walls. Easy to install, the plastic-finished hardboard planks can be put up with adhesive and concealed metal clips over old walls or new framing. Black feature strips between the textured oak planks provide an additional visual interest. The counter also is faced with prefinished Marlite. Cozy corners like this can be included in many new homes or as improvement projects in older homes.

Buying a swimming pool?
Watch out for pool sharks!



During the past 10 years, over 200 California swimming pool companies either went under or changed their names. Hundreds of pool owners were left high and dry with nothing to swim in except a sea of regrets.

The best way to avoid pool sharks and fishy deals is to deal with a pool company whose responsibility is established and documented. Over 40,000 people have made their decision for Anthony Pools. Their endorsement has made Anthony the largest, soundest and most reliable pool company in the entire world, the only pool company listed on the American and Pacific Coast Stock Exchanges. Building pools for 25 years at fair competitive prices and providing prompt service and superb engineering—Anthony's reputation is as solid as its pool foundations.

An Anthony pool is all Anthony—all parts and all accessories are manufactured and assembled at Anthony's 13-acre factory. You deal with a major responsible company, not a small, independent franchised dealer. Over the years—if little problems should develop, you cry on one shoulder only at the local Authorized Anthony Service Center.

Prices? They begin as low as $2,495. Since Anthony builds more pools than any other pool builder, such high sales volume allows for very low competitive pricing.

If you're planning to take the plunge, look to Anthony who makes pool buying absolutely sharkproof! Fill out the coupon. Or phone. Now!

What To Do In Iceland?

You Can Stoke A Geyser Or Ogle The Blondes

Is there anything to do in Iceland?

Flense a whale! Stoke a geyser! Take a cross-country pony trek!

What else?

Climb a glacier! Cross the Arctic Circle! Drink "Black Death!" Fly over the world's newest volcanic island! Fish crystal streams and lakes for trout and salmon

Want more?

Swim with the president! Scale a sheer cliff for birds' eggs! Try a sauna bath! Play golf on an 18-hole volcanic lava course! Ogle the world's prettiest girls — tall, long-legged, mini-skirted blondes

Is that it?

Glide in the air! Descend into a volcanic crater! Pick bananas! Photograph the midnight sun! Stalk the rare Icelandic facon!

WHAT ABOUT social, cultural and culinary activities?

Swing at lively nightclubs! Eat Chinese food! Taste shark meat! Tour impressive museums and art galleries! Rhapsodize to a symphony led by an Israeli or Italian guest conductor! Enter the hallowed halls where the world's oldest parliament is in session!

The question really is not what you can do in Iceland, but what Iceland can do for you. There's a lot more, but why bother with details about 60-pound codfish, or visiting weird moon-like crater landscape where U.S. astronauts have trained.

IF YOU LIKE, skip any or all of these exciting attractions. There's incentive enough to go to Iceland on the simple basis that you won't have to tip your cab driver — or anyone else for that matter. There's no tipping in Iceland

Many of the 13,191 American tourists who visited Iceland last year will tell you that they "didn't pay a cent extra to get there," even though the island nation is 2,675 miles from New York. This is because they were passengers of Icelandic Airlines which permits stop-over in Iceland at no added air fare for travelers en route to the British Isles and mainland Europe.

First-time visitors are surprised to learn that the Kentucky-sized island sits right in the middle of the Gulf Stream and has a mild climate, despite its northern location. Temperatures in the lowlands average about 30 degrees in January, the coldest month. This is warmer than January in such cities as Boston, Chicago and Spokane.

Today, Iceland is populated largely by multi-colored sheep (they outnumber people four to one), many shaggy-maned little horses (the famed Icelandic "pony"), and some 200,000 descendants of Viking settlers and the comely lasses they kidnaped in raids along the Irish and Scottish coasts 1,000 years ago.

INDIVIDUALISTIC and rugged as their land, Icelanders nevertheless have built a dynamic welfare state in which they enjoy one of the highest standards of living in the world — spending more of their per capita income on education, health, cultural projects and other public works than any other people. Yet private industry thrives.

Also, on a per capita basis, play more, catch more fish, and are near the top of the list in number of telephones, cars and other modern amenities.

The island's per capita gross national product of $2,470 in 1965 topped such wealthy countries as the United Kingdom, West Germany and Denmark!

MORE THAN half the people live in or near the capital city of Reykjavik, the leading seaport and center of political, cultural and social activities. Attractions and facilities of the capital include the government buildings, University of Iceland, eight museums and art galleries, the National Theater and Symphony Orchestra, the Reykjavik City Theater, sports stadium, luxury hotels, nightclubs, restaurants, cinemas, modern department stores and quaint shops.

The two largest hotels, the 216-bed Loftleidir (opened 1966) and the 155-bed Saga (1962) share the distinction of being the northernmost luxury resorts in the world. Each has nightclubs, several cocktail bars and restaurants. All rooms in both have private bath or shower, telephone, artistic decor and other amenities. Both have Finnish-style sauna baths, and the Loftleidir has an indoor pool heated by hot spring water.

NIGHT LIFE moves at a frenzied pace in Reykjavik during summer months. There are more than a dozen night spots — and when they close, residents crowd the streets, under the midnight sun, walking or driving to the many all-night parties in progress at private homes.

The major clubs offer big-name international entertainment. Bands are lively, usually with the latest rock and mod beat.

Icelanders enjoy dining, drinking, dancing and dressing in style. When they speak about "Black Death," they're referring to the local, appropriately named, aquavitae.

THE DUTY-FREE store at Keflavik Airport offers a wide variety of imported liquors, perfumes, cameras and other goods at bargain prices. Best buys in local products include fluffy sheepskin rugs, $10 to $14; pony skins, $23 to $35 (extra large); handmade Icelandic wool sweaters, $12 for a pullover, $14 for a woman's cardigan, $15 for a man's cardigan; machine-made Icelandic sweaters, $10; silver filigree bracelets or earrings, $4 to $6; Icelandic wool shawls, $8.

Swimming is the most popular sport, enjoyed year-round in open air pools heated by natural hot springs. President Asgeir Asgeirsson of Iceland usually takes a dip every morning at one of the public pools in Reykjavik.

Gliding is popular (about $3 for 15 minutes) at a small airport near Reykjavik. You can golf at the capital's volcanic-strewn 18-hole course (under the midnight sun, if you desire night golf.)

PONY TREKKING is a favorite with visitors and residents. Ride for an hour ($3) or cross-country over glaciers and lava fields for a week ($12). Icelandic ponies have an easy, no bounce, "dog-like" gait which even novice riders can master in a matter of minutes.

Iceland's cold streams and lakes abound in brown trout (up to 26 pounds), char, salmon and other game species. The best streams, especially for salmon, are private, so arrangements for angling should be made beforehand through travel agents.

Fine sea angling (giant cod, ling, haddock, etc.) can be arranged by the Reykjavik Sea Anglers Club.

Hiking and mountain-climbing are popular, with several organized tours of three to 13 days.

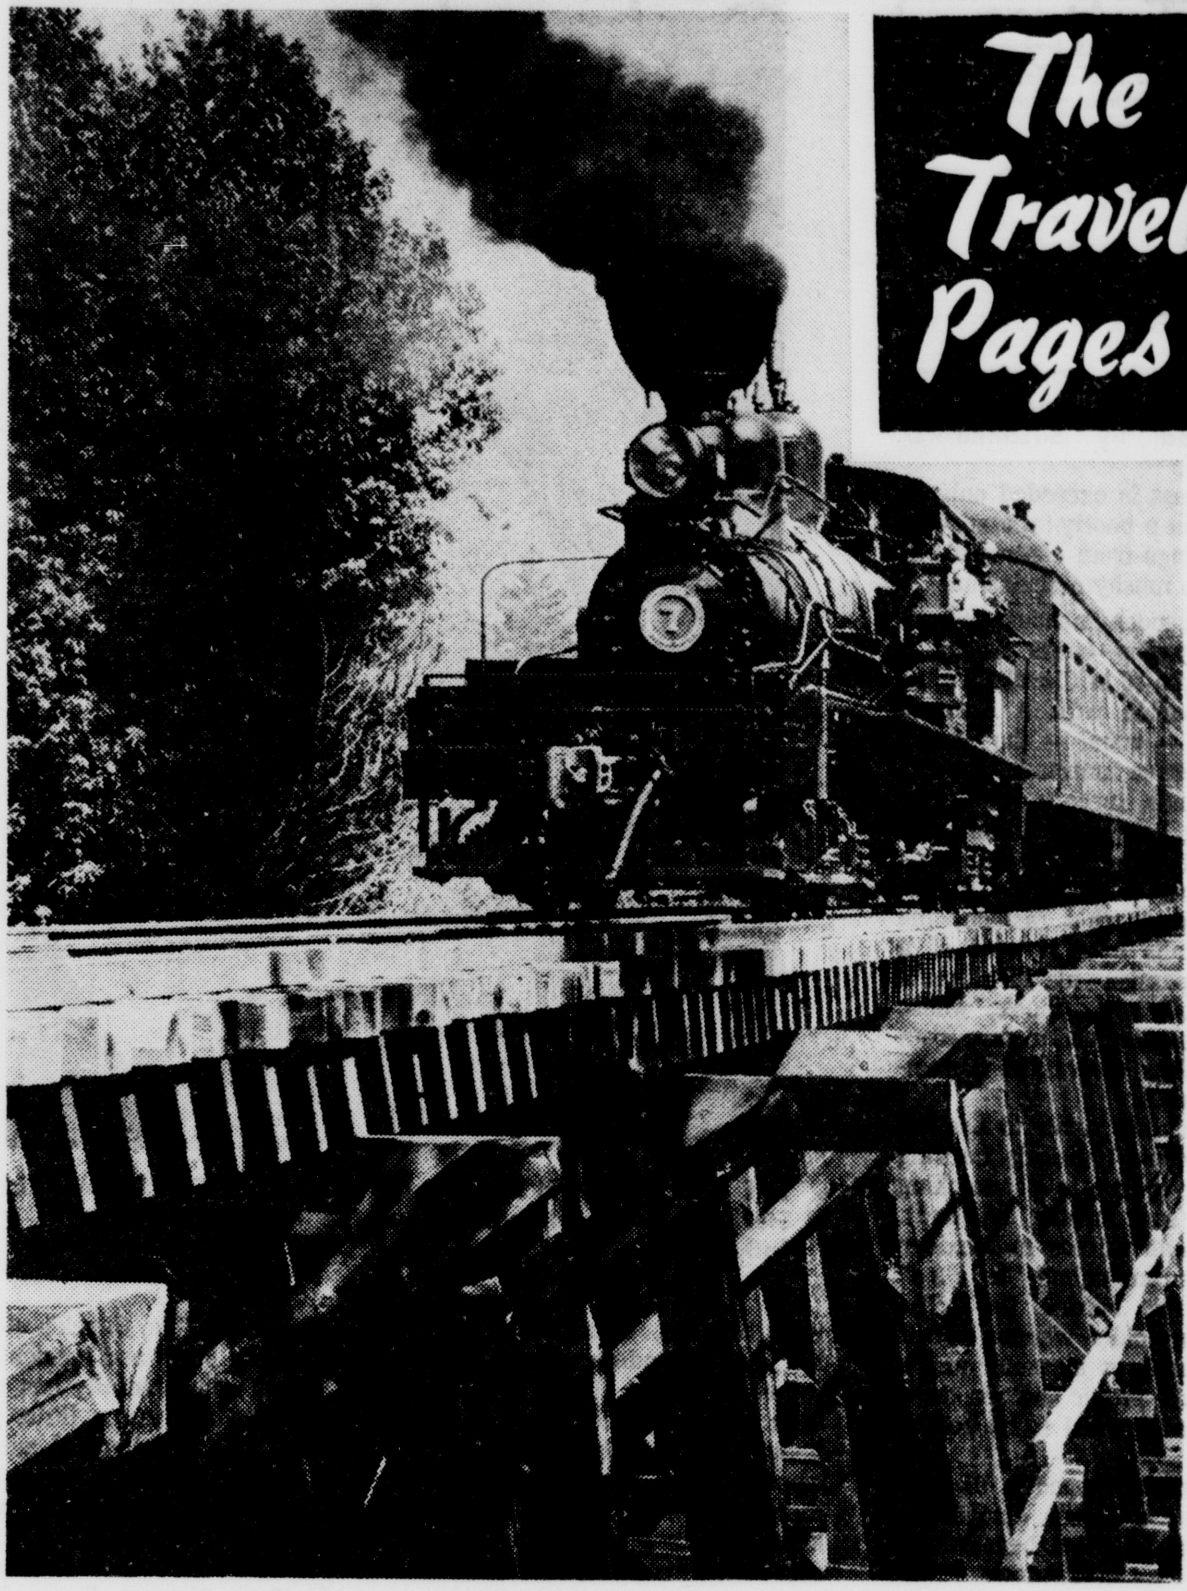
WINTER SPORTS such as skiing or ice-skating are not always possible at Reykjavik because of the mild climate. However, there's a good ski hotel at Akureyi, third largest city in the country and main center in the north.

Sightseeing attractions include the original Great Geysir (for which all other spouting springs in the world were named). Geysir is getting old, but occasionally can be "stoked" into action by dropping soap flakes into its gaping mouth.

There are literally thousands of other geysers, boiling mudholes, steaming sulfur mountains and some of the world's largest waterfalls. These are fed by seven glaciers. Vatnajokull is larger than Rhode Island and Delaware combined.

YOU CAN FLY abut 70 miles south of Reykjavik and view the amazing island of Surtsey. Now tranquil and serene in the ocean ten miles from Iceland's coast, Surtsey rose from the sea in 1963 in a cataclysmic eruption that sent clouds of lava and steam five miles high in the sky. Surtsey now is more than a square mile in size; permanent and lava-covered — the newest island on earth!

Americans can remain in Iceland for up to three months without a visa. A passport is all that is needed.



BILLED AS THE "oldest railroad west of the Rockies," the 115-year-old Arcata and Mad River ("Annie and Mary") Railroad is running a restored 50-ton steam locomotive and four bright red passenger coaches on an 11-mile round-trip route out of its Blue Lake Depot near Eureka on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. The train leaves the depot at 1:30 p.m. and again at 3 p.m. Round trip fare is $2.50 for adults, $1.75 for children under 14. The railroad is owned by the Simpson Timber Co. and is a common carrier serving 11 lumber mills in the lower Mad River Valley. Says John W. Thompson, general superintendent, of his seven-and-a-half-mile-of-track line: "We are not as long as a lot of railroads, but we are just as wide as any of them."

Some Gift Ideas For The Gardening Father

Garden Page

In Marin County the problem of choosing a Father's Day gift is simplified by the fact that just about every man is a gardener to some extent, voluntarily or involuntarily.

Even if he doesn't get a boost in his morale from working with the soil and plants, he is likely to find it necessary to engage in some yard maintenance work from time to time.

Of course, it is the hobbyist, the man who really enjoys gardening, who most appreciates a gardening gift.

FORTUNATELY, Father's Day, June 15, falls right at the zenith of the gardening season.

A plant, a gadget, a gardening book are all possibilities.

When it comes to selecting a plant, there is no real restriction. But perhaps you would be wise to choose from among the more seasonal items on display at Marin nurseries.

Many of them still have container-grown roses in bloom, or dwarf citrus trees that are bearing fruit. One of the newer varieties of rose will be especially appreciated by the rosarian. And the dwarf citrus "availables" range from oranges through grapefruits to the limes.

The gift choices don't stop here. How about a blooming hibiscus or a fragrant gardenia? Or a bonsai plant, which might start father on a new hobby?

MANY nurserymen have newer hybrids of such trees as locusts, ginkgo and liquidambar. Then there are such distinctive trees as Japanese maples or black pines that lend themselves to container growing on the patio or porch.

Don't overlook tree ferns or other shade plants to add to dad's (and the family's) outdoor living pleasure this summer. There are unusual philodendrons and rubber plant-type shrubs that will thrill the most discriminating gardening father.

For smaller budgets, there are many small pots of blooming plants available, and a good selection of hanging basket plants to be had. These will continue to bloom and remind dad of your thoughtfulness.

WHEN IT comes to garden gadgetry, nurseries and stores are a veritable gold mine. Special shears and clippers for pruning or trimming are a necessity — and some fathers would enjoy having more than just one pair.

Hose reels eliminate many problems and frustrations around the house though some dads perhaps wouldn't yield to the temptation — or the luxury — of buying them for themselves. There are several types of reels on the market and one to fit your pocketbook.

There are many other garden gadgets including lawn sprinklers, pressure sprayers, root feeders and spreaders for feeding lawns.

Smaller items are bountiful — quality garden gloves, trowels, spray nozzles for the hose, plant identification labels, and canvas soakers for effective watering of sloping lawns and banks of ground cover.

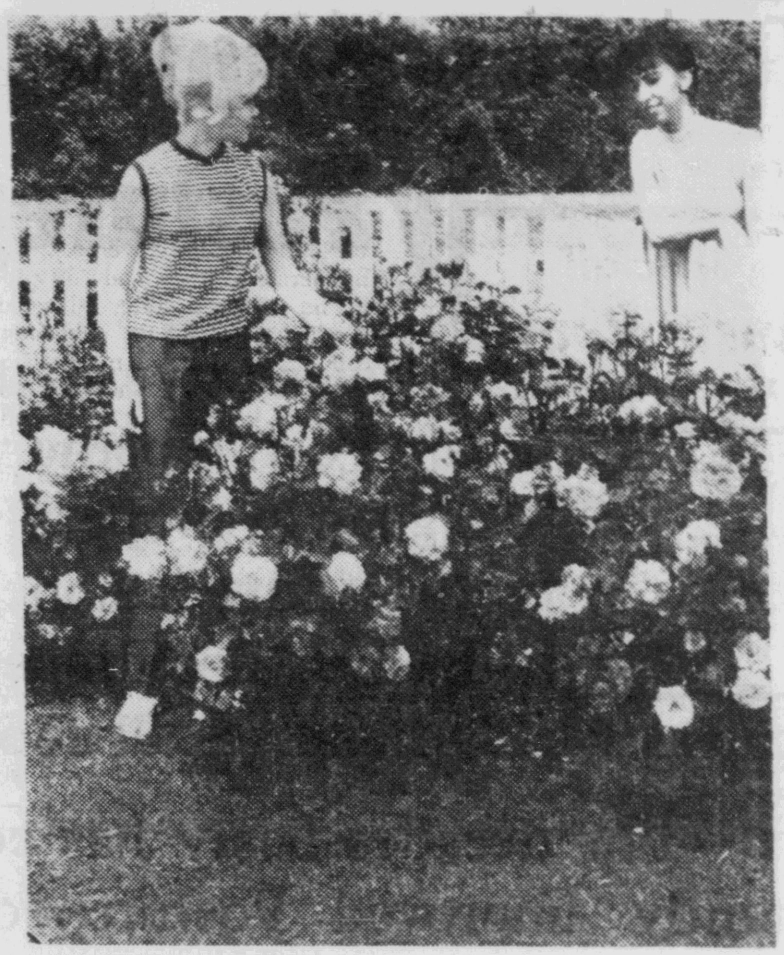
IN THE matter of books, nurseries and bookstores also have plenty of these covering a variety of gardening subjects.

"How to" books will help gardening fathers design a garden work center, build a fence, plant a portable garden or landscape a patio. Hobby-type books will encourage his success with some particular plant, such as roses, camellias, orchids, bonsai, or what have you.

With hobby-type books, it is always nice to include one or two plants described in the books at the same time.

No matter how much dad enjoys his gardening work, he also appreciates an occasional period of rest and relaxation. The gift of some garden furniture then is not at all out of order. Give him an outdoor chair or longue especially suited to his dimensions and needs.

And there are countless other gift possibilities for fathers that garden.



THE CONTAINER-GROWN roses given to dad as a Father's Day gift for setting out in the garden will be enjoyed then, not only by the recipient, but by the family and the neighbors as well. (California Association of Nurserymen photo)

To Cover Those Rocky Areas

Marin gardeners frequently find themselves confronted with rocky areas that are stingy in soil and nutrients and which, because of run-off, resist the best efforts to soak them.

Yet, because of their interesting contours and often colorful stones, they can be converted into garden showcases, if properly planted.

LOOK FOR plants that require little attention — plants that can be neglected and still looked at with pleasure. Some will afford lovely blossoms; others, such as the conifers, are mainly for foliage.

Junipers rate high whenever rock gardens are mentioned. Not the shrubby junipers or the columnar ones, but those that remain low and spread to form a handsome cover. These would include the blue-gray San Jose Spreading Juniper, Bar Harbor or Andorra Junipers.

There are several cotoneasters that lend themselves to rock gardening. Some have glossy green foliage and hug the ground. Others remain low and have branches that grow in rigid, interesting patterns.

BESIDES THEIR texture and distinctive foliage color, cotoneasters provide bright red berries.

The native wild lilac family offers several low-spreading varieties of ceanothus, which shows a large amount of small, fragrant, lilac-like blooms in spring.

Books could be written on groundcovers and succulents that are good choices for rocky places. Just ask your nurseryman to show you a few choice varieties.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Bedding plants can still be set out for quick summer garden color. Here is only a partial list of fine summer performers: Marigolds, zinnias, asters, periwinkles, ageratums and petunias.
- Cut back the old flowering stalks on your delphinium. It will then bloom again in the fall.
- You can plant all types of container-grown trees and shrubs at this time.
- A regular watering schedule is absolutely essential for the health of your lawn for the next several months. Also remember that a well-fed, vigorous lawn conserves water.
- Bush roses can be pruned lightly for shaping after they finish their spring bloom.
- While planning your vacation, also make plans for the care of your garden while you are gone. A couple of weeks or more of neglect can be disastrous.
- Keep up the pellet war against snails and slugs.

A Trite, Tedious Effort

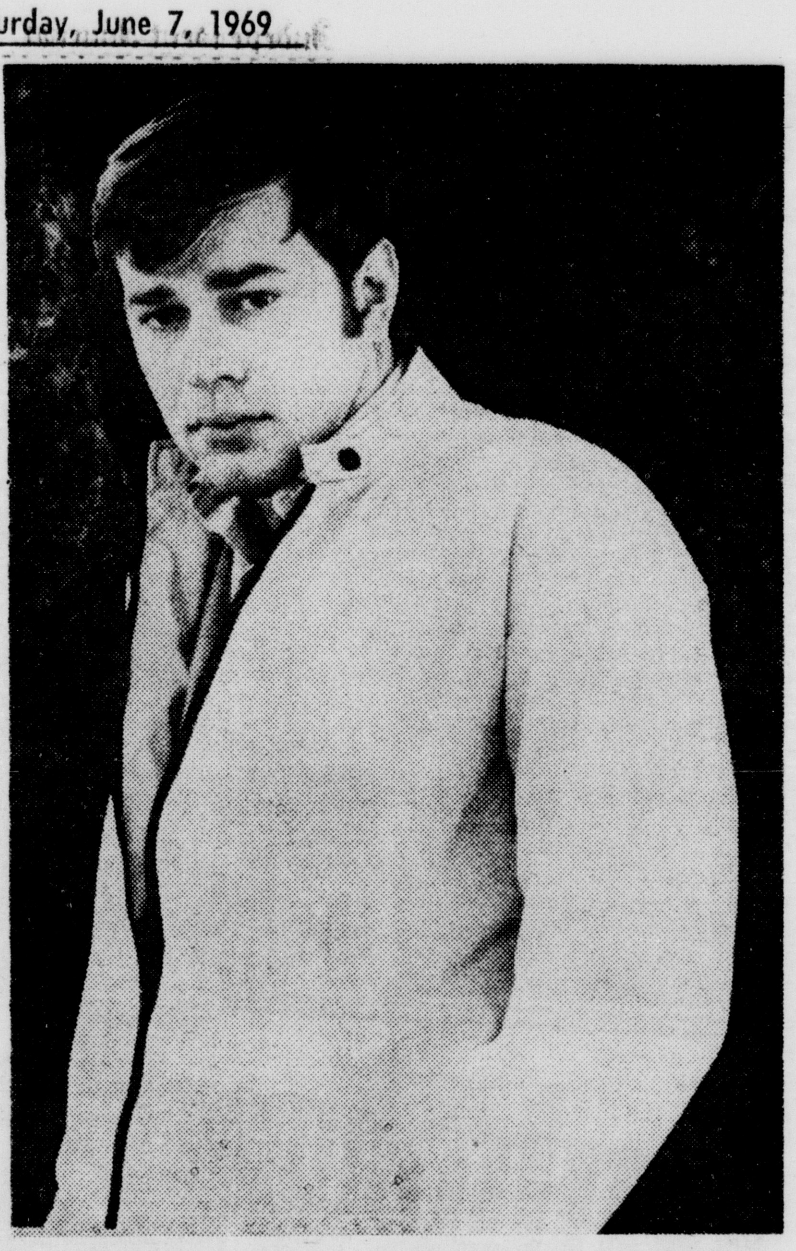
CHUCK by Carl Sterland; Doubleday, 181 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Suzanne D. Stamler.

Triteness is exceeded only by tedium in a poorly-tailored yarn that swings from contrived vulgarity to mushy melodrama.

The pseudonymonous author's autobiography opens as he is fading into 40 in Cleveland's upper suburbia with a common malaise — ennui — that comes from a so-so marriage, superficial friends, three normally demanding creature - comfort - oriented children and a middling career as a freelance writer. Faltering in this fashion, the writer falls upon a seed of a former passion—his illegitimate 21-year-old son, Chuck, whose life he feels obliged to save from a bleeding ulcer and heroin-soaked-bitch.

His monthly jaunts to Los Angeles, where Chuck is hacking cabs, give way to pot-smoking forays (son turning on dad), man-to-man soirees in Mexican bordellos, smuggling "horse" across the border for "The Bitch," an older woman who is using Chuck as a runner and a stud, while father and son swap pasts too identical to be believable.

Each man trapped in his own unfulfilled existence establishes a band of affection beyond any thing he has ever known.



THE PHOTOGRAPH is from the jacket of "Chuck" by Carl Sterland, a pseudonym, about the new relationship of a father to his illegitimate son.

While dad is rediscovering his intensity and recapturing his fading youth through his escapades and all-night bull sessions with his son, Chuck confesses his love and admiration for his father whom he claims to have seen in a psychedelic flash of insight. "I'm only telling you what I saw, Carl. You were there. You will be there. I don't know what's going on between us, but there's more to come. I'm beginning to think I'll be okay, because of you in a way. I guess you've got to love something before it turns out right."

To confirm this, Chuck's ulcer too rapidly heals and incidentally Chuck coincidentally has talent — and not just a little. He wants to be a Hollywood actor. His father arranges tests for him and is told that his son will one day be a star. He wants to write and our rescuer romps with Chuck through Europe on assignment, while taking literary criticism from him from time to time. Chuck seems to have a knack for hacking away at professional writers' hackneyed phrases — thus giving dad greater insight into his own medium and even greater admiration for his son.

All of which proves that there are ways of closing the generation gap by opening ourselves up to each other, but there must be better ways to write about it and possibly wiser ways to do it.

Mill Valley Poet Has Fun With The Foibles Of Society

LECHEROUS, LICENTIOUS, LASCIVIOUS LYRICS IS NOT THE TITLE OF THIS BOOK. THE ACTUAL TITLE IS THE VIOLENT VIOLET by John Milton Hagen; A. S. Barnes, 104 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Readers of the Independent-Journal are familiar with the pithy and witty two-line and four-line verse of Mill Valley's John Milton Hagen from the I-J's "What Our Readers Say" column and from the Marin Magazine's "Poet's Corner." A good many of them have chuckled as well over his satirical collection published under the title "The Shrewd Nude."

He has followed that success with another book of typical Hagen verse, and this time he begins poking fun at our foibles right from the outset with a title that spoofs the modern literary trend toward pornography.

Inside, Hagen has his fun with hippies, De Gaulle, the pharmacist, politicians, Mother Goose, the bus company and a wide diversity of other targets.

A few Hagenisms from "Lecherous, Licentious . . .":

"Beware of the barbiturate—
You may become habituate!"

"Do you care who's Miss Universe? We don't — hence this puny verse."

"Youth more evil today is myth — They've merely more tools to do it with."

And: "Jack and Jill once bought a pill; Like 'twas no moral question, For, (in big print) 'twas SODA MINT, 'cause Jill had indigestion."

Hagen obviously had a picnic putting together this book, and his readers are not long in getting into the spirit with him. As Erskine Caldwell says in the brief introductory note he has written for "Lecherous, Licentious. . .":

"The world is in dire need of verse and verses the way John Milton Hagen does it and them."

Neglected Novel

THE TREMOR OF FORGERY by Patricia Highsmith; Doubleday, 254 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

This novel by a young American now living in France should be receiving greater attention and more praise than it has been accorded.

An unpretentious but splendidly told tale, it deals with an American writer in Tunisia attempting to work and to re-establish his identity.

What makes the novel so enjoyable is Miss Highsmith's fine feeling for characterization. Every member of her cast in individualistic and interesting. Furthermore, she has a gift for capturing the flavor of a culture — in this case Arabic — without sentimentality but nonetheless sympathetically.

That Howard Ingham does eventually arrive at new values and goals is both satisfying and acceptable to the reader, for Miss Highsmith has laid her foundation well.

New Nabokov Novel Fitting Climax To Magnificent Career

ADA by Vladimir Nabokov; McGraw-Hill, 589 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

To celebrate his 70th birthday, Nabokov has published what, when the dust settles, might well be seen as a masterpiece on the massive scale of a "Ulysses" or a "Remembrance of Times Past."

An erotic tour de force, it is also a mighty exploration of the interaction of time and love, and a joyous illumination of life and literature.

For this epic, Nabokov has invented his own world, or rather twin worlds: "Anti-Terra" which in many ways resembles the late 19th Century European milieu and "Terra" whose debatable existence is clearest to those whose minds are most unstable. It is a land that bears a striking resemblance to 20th Century America.

This superbly Nabokovian device gives the author access to two times, as it were. Thus one moment the scene is all 19th Century Russian country house — governesses, liveried picnics, duels and gigs; without losing a step on the next page the characters may be carrying on in a crease of "Terra" time, with bikini-coke-Hollywood swimming pool trappings.

The heart of "Ada" is Ardis Hall, the Veen family home ("ardis" in Greek is the point of the arrow, "the point of time"), and most of the first half of the book is devoted to the launching of the affair there between 14-year-old Van Veen, who is to become a renowned psychologist-philosopher of the nature of time, and what the family tree shows to be his first cousin, Ada, a nymphet of 12.

However it becomes evident (after a while, these introductory chapters are heavy going) that the relationship between the two children is far closer. They are in fact full sister and brother, and the account of their nevertheless idyllic summer is a triumphant celebration of sexual love on a scale rarely, if ever, achieved in print: for when it comes to evocating the heat and passion of a physical encounter (and just about every other kind of encounter, as well) Nabokov, operating on a level far above raw four-letter banalities, has the field all to himself.

Ada's and Van's lifelong love cultimates with their collaborating, in their extreme old age, on this book of memoirs. (Throughout their running comments and marginal notes are generously included.) And thus at the end we are again at the beginning of time, and love, and the vital communion between them that is the backbone of the novel.

This last section also includes a report by Van, now 97, on the vicissitudes of old age, one of the most poignant and cuttingly witty accounts of that state offered in all literature.

For a good many years to come, one would guess, "Ada" will be read for many reasons, not all concerned with Veen's philosophy of time-love. It will be read for the sheer delight of the grand-scale, full-passioned (incestuous) love affair, and for the masterly opulence of the sexual passages. One would further guess that more than one PhD candidate in English will find his dissertation in the endless wealth of literary tributes and/or parodies, puns, conundrums, myths and general erudite fun (some of it at the expense of his fellow writers).

One is tempted to say that Nabokov's material is as loaded as that of Joyce.

Certainly his grand theme, the balance of time and love, is worthy of his myriad talents. "Ada" is a staggering achievement, and as such, a fitting climax to the magnificent body of work he has produced.

An Elector Raps America's Outmoded Election System

PRESIDENTIAL LOTTERY by James A. Michener; Random House, 240 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Novelist James Michener was a presidential elector from Pennsylvania. That experience confirmed and reinforced his disgust with the outmoded and unreliable "electoral college" system and resulted in his book, "Presidential Lottery."

The system by which faceless men — mostly unknown to the voters — are placed in a position to negate the popular will in presidential elections has put American democracy in trouble in the past.

As Michener points out, the electors are not required by law to vote for the presidential candidates to whom they are pledged on the ballot and some of them sometimes have not done so. In a close election, deals to switch electors' votes are possible; they were talked of when it was thought that neither Nixon nor Humphrey might get a majority of the electoral vote last year.

Michener prefers a reform that would retain the apportionment of electoral votes to the states, but cast them automatically for whichever candidate won a plurality in each state. He would, however, support either the direct election of the President, now under consideration in Congress, or a system of apportioning electoral votes by congressional districts.

Anyone who regards retention or abolition of the electoral college as a more-or-less academic matter will get an eye-opener from "Presidential Lottery."

Some Light Reading To While Away The Warm-Weather Days

By DON KEOWN

MARY ROBLEE HENRY
Among the vineyards

A FARMHOUSE IN PROVENCE by Mary Roblee Henry; Knopf, 196 pages, $5.95.

THE SINO-VARIANT by Allison Ind; McKay, 306 pages, $5.95.

THE MAN ON THE RAFFLES VERANDAH by Lydia Kirk; Doubleday, 184 pages, $4.95.

ANYTIME, ANYWHERE by Martin Caidin; Dutton, 248 pages, $5.95.

This week, four books strictly for light, non-serious summer reading:

"A FARMHOUSE in Provence" is Vogue editor Mary Roblee Henry's account of how she and her diplomat husband acquired a historic but dilapidated farmhouse in France's wine country and transformed it into a refuge where they can enjoy a far different kind of life from what they had been accustomed to as city-dwellers.

Mrs. Henry writes very well, with a descriptive style that is especially well suited to this kind of material and reflecting her years as a writer of travel articles for her magazine. Her story of how La Serafine was found on a hillside in the Vaucluse and of how it was rehabilitated and given a new life is warmly humorous, and highly entertaining.

One flinches at what seems the vast amounts of money the Henrys have poured into their project. Few of us could afford it. But in this age of hustle and bustle and continuous pressure, one can understand their dedication to and affection for their quiet retreat.

Mrs. Henry offers us, too, some fine insight into the character of the Provencaux. They are individualists well worth your acquaintance. On the other hand, personally, we felt Mrs. Henry to be burdened with one of the most annoying fathers-in-law we ever encountered, although she obviously loves the old windbag and nuisance.

Mrs. Henry avoids cuteness and over-sentimentality, yet succeeds in capturing the charm and flavor of a region and its distinctive culture. Those of us who cannot create La Serafines of our own can share, through her book, at least some of the rewards and delights.

"THE SINO-Variant" is a spy thriller by Col. Allison Ind, U. S. Army retired, who has drawn upon his own background as a biochemist and as an intelligence officer, agent and technician.

Colonel Ind has written two well-regarded fact books on espionage, but, for us, his fiction is not quite so successful.

His latest novel strikes this reader as a curious blending of the old Fu Manchu school of thrillers, with its sinister yellow peril, and the newer James Bond school, with its gimmicks and its pretty girls.

His hero, Cornelius Craig, is, like the author, a retired U.S. intelligence agent living in England. He is somewhere between the flamboyant Bond and the LeCarre-Deighton non-hero, not as flashy as the former, less nondescript than the latter.

Craig believes his old career is behind him. But scattered outbreaks of meningitis around the globe pose the possibility of a new kind of threat to the West. Craig, with special training in microbiology, is drawn inevitably into the affair, and is soon hopping around England and eventually around the world, matching wits and scientific devices with the evil powers behind the menace.

Weaknesses of Ind's novel include a tendency to get carried away, so that his premises become less and less credible as the book progresses, and perhaps a too great preoccupation with gimmicks and a too frequent reliance upon cooincidence.

Yet the novel is unquestionably entertaining. It does not boost Ind into the top ranks of authors of spy thrillers, but your attention is unlikely to stray until you have seen Colonel Craig safely through his last encounter with the forces of "the New Dawn."

SURPRISINGLY, "The Man on the Raffles Verandah" is more convincing and in some ways superior to "The Sino-Variant."

We say surprising, because the photo of the author, Lydia Kirk, shows a pleasant-faced little old lady in her 70s.

And her biography does not indicate that Mrs. Kirk has had any personal experience with espionage.

She does know Singapore and England, however, where her novel is set. She is the much traveled widow of a former admiral who also served the U.S. extensively as a diplomat. Her lone previous book was a collection of letters written in Russia and entitled "Postmarked Moscow." Now she has set about carving herself a new career as a suspense novelist.

She, too, has as her hero a retired agent. But her Maj. Malcolm Gordon is British and considerably more conservative than Ind's Cornelius Craig. He is past the age of romantic involvement, and there are no devilish new devices or weapons at his command. But when he is called out of retirement to play deadly games against a Singapore smuggling and spy ring with Communist China connections, he shows considerable ingenuity and cool courage.

Mrs. Kirk's writing shows some stiffness at times, a tendency she will probably overcome with practice. And the mystery or surprise element in her story is minimal. But her background of one of the Orient's most intriguing cities is splendid, and her characters are generally interesting if not deeply etched. The septuagenarian has done rather well in her first outing in a highly competitive field and rates better than just a passing grade.

Cunningham

"ANYTIME, Anywhere" by Martin Caidin seems like another of those action novels that have been made into so many John Wayne movies, with the late Ward Bond as his sidekick, the two of them blustering and brawling.

Or, for more finesse, the late Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy could have played the lead roles.

Whoever actually turns up on screen, if the picture is made, it will probably be a better movie than it is a novel. For one thing, some of the rampant and sickening sadism will have to be omitted or toned down a bit. And the four-letter words thinned out somewhat.

Caidin, incidentally, has already sold three novels to Hollywood.

He is a specialist on aviation and the military, and is highly regarded for his knowledge of and writing on those subjects. Not surprisingly, the best parts of "Anytime, Anywhere" are to be found in those episodes of airmen and aircraft in the sky, particularly a splendid opening description of two pilots and their planes battling a tremendous electrical storm over the Atlantic.

The story itself is contrived and tiresome. It centers around tough Matt Bowden, flyer and aviation maverick in the risky business of ferrying old craft and flying stunt planes for the movies. When an opportunity for a dubious venture that offers bigger rewards presents itself, Matt decides to take the chance. Unfortunately, Matt Bowden is not an appealing character. His girl friend, Diane Kelly, is thinly drawn and almost lost in the masculine cast. Some of Matt's flying cohorts are mildly interesting.

No doubt the men in this rough and dangerous business do spew a stream of obscenities and profanities, as Caidin has them doing. But somehow he makes it sound unlikely and all quite self-conscious.

Aviation buffs and fans of "he-man" literature should enjoy the book. But for others, there is better reading around.

LOUISE TEATHER, a student of the history of the Tiburon Peninsula-Belvedere Island area where she resides, has written "Island of Six Names: A History of Belvedere, Calif., 1834-1890."

The booklet is sponsored by the Belvedere-Tiburon Landmarks Society through a memorial fund for Marjorie Rey Rickard, nature and history enthusiast, and all profits will go to the society.

Mrs. Teather, a former Independent-Journal correspondent, directs her attention upon Belvedere, following it through successive periods when it was known as El Potrero de la Punta del Tiburon (the Pasture of Point Tiburon), Kashow's Island for Israel Kashow, Peninsula Island, Promontory Island, Still Island and finally Belvedere Island, although throughout all these island titles it was actually connected by causeway to the larger Tiburon Peninsula.

The book was lithographed by Graphic Arts of Marin and is illustrated with maps and old sketches.

It can be ordered from the Landmarks Society, Post Office Box 134, Belvedere-Tiburon, 94920, at $3.20 per copy, including tax and mailing charge.

THE TALLYMAN by Bill Knox; Doubleday, 188 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

The police team of Colin Thane and Phil Moss functions in the toughest district of what has to be one of the most unprepossessing cities on earth, Glasgow, Scotland, working efficiently and humanely, while confronted with many of the same daily living frustrations and problems as you and I.

This time they are up against a loan shark, or tallyman, who doesn't hesitate to use muscle and even murder when his victims welsh or others get in his way.

Thane and Moss struggle to uncover the identity of the tallyman, and their quest takes them into both high finance and the underworld. The mystery element isn't all that perplexing. But Knox is adept at making his characters interesting and meaningful.

THE EXPLOITERS

Imperiled Pleasure Of Growing Up

ASSAULT ON CHILDHOOD! by Ron Goulart; Sherbourne Press, 278 pages, $6.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.

In affluent, child-oriented America, it seems impossible that there could be an "Assault on Childhood!," but writer Ron Goulart proves one exists in his book of that title.

He demonstrates conclusively that even while our youngsters might be under-disciplined in the home, they can also be over-regimented by society. That parents who pamper outrageously often also fail to protect their children from the exploitation of others.

"The child," Goulart writes, "is on his way to adolescence, and from there to adulthood, and his transition shouldn't be interfered with by the giants of the kid business. The meaning and pleasures of growing up should not be imposed from the outside."

Children, he claims, are more likely to be regarded and treated as consumers than as kids. "Everyone has the right to be left alone, the right to occasional solitude. Everyone, that is, except children."

Many of the producers of mass products regard the words "consumer" and "child-like" as synonymous, Goulart charges, and would like to see "the worst characteristics of children . . . survive into adult life. Too much advertising presupposes a residue of childishness in the viewer. The advertising aimed at children begins what can be a lifelong assault."

Some of Goulart's specific targets:

Toys, which are often only scaled-down models of adult appliances, or war toys that glamorize killing and encourage aggressions, or dolls such as Barbie that require extravagant spending that teaches small girls "to expect to be valued by an ever-increasing wardrobe and their ability to manipulate their fathers, and, later, their husbands into buying clothes and more clothes."

The Walt Disney organization, which Goulart describes as "a gigantic sprawling mechanism, antiseptic and incredibly efficient, with the driving purpose of making money from children. The Disney machine may be bigger and cuter than a slot machine, but it thinks the same way . . ." It is, the writer claims, a manufacturer of "the false dream . . . a world without the rigors of cause and effect . . . (it is) sugary sentiment coupled with engulfing commercialism." And: "America is not so much a sick as a childish society. Walt Disney did much to encourage this retreat from maturity."

Children's television programming, termed "a mass of indiscriminate entertainment dominated by some 40 animated program series which in turn are dominated by ugliness, noise and violence. . . . The history of the last two decades of children's television is a history of carelessness and exploitation." Violence, Goulart suggests, should be criticized not so much for quantity as the way in which it is presented.

Comic books — the surviving ones "are not for kids at all" and the ones that came before them were saturated with sadism, sex and racism.

And "empty-calories foods" — the soft drinks, candies, sugared cereals, pastries, and other heavily carbohydrate snacks that, thanks to coaxing, make up so much of the diet of children and teen-agers.

"Every childhood now is in danger of ceasing to be a voyage of discovery and turning into a prearranged tour," Goulart asserts.

"To let ourselves be forced into thinking we can prove our love and concern (for our children) with objects and gifts is . . . wrong," he also declares.

What can parents do to resist these exploiters?

For one thing, Goulart advises, they can complain loud and long — about bad TV programming and commercials, about dangerous and unwholesome toys, about misrepresented foods, etc.

They can become "label readers," especially in the supermarket, making certain before they buy exactly what the contents are inside the package.

"The most applicable means of overthrowing the entire kid business, of minimizing its effects, involves getting our notions about being parents sorted out," Goulart writes. "If we're not sure, if we're impressed by the propaganda of the kid business, then we can't really function as mentors, guides and teachers. We become either casualties or implements of the assault on childhood."

"Don't let the juggernaut of the kid business run you over," the author implores.

In the great outpouring of "muckraking" books triggered by Rachel Carson and stimulated by Ralph Nader, Goulart's "Assault on Childhood!" must be regarded as one of the most important and most convincing. He seems sometimes self-contradictory, criticizing some (the toymakers, for instance) for too much realism, and others (Disney) for too little. He repeats that old saw about newspapers and magazines paying attention to children only when they have done something wrong — an infuriating misstatement to any reporter who has spent hours recording the accomplishments of children and youth for the reading public. But his basic assumptions and interpretations are sound. And he may have put his fingers, in exploitation, on a cause for some of the current unrest among youth that is every bit as important as the much blamed permissiveness in the home.

Ironically, many of the critics of the permissive no doubt rank high among the exploiters.

Technology Has Improved The Eye-Appeal Of Siding

It's no longer possible to take a quick glance at the outside of a house and tell the nature of the material used as siding.

Sometimes even a close inspection doesn't instantly reveal whether the "overcoat," as builders call it, is made of wood in its natural state, plywood, hardboard, asphalt, asbestos-cement, aluminum, vinyl or whatever. New advances in coatings and finishes have tended to bring together the appearances of the various materials so that one resembles the other.

THIS INABILITY to distinguish which is which is of no real importance, except perhaps to some home owners who choose one material but want it to seem like something else. In much the same way, a householder will often select something like a coffee table because it has a laminated plastic top — provided it has a wood-grained finish.

Two examples of siding which come in a large variety of styles, finishes and colors are aluminum and hardboard.

Aluminum now comes in many colors, among them deep browns, green, gold and earth tone. Patterns and designs are many, including textured wood grains that you can actually feel. These are embossed directly on aluminum sections. In some cases, the metal and coating are embossed at the same time; in others, only the coating is embossed.

TEXTURES RANGE from smooth marble-like finishes to rough-sawn lumber to wood clapboard.

Hardboard sidings are available as horizontal lap and vertical panels, with V-grooved surfaces embossed with wood grains and other textures, or in plain panels for board-and-batten applications. Pre-primed hardboard sidings take and hold finish paint exceptionally well.

Technological advances have done more than merely provide house sidings with eye appeal.

Again using aluminum and hardboard as examples and not because they are unique: the new aluminum coatings have maximum resistance to fading, corrosion, abrasion, staining, salt spray, humidity, grease and oil; hardboard sidings can withstand hammer blows, hail, thrown objects and surface impacts without denting, won't split or splinter even when nailed close to the panel edges, are moisture-resistant and will not rust or corrode.

THE MATERIAL you select is largely a matter of personal preference — whether you are having a house built, having new siding installed or doing the job yourself — and the amount of money you want to spend.

It is important, in any case, that the workmanship be good. If you are having the project done professionally, which is the more likely eventuality, select a reliable contractor, ideally one who has been recommended by a friend or neighbor who has had similar work performed.

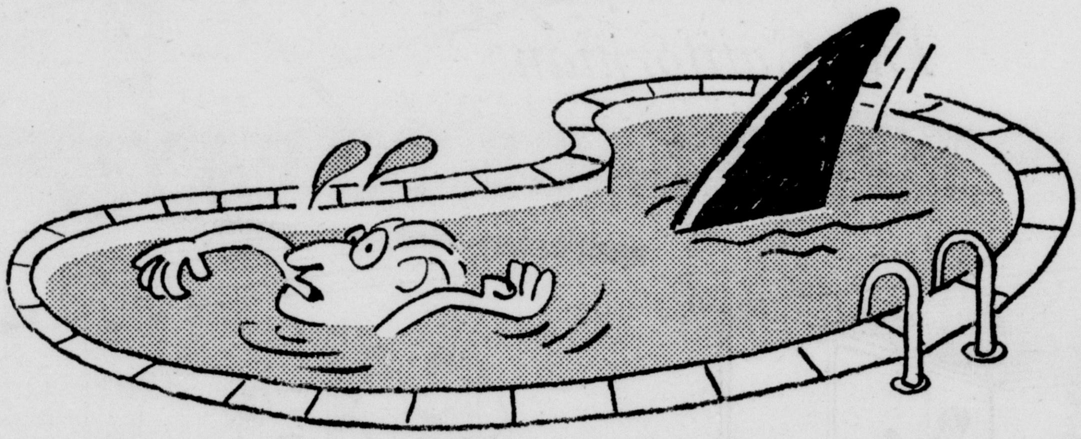
A LITTLE imagination put this corner to work. First a recess was built into the wall so that books and interesting accessories could be displayed in an attractive showcase. Then a small refreshment bar was added. The bar provides the base for other conveniences, such as a "communications center." The stools provide a comfortable spot for a phone chat or a quick letter. Children also will find this a good place for games or homework when their own room becomes boring. Easy maintenance was included in the design. Washable Marlite paneling was used on all the walls — a textured oak on the back wall and a contrasting white on the adjacent walls. Easy to install, the plastic-finished hardboard planks can be put up with adhesive and concealed metal clips over old walls or new framing. Black feature strips between the textured oak planks provide an additional visual interest. The counter also is faced with prefinished Marlite. Cozy corners like this can be included in many new homes or as improvement projects in older homes.

Buying a swimming pool?
Watch out for pool sharks!



During the past 10 years, over 200 California swimming pool companies either went under or changed their names. Hundreds of pool owners were left high and dry with nothing to swim in except a sea of regrets.

The best way to avoid pool sharks and fishy deals is to deal with a pool company whose responsibility is established and documented. Over 40,000 people have made their decision for Anthony Pools. Their endorsement has made Anthony the largest, soundest and most reliable pool company in the entire world, the only pool company listed on the American and Pacific Coast Stock Exchanges. Building pools for 25 years at fair competitive prices and providing prompt service and superb engineering—Anthony's reputation is as solid as its pool foundations.

An Anthony pool is all Anthony—all parts and all accessories are manufactured and assembled at Anthony's 13-acre factory. You deal with a major responsible company, not a small, independent franchised dealer. Over the years—if little problems should develop, you cry on one shoulder only at the local Authorized Anthony Service Center.

Prices? They begin as low as $2,495. Since Anthony builds more pools than any other pool builder, such high sales volume allows for very low competitive pricing.

If you're planning to take the plunge, look to Anthony who makes pool buying absolutely sharkproof! Fill out the coupon. Or phone. Now!

Some Gift Ideas For The Gardening Father

Garden Page

In Marin County the problem of choosing a Father's Day gift is simplified by the fact that just about every man is a gardener to some extent, voluntarily or involuntarily.

Even if he doesn't get a boost in his morale from working with the soil and plants, he is likely to find it necessary to engage in some yard maintenance work from time to time.

Of course, it is the hobbyist, the man who really enjoys gardening, who most appreciates a gardening gift.

FORTUNATELY, Father's Day, June 15, falls right at the zenith of the gardening season.

A plant, a gadget, a gardening book are all possibilities.

When it comes to selecting a plant, there is no real restriction. But perhaps you would be wise to choose from among the more seasonal items on display at Marin nurseries.

Many of them still have container-grown roses in bloom, or dwarf citrus trees that are bearing fruit. One of the newer varieties of rose will be especially appreciated by the rosarian. And the dwarf citrus "availables" range from oranges through grapefruits to the limes.

The gift choices don't stop here. How about a blooming hibiscus or a fragrant gardenia? Or a bonsai plant, which might start father on a new hobby?

MANY nurserymen have newer hybrids of such trees as locusts, ginkgo and liquidambar. Then there are such distinctive trees as Japanese maples or black pines that lend themselves to container growing on the patio or porch.

Don't overlook tree ferns or other shade plants to add to dad's (and the family's) outdoor living pleasure this summer. There are unusual philodendrons and rubber plant-type shrubs that will thrill the most discriminating gardening father.

For smaller budgets, there are many small pots of blooming plants available, and a good selection of hanging basket plants to be had. These will continue to bloom and remind dad of your thoughtfulness.

WHEN IT comes to garden gadgetry, nurseries and stores are a veritable gold mine. Special shears and clippers for pruning or trimming are a necessity — and some fathers would enjoy having more than just one pair.

Hose reels eliminate many problems and frustrations around the house though some dads perhaps wouldn't yield to the temptation — or the luxury — of buying them for themselves. There are several types of reels on the market and one to fit your pocketbook.

There are many other garden gadgets including lawn sprinklers, pressure sprayers, root feeders and spreaders for feeding lawns.

Smaller items are bountiful — quality garden gloves, trowels, spray nozzles for the hose, plant identification labels, and canvas soakers for effective watering of sloping lawns and banks of ground cover.

IN THE matter of books, nurseries and bookstores also have plenty of these covering a variety of gardening subjects.

"How to" books will help gardening fathers design a garden work center, build a fence, plant a portable garden or landscape a patio. Hobby-type books will encourage his success with some particular plant, such as roses, camellias, orchids, bonsai, or what have you.

With hobby-type books, it is always nice to include one or two plants described in the books at the same time.

No matter how much dad enjoys his gardening work, he also appreciates an occasional period of rest and relaxation. The gift of some garden furniture then is not at all out of order. Give him an outdoor chair or longue especially suited to his dimensions and needs.

And there are countless other gift possibilities for fathers that garden.

THE CONTAINER-GROWN roses given to dad as a Father's Day gift for setting out in the garden will be enjoyed then, not only by the recipient, but by the family and the neighbors as well. (California Association of Nurserymen photo)

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- ✓Bedding plants can still be set out for quick summer garden color. Here is only a partial list of fine summer performers: Marigolds, zinnias, asters, periwinkles, ageratums and petunias.
- ✓Cut back the old flowering stalks on your delphinium. It will then bloom again in the fall.
- ✓You can plant all types of container-grown trees and shrubs at this time.
- ✓A regular watering schedule is absolutely essential for the health of your lawn for the next several months. Also remember that a well-fed, vigorous lawn conserves water.
- ✓Bush roses can be pruned lightly for shaping after they finish their spring bloom.
- ✓While planning your vacation, also make plans for the care of your garden while you are gone. A couple of weeks or more of neglect can be disastrous.
- ✓Keep up the pellet war against snails and slugs.

To Cover Those Rocky Areas

Marin gardeners frequently find themselves confronted with rocky areas that are stingy in soil and nutrients and which, because of run-off, resist the best efforts to soak them.

Yet, because of their interesting contours and often colorful stones, they can be converted into garden showcases, if properly planted.

LOOK FOR plants that require little attention — plants that can be neglected and still looked at with pleasure. Some will afford lovely blossoms; others, such as the conifers, are mainly for foliage.

Junipers rate high whenever rock gardens are mentioned. Not the shrubby junipers or the columnar ones, but those that remain low and spread to form a handsome cover. These would include the blue-gray San Jose Spreading Juniper, Bar Harbor or Andorra Junipers.

There are several cotoneasters that lend themselves to rock gardening. Some have glossy green foliage and hug the ground. Others remain low and have branches that grow in rigid, interesting patterns.

BESIDES THEIR texture and distinctive foliage color, cotoneasters provide bright red berries.

The native wild lilac family offers several low-spreading varieties of ceanothus, which shows a large amount of small, fragrant, lilac-like blooms in spring.

Books could be written on groundcovers and succulents that are good choices for rocky places. Just ask your nurseryman to show you a few choice varieties.

Siesta, sir? Why not? It's a great Spanish habit and here's a chair specially made for snoozing, sprawling, just relaxing. It's by La-Z-Boy, and covered in Uniroyal Naugahyde, so stains just don't happen! Good-looking, too. Sleek continental styling, rich fruitwood trim, concealed ottoman. And built beautifully. So beautifully that La-Z-Boy guarantees its mechanism for the life of the chair. Need a siesta? You need a La-Z-Boy. At Young Bros., a complete selection in black, Ox-Blood or Tan, of course.

What comfortable firmness is all about: Sealy Posturepedic®

Twenty years ago, Sealy Posturepedic was designed in cooperation with leading orthopedic surgeons. Posturepedic knows what firmness is all about.

For decades Sealy has constantly improved Posturepedic. Today its quality control standards are the very highest in the industry. In fact, much of this mattress is hand made. Sealy won't settle for anything less than the finest materials and manufacturing techniques ...and neither should you.

Sealy®

But what about comfort? Sealy is a firm believer in your comfort. This mattress is firm... not hard. Comfortable... not soft. Come in and try one of these pamperers. You'll find it's not hard to take!

Choose your own personal comfort–extra firm or gently firm.... remember there's one Posturepedic, made only by Sealy.

Greyhound Pact Union Vote Due

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Officials of Greyhound Bus Lines and the mechanics' representatives reached a tentative agreement last night that is expected to avert a threatened strike which would have left 4,000 Marin County commuters without service.

The agreement was reached about 6 p.m. last night following a 90-minute meeting between the two sides.

Terms of the tenative agreement were not announced, pending approval by the union's 350 members.

K. B. Satrom, director of agency relations for Western Greyhound, said that commuters would know before Monday morning whether the agreement had been accepted and whether bus service would be available.

The 350 members of tthe International Association of Machinists, Local 1305, had threatened to walk off their jobs, leaving some 23,000 Bay Area commuters without service. A strike would also disrupt service in the 11 Western states.

The mechanics, now paid $5.09 an hour, had demanded a new three-year contract that would raise pay $1.50 an hour and liberalize benefits.

Union members gave their negotiators strike authorization last Tuesday after rejecting a Greyhound offer of a three-year contract calling for a wage hike of 67 cents hourly.

Union officials were unavailable today to say when union members would vote on the tentative agreement, if they had not already done so.

The tentative agreement came as somewhat of a surprise. Only hours before Greyhound and union officials had broken off talks and federal mediator Roger Randall said that a strike was imminent.

Ferryboats Still Idle; No Talks

Chances for quick settlement of a strike by 16 marine engineers against Harbor Tours Inc. appeared gloomy today as water taxis, ferry boats and sightseeing boats remained tied up for the fourth day.

No negotiations were scheduled during the weekend between the firm and representatives of the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association.

About 200 Marin residents who commute to jobs in San Francisco on the ferries during the week will again be forced to join freeway traffic Monday unless a settlement is reached.

Lester Bedient, general manager of Harbor Tours, said the ager of Hrbor Tours, said the progress in the dispute.

He also disclosed Harbor

Tax Reform Bills Face Critical Demo Barrage

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Assembly Democrats refused today to commit themselves to a new tax revision package worked out by a select committee of three Republicans and three Democrats.

One of the Democrats, Assemblyman George Zenovich of Fresno, said there was no concrete agreement — only a consensus toward the type of "a tax reform that might be proposed."

Zenovich, the Democratic caucus chairman, said Assembly Democrats are flexible on tax reform in general and on withholding of state income taxes specifically.

When he announced provisions of the plan, Republican Assemblyman William T. Bagley of San Anselmo said it included compulsory withholding. This almost immediately dimmed its chance of winning approval of Gov. Ronald Reagan, a staunch opponent of mandatory withholding.

Assembly Democrats have voted solidly for withholding in the past, making it a major issue between them and the Republican Reagan. There has been no indication that they have changed their position on the subject.

But Zenovich said, "If any one of us is locked into a firm position, the chances are dimmed for a settlement." He said the position of Democrats on withholding had been "inadvertently misrepresented" by some Republicans.

Democrats have insisted that shaping of a tax revision or reform package be a condition of passing the budget. Although Republicans have a 40-39 edge in seats in the Assembly, Democrats were able to block passage of the budget May 27 since it takes a two-thirds vote of 54 members to approve it.

The program announced by Bagley would boost income and sales taxes in order to provide about $1 billion in various forms of property tax relief. He said the proposals will be put into final form by a Revenue and Taxation subcommittee Monday.

Supervisors Still Facing $2.50 Rate

Frustrated Marin County supervisors wound up a week of budget deliberations last night, facing a record tax rate of $2.50 per $100 assessed valuation for 1969-70, up 23 cents from this year's $2.27. (See other supervisor's stories, page 6.)

Instead of reducing the rate as hoped, the supervisors had their hands full fighting off new demands that threatened to propel the rate even higher.

Yesterday, the board rejected a $15,000 plea for new War on Poverty funds by Dr. Festus Adebonojo, chairman of the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council, and Mrs. Adelaide P. Wilson, a council member.

The funds were sought for a coordinator of the volunteer pediatrics clinic proposed in Marin City and to expand a training program, now limited to clerical instruction to women on welfare, to men.

After a 4-1 vote rejecting the

Tempers Higher Than College Flag

Students played cat and mouse with the American flag at the College of Marin yesterday.

In a bizarre double ceremony, the flag was lowered to half-mast twice, raised to full-mast twice and almost fought over in an altercation between students.

At 1 p.m. a group of students, led by the Gorilla Band of the San Francisco Mime Troupe, marched from the Student Center across the full sweep of lawn to the flagpole.

There Dean of Instruction Irwin P. Diamond announced that the flag, as voted by the Marin Junior College District trustees Thursday night, would be placed at half-mast until the end of final examinations June 19 in memory of former College of Marin students and all those who have lost their lives in war.

Diamond was interrupted with student calls of " . . . and all those who are going to die." And, "How about the Viet Cong?"

Dennis Marnell, a member of the Students for a Democratic Society, said that the board was notorious for lack of interest and lack of action on the part of student needs and demands.

Edward S. Schimberg, SDS co-chairman, said that "besides expressing moral outrage to the war, this is also a protest against all American actions throughout the world and here at home."

The Mimists, who had given a performance at noon on campus disparaging war, then played "The Star Spangled Banner," accenting the lines such as "the rockets red glare" and "the bombs bursting in air."

During the music the flag was lowered to its base, then raised to half-mast.

The troupe quickly displayed four signs reading, "Get Out of Vietnam and Peoples' Park" and the ceremony was over.

Most of the students then returned to the area of the student center to meet on another issue, but a few — apparently disturbed at the ceremony — remained.

Student Michele Kilian told the Independent-Journal that she felt there had been disrespect for the flag because so many people had been seated on the lawn. She also said the flag was not lowered properly.

Val Sabuco, another student, charged that the national anthem had been disgraced.

Student Cathy Cotter of Greenbrae then went to the flagpole and raised the flag to the top. Marnell returned, saying, "That was pretty stupid," and Dean Diamond told Miss Cotter that it was a board action and he lowered the flag again to half-mast.

At this point several students began arguing with Marnell, Miss Cotter saying, "Nobody has the right to lower the flag . . . that's our country."

"If you get to be a man and have to put your --- on the line, then you can come and talk to us about it," countered Marnell, who said he was wounded in Vietnam. Marnell added, "I call it (the flag) a rag. I'd like to burn it."

"Try it," said a youth, angrily.

Marnell urged the students to organize.

Marnell was then told, "If you don't like this country, get out."

"I don't have time to get organized for little wars," said student Greg Garner. "I didn't come here to fight a revolution."

"Organize," said Marnell and he walked off.

Student Loren Swaney said he didn't believe the flag was lowered by "these people" for the same reason that the trustees voted to have it done.

"I'm ashamed of this school,"

White House Expects Midway Parley To Have Good Results In Paris Talks

HONOLULU (AP—President Richard M. Nixon, stopping here today en route to his Vietnam summit conference on Midway Island, believes that the North Vietnamese are ready for serious peace bargaining.

White House sources, speaking with the President's approval, said private talks and indirect contacts with representatives of Hanoi and the Viet Cong have led to a conclusion that the stage is set for active negotiations in Paris.

Nixon flies to Midway tomorrow for five hours of conferences with President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam.

Among other matters, they will talk about the eventual withdrawal of some U.S. troops from South Vietnam as the training of South Vietnamese replacements and the military situation permit.

The sources said public and private North Vietnamese reaction to Nixon's eight-point peace plan May 14 have encouraged official American optimism that substantive bargaining soon will begin in Paris.

They disclosed that the North Vietnamese, through private channels, have been asking legitimate rather than propagandistic questions about details of the Nixon proposals which call for withdrawal of most outside forces from South Vietnam over a 12-month period. These questions, they said, involve such matters as what will happen to remaining American troops after the 12 months, and who will supervise the free elections which Nixon has suggested for all South Vietnamese, Communists included.

It is the administration's feeling that questions about such specifics from the enemy's side augur well for Paris progress.

As Nixon and his party headed toward Midway by way of Honolulu, Thieu was handed resolutions in Saigon yesterday from the South Vietnamese Senate, the National Assembly and

Lost Plane Raft Rumor Unfounded

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Hope was dim that any of the 19 crewmen of a missing Strategic Air Command plane would be found alive as ships and planes continued to search today.

Search planes were grounded in some places because of worsening weather conditions, the Coast Guard said.

One Coast Guard cutter was in the search center area, roughly 200 miles north of Amchitka Island in the Aleutian chain. Four big patrol boats were combing the area and three other ships were closing in on the scene.

Hope rose briefly earlier today when the Japanese Maritime Safety Agency said a Japanese fishing boat reported survivors from a large plane were adrift in a liferaft in the area.

But the North Pacific Rescue Coordination Center here said it knew of no raft in the area. The center said the Japanese boat might have been confused by a request dropped to them by a U.S. plane asking their help in the search.

The missing SAC jet, a military version of the Boeing 707 designated as an RC135, disappeared about 30 minutes after leaving Shemya Island Thursday on a "routine" flight to Eielson Air Force Base near Fairbanks, Alaska. It was about 250 miles east of Shemya, on the end of the Aleutian Island chain, when the last radio report was received from it.

Regents Seek Park Answer; New Troubles

BERKELEY (UP) — A committee of University of California regents held an emergency session today—hours after a police raid on People's Park No. 2—with a plea for understanding between the generations.

The building and grounds committee meeting, attended by 10 regents, was an effort to seek a solution to Berkeley's continuing crisis which produced another 30 arrests during the night.

'PLAN FOR FUTURE'

William K. Coblentz, committee chairman, deplored "violence, mistakes in judgment" but said the purpose today is not "to recount the past but to plan for the future."

"I plea for understanding on both sides of the generation gulf. The young should try to understand that most of us want to improve society, not to destroy it in the transparently unlikely hope of making it better by making it worse," he told a hearing room full of persons waiting to speak.

HITCH SPEAKS

University President Charles J. Hitch told the regents they have four alternatives.

One was to install playing fields but lease a portion of the block to the city which "would use, develop and maintain" it as a park. Another would be divided the area in the same manner but with a park under university auspices.

A third alternative would be to proceed more promptly to erect living residences, now contemplated in about 10 years.

Hitch, who made no recommendation, said a fourth alternative would be to proceed with the original plan to put playing fields on the property but "with some variance for community oriented purposes."

Late last night, police broke up a torchlight march by 1,000

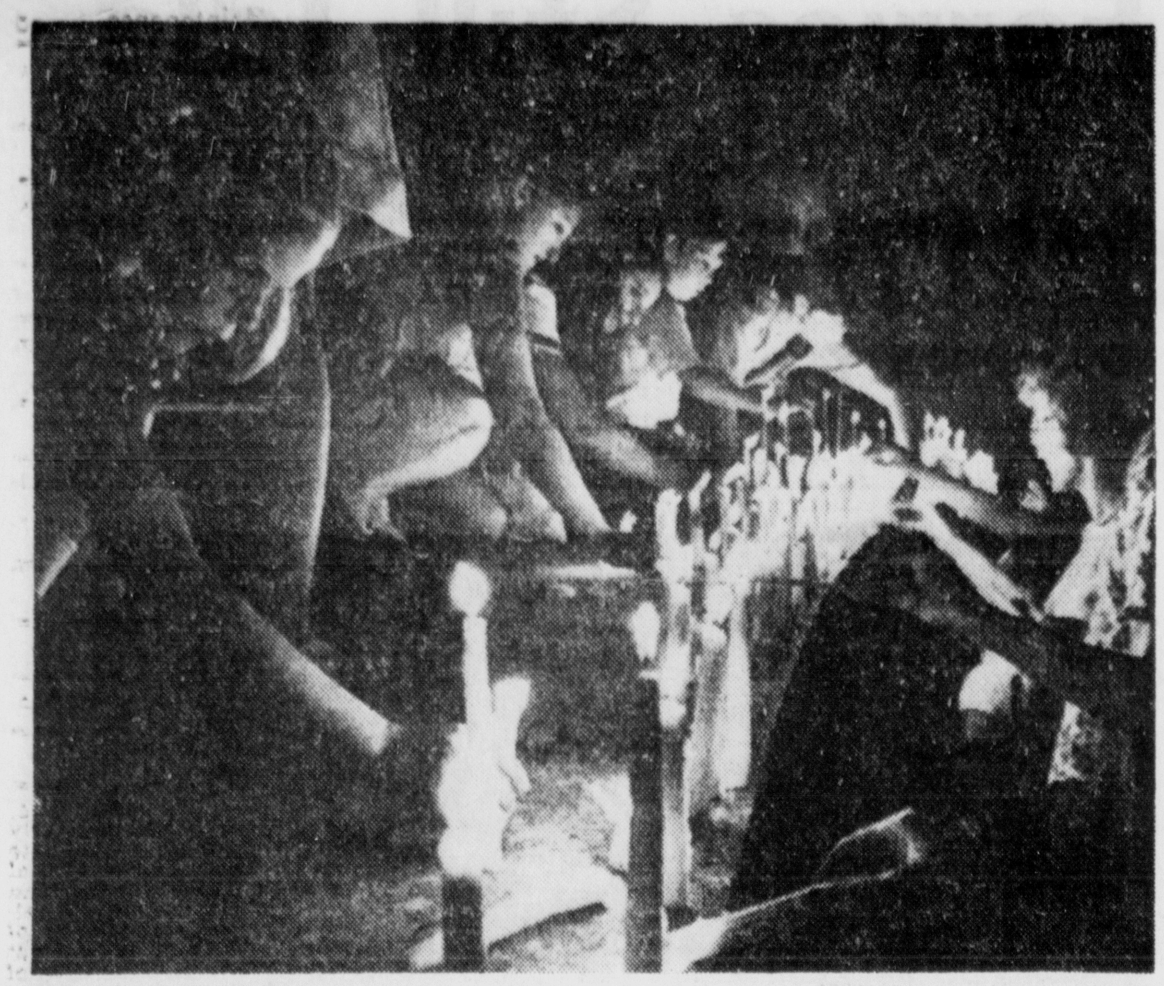
Gets to a Major Cause of Hemorrhoids

Now! Most complete 3-way relief!

Important development: unlike every other hemorrhoid product, Counternoid™ works in 3 ways:
1. Lessens pain fast.
2. Coats, soothes and protects injured tissue.
3. Gets to a major cause of hemorrhoids: painful hard constipation.

In hospital X-ray tests, doctors have demonstrated that the exclusive Counternoid formulation with DSS₁₈™ penetrates in minutes to the top of the rectal area to soften the stool and ease the bowel movement, to make natural healing possible.

Remember: Counternoid. For temporary relief of minor hemorrhoid troubles. The most complete 3-way relief you can get without a prescription or without surgery. At all drug counters.



SPONTANEOUS GESTURE — Children and adults attending the memorial mass in Arlington National Cemetery for the late Robert F. Kennedy place lighted candles on the wall leading to the grave of the assassinated senator. An estimated 5,000 attended the mass last night. (AP Wirephoto)

Candles Pay Tribute To Robert F. Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — When it was over they came through the darkness down the slopes of the great cemetery at Arlington to place candles — hundreds of them—on a granite ledge near the foot of Robert Francis Kennedy's grave.

They had come—more than 5,000 persons—to mark the first full year since an assassin's bullet took the New York senator's life.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, in a black suit, stood next to Ethel, his brother's widow. Hatless and waring a simple all-white dress, she was in the center of the long row of Kennedy kin as the memorial folk mass began last night.

Near the end of the line, standing a few paces from Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, was Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, wearing a fitted black dress. A few yards behind her, across a hedge and a marble terrace, was the grave of another American leader, her first husband, President John F. Kennedy

Mrs. Onassis was handed a candle. She bent over and touched it to the flame held by former astronaut John Glenn who was kneeling near her feet, shielding the flickering light against the early evening wind with his hands. Later her candle blew out and she rekindled it from the one held by her son, John F. Kennedy Jr.

The mass, beginning in the glow of sunset, had 15 guitarists and 70 singers and was led by white-robed Terrence Cardinal Cooke, Archbishop of New York.

One of the last songs in the hour-long service used words based on Edward Kennedy's eulogy to his brother a year ago:

"He saw wrong and tried to right it. Saw suffering and tried to heal it. He saw war and tried to stop it . . ."

The service at Arlington, conducted after dark and lit by candles, was strikingly similar to the circumstances under which Robert Kennedy was buried last June 10. Across the nation, other services were held.

The Revitalization Corps, a volunteer group dedicated to the memory of the two assassinated Kennedys, held a 12-hour vigil near the United Nations in New York.

Quotations from Robert Kennedy's speeches on peace, brotherhood and personal committment were included in a mass at the Paulist Center facing the Common in Boston.

At Arlington, the services concluded, the dignitaries filing to their cars, the crowd on the hillside above the two graves continued singing "the Battle Hymn of the Republic."

And when they left, hundreds of them bent, spontaneously to fix their glowing candles on the wall at Robert Kennedy's feet.

Fishing Controversy

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — Thirteen Japanese gillnetters are reported to be operating inside the 12-mile fishing limit in Norton Sound.

Rep. Howard W. Pollock's office said yesterday a Bureau of Commercial Fisheries plane had spotted the gillnetters, part of a fleet of 31 Japanese vessels operating off Unalaklett, about 125 miles southeast of Nome.

Fisheries experts said it was unclear whether the Japanese had violated any law.

Brown Berets Indicted In Arson Plot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A rookie Mexican - American policeman, posing as a bearded rebel, tipped authorities to a militant ring that plotted to burn a hotel while Gov. Ronald Reagan spoke, a grand jury was told yesterday.

The county grand jury yesterday indicted 10 persons, including two officers of an activist Mexican-American group, in connection with a series of nine fires at the Biltmore Hotel April 24.

Undercover policeman Fernando Sumaya, 23, also gave testimony which led to indictment of three others in the May 10 fire-bombing of an East Los Angeles supermarket.

Authorities said Sumaya was pulled off the case two weeks ago when members of the Brown Berets learned their organization was infiltrated.

Although police and firemen were warned by Sumaya of a plan to start fires and disturbances at the hotel, they said, fire control was slowed because the fires were in scattered areas.

However, they testified, firemen stopped the flames before they engulfed the hotel while Reagan addressed 400 Mexican-American educators in the Biltmore Bowl.

The district attorney's office said Sumaya saved hundreds of lives with his tip. The fires caused $100,000 damage. No one was hurt.

Sumaya was ordered by his superiors to infiltrate the Brown Berets after his graduation last year from the police academy the panel was told.

Indicted in the Biltmore incident were: Carlos Montez, 21, minister of information for the Brown Berets; Ralph Ramirez, 19, minister of discipline for the group; Ernesto Cebada Eichwald, 26, California State College at Los Angeles student; Esmeralda Bernal, 20, instructor at San Jose State College. They were charged with conspiracy, arson, burglary and malicious destruction of electrical lines.

Also indicted were: Anthony Salamanca, 26, assistant coordinator of the Educational Opportunities Program at San Francisco State College; Moctezuma Esparza, 20, UCLA student; Rene Nunez, 33, employe of the Los Angeles Education Clearing House; Thomas Varela, 20, East Los Angeles College student; Willie Mendoza, 18, East Los Angeles College student; and Juan Robles, 22.

They were charged with conspiracy, burglary and malicious destruction of electrical lines.

Accused of conspiracy, attempted arson, possession of explosives and possession of fire bombs in the Safeway incident were: William Rivas, 22, Rosemead; Alphonso Aceves, 22, Los Angeles; and Angelina Cummings, about 22, East Los Angeles College student.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Measles Vaccine

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's first vaccine against German measles, which endangers the unborn children of pregnant women, is expected to be licensed early next week Standards governing production of the vaccine were published yesterday on levels of safety, purity and potency. Children will receive the first vaccine available.

Douglas Hit

PASADENA (UPI) — Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., predicts there will be "startling" new revelations about Supreme Couurt Justice William O. Douglas within the next two weeks.

Murphy made the remarks at the annual luncheon meeting of the Pasadena unit of Pro America, a volunteer patriotic group.

He refused to elaborate on the revelations but said, "I would resign, if I were him Douglas."

Russ Flays China

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev declared today the damage to world communism caused by Red China is "impossible to underestimate."

Addressing delegates of 75 Communist parties meeting in the Kremlin, Brezhnev said China had, in fact, broken with the Communist movement.

Brezhnev's speech, broadcast by Moscow radio shortly after it was delivered, was the most bitter attack on China to come from the three-day-old conference so far.

There was no immediate word on the reaction of Romania which openly objected yesterday to earlier criticism of China.

School Strike Due?

OXNARD (AP) — Striking teachers plan a Monday morning meeting to determine if Oxnard elementary district trustees will meet their wage demands. It was uncertain whether schools would open.

More than two-thirds of the 360 elementary teachers stayed away from work yesterday, forcing administrators to send home 7,600 students from 11 schools.

Guns Become Art

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Civic Center has a new statue today made from guns voluntarily turned in after the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy one year ago.

It stands in front of the fountain across from City Hall and features the faces of four assassinated leaders — Abraham Lincoln, John F. and Robert F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King.

Facing sculptor Benny Bufano's "St. Francis of the Guns" statue yesterday in dedication ceremonies, Mayor Joseph Alioto told a crowd of 3,500 that "Guns melted to a symbol of peace become an instrument of peace."

Leftist Injured

ROME (UPI) — Daniel Danny (the Red) Cohn-Bendit, a leader of the 1968 French student uprisings, was slightly injured last night in a brawl between extreme left and right-wing students.

Fliers Killed

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Two crew members of a plane shot down Thursday by the Nigerian air force were killed, the Nigerian federal government announced today.

"The statement yesterday that they were captured alive was incorrect," the government said in a statement. It added the bodies of the men have been recovered and taken to Port Harcourt, where the other two crewmen were reported held prisoner.

The Nigerian army claimed yesterday that Soviet-built MIG jet fighters of its air force shot down a DC6 apparently on a "surprise bombing raid" and captured at least two members of the crew who survived.

At about the same time, the International Red Cross said a DC7 based on the island of Fernando Po and flying relief supplies into the encircled enclave of Biafra was missing. It carried a crew of four, including an American pilot, two Swedes and a Nigerian.

Defense Ministry sources here denied the Nigerians had shot down a Red Cross plane, arousing speculation that two planes actually were downed.

Dual Deaths Found

NEW YORK (UPI) — A South American millionaire big-game hunter and his estranged wife have been found shot to death in the woman's east side apartment.

Police said the man, Alfredo Cernandas, 54, a native of Argentina, apparently had shot his wife, Patricia, 29, and then turned the gun on himself.

Offer Hinted For Cal Expo

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A Senate committee has decided to wait for more details of a reported deal with private investors before deciding Cal Expo's place in the 1969-70 state budget.

The Finance Committee delayed action yesterday after a Sacramento newspaper reported that money interests from the East Coast were negotiating with state officials to take over the exposition.

The deal as reported by the Sacramento Bee would involve not only the operation of the facility, but payment of its debts and development of vacant Expo land.

Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka, chairman of the committee, suggested that the senators wait for more details on the plan.

Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post wanted the committee to leave Cal Expo out of the budget to force Sacramento city and county officials to take an active part in developing the $32 million exposition site.

Star Seriously Ill

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Robert Taylor's condition has worsened since he re-entered a hospital for treatment of lung cancer, a spokesman says.

The spokesman for St. John's Hospital in nearby Santa Monica gave no other details yesterday.

Most of the actor's right lung was removed last Oct. 8 because of a fungus infection called valley fever. Two months later his wife, Ursula Thiess, told newsmen Taylor, 57, had a malignant cancer in the same lung.

MOST WANTED — The FBI has added Marie Dean Arrington to its list of 10 most wanted fugitives, the second time a woman has been named to the list in 19 years. She escaped from a Florida prison while waiting to die for murder.

More Arrests At Muir Beach

Two Marin County men and a Concord woman were arrested yesterday during the Marin County Sheriff's Department's latest raid on Muir Beach nude bathers.

Booked into Marin County Jail on suspicion of indecent exposure and disturbing the peace were Karen Yvone Kozlowski, 18, of Concord; Gavin Eric Hadden, 19, of 145 Kent Avenue, Kentfield; and Thomas Walker Nash, 24, of Star Route, Muir Beach. They were held on $125 bail each to appear at 2 p.m. Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Sheriff's deputies said the three were arrested at 5:30 p.m. after Beach residents complained that more than 15 persons were bathing in the nude at the beach.

THE CONTINUITY OF LIFE

If we Ourselves
Create our futures, in truth
Is it volitional?
Or do we unleash the force of "destiny"
Within us?
Is it then outside our control?

By accepting "destiny" as existent
We give it credence and value
And act upon it, Celeste.

Thus, we at once unleash ourselves to create our futures
According to the patterns of our inspiration.
And control becomes a constant process of decision-making.

When we begin to feel the continuity of life
Within us
And see it manifest
Without,
Is
To observe and identify God,
To find ourselves,
To be seriously happy,
To become free to do God's work,
To sing,
And dance
And laugh with the sun.

A TEACHER'S CONTEMPLATION

My words were wise, not always;
my manner, not always mild;
And now I gaze tall—
to what once was the child.

Oh, think on the day
you will look at the man;
And remember with awe
having touched the child's hand.

NOVATO GLORIA KNOEBEL TOVANI

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

TCHEREPNIN: Piano Concerti Nos. 2 and 5 — Alexander Tcherepnin, piano/Bavarian Radio Symphony Orchestra/ Kubelik—DGG (Deutsche Grammophon) 139 379:

Russian composer Tcherepnin is one of the few composers still living who seem to span the musical style of the post-Romantic turn-of-the-century and the serialized music of today.

The Concerto No. 2 of 1923 makes use of a type of polyphony which he invented himself, based on a nine-note scale. The Oriental influences on the composer are here evident.

The Fifth Concerto comes from 1963 and is quite personal and unique-sounding in a rather traditional way. Its finale is especially brilliant, highlighting the still-considerable keyboard skills of its composer.

KARL HARTMANN: Symphonies Nos. 4 and 8 — Bavarian Radio Symphony Orchestra/ Kubelik — DGG 139 359:

This is Hartmann's first entry in the record catalog in the U.S., except for an old mono disc on Capitol many years ago.

The composer died only in 1963, and some authorities feel he deserved the title "the last symphonist" more than either Bruckner or Mahler. His symphonies are grand structures which cover much of the same ground as those of Bruckner or Mahler, and in a considerably more abbreviated time-span.

No. 4 is for string orchestra, a form for which several 20th Century composers have been able to accomplish wonders. The Eighth is distinguished by a gorgeous slow movement — Hartmann was one of the great creators of adagios in this century. His love of Bach is also heard in his monumental formal structure and grasp of complex counterpoint.

It is difficult to praise too highly the consistently excellent sound quality of Deutsche Grammophon's pressings. They probably possess the best signal-to-noise ratio of any classical recordings, and without a doubt their quiet surfaces are bettered nowhere. If only U.S.-pressed LPs had this amount of craftsmanship and care invested in their manufacture! Some collectors have even begun ordering the European versions of albums recorded in the U.S. — paying a much higher price plus import duties and postage in order to bypass the seemingly increasing deterioration in U.S.-pressed LPs.

HANS WERNER HENZE: Muses of Sicily; Moralities — Soloists/The Dresden Kreuzchor/Dresden State Orchestra/ Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra/ Henze conducting — DGG 133 374:

Deutsche Grammophon's series of albums devoted to Germany's acclaimed young composer continues with these two vocal works.

The Muses are for chorus and orchestra and employ fragments from Virgil's "Ecologues."

Henze was turned on to the Rolling Stones shortly before composing this work, and while it is far from classical rock, it does turn to a more primitive and simpler type of structure than Henze's previous work. The circling around one tonal center and repetition bear some resemblance to the German primitivist, Carl Orff.

The Moralities were written also for performance by amateur or school ensembles; they may be staged like mini-operas or just performed in concert version. Their light-hearted sense of fun is apparent.

Translations of the German texts are, of course, included in the album.

PIANO MUSIC OF MENDELSSOHN: Anton Kuerti, piano — Monitor MCSC 2128:

Mendelssohn's piano music seems to be rather "out" at the moment, but one listen to these rich and stirring performances will make the listener wonder why this is so. The well-known "Rondo Capriccioso" opens the disc spectacularly, and besides the "Fantasy in F Sharp Minor," three of the Bach-influenced preludes and fugues are included in the LP.

Apollo Crew Explains Missing Landing Site

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Apollo 10 astronauts reported today the moon landing site they inspected is "rugged" but the Apollo 11 crew should have no problem touching down there.

They told a news conference they actually missed the site by four miles to the south as they flew to within 9.4 miles of the surface because of irregularities in the lunar gravitational field.

"Because of our flight," Air Force Col. Thomas P. Stafford reported, "we now know about these perturbations. Our flight taught us much that has given us confidence. We see no reason why we can't put Apollo 11 right on the landing site."

Stafford and Navy Cmdrs. John W. Young and Eugene A. Cernan completed an extensive 10-day debriefing on their moon orbit flight yesterday, discussing all aspects with experts.

What they reported will help determine if Apollo 11 will attempt the lunar landing in July or whether the flight will be delayed until August to give the crew—Neil A. Armstrong. Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. and Michael Collins—more time to prepare.

The decision will be made Thursday.

Stafford, the Apollo 10 commander, said that when he and Cernan separated the lunar module, or LEM from the command ship, "it was readily apparent we were dropping down."

Young remained in the command vehicle circling the moon at an altitude of 69 miles.

"We actually ended up four miles south of the landing site," Stafford said, "so I had to shoot our pictures off to the right."

He said that irregularities in the gravity field, plus the fact the moon is not perfectly round, had put them off target.

Court-Martial Studies Sentences For Mutiny

FORT ORD (AP) — An Army court martial deliberated today the penalty for 12 soldiers convicted yesterday of mutiny in a singing sitdown protest at the San Francisco Presidio stockade last October.

Two other enlisted men were convicted on lesser charges of disobedience.

Lt. Col. James A. Hagan, presiding as judge, told a five-man trial panel to consider that no violence or injury resulted in protest, which involved 27 stockade prisoners last Oct. 14.

The panel requested that lunch be served in their jury room so deliberation could continue without a meal break.

The 14 were among 27 charged with mutiny last Oct. 14 as they staged the sitdown to protest what they called unsanitary conditions at the stockade. The sitdown came two days after a prisoner had been fatally shot by a guard during an alleged escape attempt.

Eight of the others charged have been convicted of mutiny, two have been hospitalized for observation and three have escaped and are at large.

After the convictions the panel reconvened and heard 3½ hours of argument by attorneys for the defense and prosecution in what is known as the "extenuation and mitigation" phase of the trial that determines the penalty.

Chief defense attorney Terence Hallinan argued that "none of these men are criminals—they are sick children, and were no threat to the United States Army last Oct. 14."

Hallinan said, "These young men have been convicted of only one thing—being mistreated all their lives."

Bay's Pesticide Pollution Laid To Multiple Sources

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Industries and municipalities must share the blame for depositing "hard pesticides" into the state's waters, says the San Francisco Bay-Delta Water Quality Program report being reviewed by the State Water Resources Control Board.

About half the pesticide that is washed into the Delta and the bay comes from agricultural sources and about half from municipal and industrial waste discharge, the report says.

"Of all the pollutants that are discharged into water, the chlorinated hydrocarbon (or hard) pesticides are the most insidious in terms of biological effects," the study found. "Small amounts of these nondegradable pesticides, such as DDT, are known to kill some animals outright and some species of birds and fish may be prevented from effective reproduction even though adults are not killed."

Agricultural sources have been under increasing pressure recently to give up the use of the "hard pesticides" because of their effects.

The state has control over agricultural use of pesticides but there is no regulation of industrial sources, said a statement from the water control board today.

The Bay-Delta report proposes that the use of DDT be banned.

The board is expected to complete its review of the Bay-Delta study late in June and make its recommendations to the legislature.

The study proposes ways of preserving the quality of the water in the 12-county Bay-Delta region.

Service Station Dope Sale Denied

Frank Joseph Bonomolo, 22, of Petaluma, who with his younger brother is charged with selling drugs at their father's Novato service station, yesterday entered a plea of innocent to selling LSD to a drug agent.

Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. set a preliminary hearing for June 30.

The case of George Tipton Bonomolo, 19, accused of selling marijuana, has been referred to the probation department for possible transferral to juvenile court.

Woman Recovering Following Collapse

Mrs. Mona A. Horowitz of Sausalito was reported in good condition today at Marin General Hospital, where she was taken Thursday night after apparently consuming an overdose of an unknown medicine.

Mrs. Horowitz, of 33 Sunshine Avenue, collapsed at the home of a neighbor and was taken to the hospital by her husband.

12:11 a.m., Novato — Electrical short caused car fire in vehicle belonging to Mrs. Lorraine Henley of 8 Kathy Clurt. Fire occurred in parking lot of Long's Drug Store. No estimate of damage.

3:30 p.m., Novato — Grass fire in the back yard of a home owned by Paul LaVasser, 120 Iolanthus Street. Fire believed caused by children playing with matches. No estimate of damage.

6:56 p.m., San Rafael — Peat moss burning at base of tree at 750 Las Gallinas Road. No damage.

SOUTHERN SONOMA

No fire calls.

Graduates' Party Leads To Arrest

Six Oakland youths, celebrating a high school graduation, were arrested at 6:30 a.m. today by Marin County sheriff's deputies after they allegedly were found smoking marijuana in a parked car in Stinson Beach.

Booked into Marin County Jail on suspicion of marijuana possession and contributing to the delinquency of minors were Ingrid Maria Lobos, Walter Robert Cristolo, Jeffrey Patrick Heagerty and Ronald James Grajeda, all 18. Grajeda was also booked on suspicion of resisting arrest.

The two juveniles were cited and released to their parents.

Market Burglars Steal Trade Stamps

Burglars took food, cigarettes, liquor and blue chip stamps, valued at more than $400, from the Cala Market on Adrian Way in Santa Venetia between 9 p.m. Wednesday and 7 a.m. Thursday, Marin County sheriff's deputies reported today.

Among the items stolen were 30 record albums, 43 cartons of cigarettes, 18 sixpacks of beer, two gallons of wine, six fifths and one quart of whisky, six salamis and three blue chip dispensers containing an unknown amount of blue chip stamps.

BOATS

Tours and other firms face an additional strike by operators of inland bay tug boats unless agreement is reached on a new contract for about 75 men by June 15. Their contract expired June 1 and was extended 15 days.

The additional workers also are represented by the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association.

"I don't look for too much beginning until this thing jells into a pattern," said Bedient.

Union spokesmen could not be reached for comment.

Bedient said disputes in the past between marine engineers and ship and tugboat operators had always been settled in one package. He said the current strike against Bay Tours was the first splinter action by the marine engineers in years of negotiations.

Reds Bloodily Beaten Back

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese troops were mangled today in a furious assault on a small U.S. fire base in the sort of attacks that by allied accounts have left 1,000 enemy dead in two days.

Best estimates are that 60 Americans have been killed and more than 200 wounded in the two days. South Vietnamese casualties were put at 107 killed and 379 wounded.

Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, told reporters before leaving for the Midway Island conference of President Nixon and President Nguyen Van Thieu that he did not think the sharp rise in enemy attacks was a summer offensive.

"I don't think they are doing anything different," he said. "They're just trying to harass and inflict casualties. I think the real purpose is psychological in terms of the people in the United States."

Other officers have suggested the increase in the intensity of enemy attacks is intended to put pressures on Nixon and Thieu at their conference.

Of the estimated enemy casualties, about 400 of them have been killed in two days of trying to overrun Fire Base Crook, a tiny U.S. 25th Infantry Division outpost four miles from Cambodia and 65 miles northwest of Saigon.

The attacks on the base have been by far the largest in last week's series of enemy offensive operations in South Vietnam.

remarked Mark Mendonsa.

By 3:30 p.m. the flag had been raised to full height again and an hour later it had disappeared.

As is customary, college employees had removed the flag for the weekend.

Crash Injures Ross Women

Two Ross women were injured early today when their car crashed into the center divider on Highway 101 near the Corte Madera offramp.

Driver Marnee Kay Kern, 31, of 28 Poplar Avenue, was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital with a concussion. Her passenger, Patricia M. Swanson, 38, of the same address, was treated for bruises and minor injuries.

California Highway Patrol officers said Miss Kern had been reported at 3 a.m. driving her car in an erratic manner and at a high rate of speed for several miles northbound on Highway 101.

Sgt. Richard Nutting said he observed Miss Kern's car weaving in and out of traffic. As it topped the Alto hill, he said, the car skidded broadside on the shoulder, veered across four lanes of traffic, hit the divider, and bounced back across three lanes of traffic before stopping in the outside lane.

The Arabic language is spoken by more than 50 million persons.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

How Far Can A Bank Go?

When you open an account, you expect the bank to keep your financial affairs confidential. A bank has a legal duty to keep your affairs private. If it breaches this duty, the depositor can hold the bank legally responsible.

Yet because of our credit economy, the bank is often requested to give financial information to government agents or parties in a lawsuit. How far can the bank safely go?

As a depositor you can consent to the disclosure of information — perhaps when you apply for a loan. Then the bank has no liability to you. The bank may still refuse to give out the information, but, as a rule, the bank will disclose if it has your consent.

Sometimes a court will allow someone to look at your finances if you are in a lawsuit or have information which a court needs. If so, the court will issue a subpoena for the information, and the bank, as a rule, must turn it over. Because the customer may not want to disclose the information, the bank should inform the depositor about the subpoena before giving out the information.

A depositor may then challenge the subpoena in court as a "fishing expedition" or a violation of his freedom from "illegal search and seizure."

The fact that a person changes banks does not destroy the bank's duties to its former customers.

If the bank gives out wrong information, it may be liable if it harms the depositor's credit.

Loan Sought For Novato Library

Marin supervisors voted yesterday to borrow $175,000 from the county retirement fund to cover a deficit in financing the new county library building in Novato. (See also supervisors story, page 1.)

The county had failed to obtain a $175,000 federal grant to build the new structure on Novato Boulevard, west of Tamalpais Avenue.

Interest on a retirement fund loan, at 7.75 per cent, would total $6,782 and be borne by the county.

In other library matters during county budget deliberations yesterday, the supervisors voted 3-2 to reject a last-ditch plea by Mill Valley for a $40,000 county grant for its public library because it serves so many residents living in the unincorporated area.

Chairman John F. McInnis, Louis H. Baar and Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. said the request would bring similar pleas from other cities. If Mill Valley wants county aid, it should join the county library system, they said.

Anticipating the refusal, Mill Valley voted to assess each nonresident user of the library the sum of $14 for an annual family membership card, effective July 1.

The supervisors also adopted the budget of County Librarian Bruce Bajema totaling $616,500, up from $507,428, and including three new staff members.

Probation Set In Dominican Horse Complaint

A Marin Municipal Court judge yesterday gave former Marin County planning commissioner Edward K. Wachsman two weeks go remove a horse and pony he keeps at his home in the Dominican section of San Rafael.

Judgge Peter Allen Smith, who earlier had found Wachsman guilty of keeping the animals without a permit, a misdemeanor offense, placed Wachsman on one-year probation, making the removal of the horses a condition of probation. He also ordered Wachsman to pay a $50 fine.

Judge Smith said that if the animals were not gone within two weeks, he would reconsider the sentence.

Wachsman's horses have been the subject of complaints from his neighbors on Palm Avenue since last December, when some of the residents appeared before the city council to say that Wachsman was not complying with an order to clean the horse area daily.

Stereo Stolen

Edwin Louis Strom of 925 Las Ovejas Avenue, Terra Linda, told San Rafael police someone stole a stereo, valued at $100, from his locked car parked at the Northgate Shopping Center between 1:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Thursday.

Motorcycle Found

A motorcycle reported stolen in Moscow, Ida., March 30, was recovered Thursday in Camp Taylor near Sir Francis Drake Boulevard by Neil Kondratieff of Lagunitas, Marin County sheriff's deputies reported.

Meeting Canceled

The Inverness Improvement Association has rescheduled this month's meeting to June 27 at 8 p.m. at Vladimir's Monrovian Restaurant, Inverness. Last night's meeting was cancelled for lack of agenda items.

Careless Drivers

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI)—According to the Kentucky Department of Public Safety, one of every 49 drivers lost his license in 1968. Biggest single reason was failure to comply with the financial-responsibility law after an accident.

the National Security Council endorsing his position opposing any coalition government in Saigon.

Nixon's eight-point peace plan does not call for a coalition. But Thieu and his advisers believe the seeds for a coalition may lie in Nixon's suggestion for early elections.

Nixon and his advisers arrive at midmorning tomorrow after an overnight stop in Honolulu, and Thieu and his party will land shortly thereafter.

The first business is an informal get-together for an hour and a half at the home of Capt. A.S. Yesensky, commander of the Midway base.

Then Nixon and Thieu will go to the commissioned officers' club two blocks away for lunch, followed by the main business meeting in an adjacent room around a large oak conference table.

There they will go over Nixon's peace plan, which was presented at the Paris peace talks. There have been indications the South Vietnamese government is wary of parts of the Nixon plan.

For example, Nixon wants elections to be held as soon as possible after a cease-fire and troop withdrawals.

Under South Vietnam's constitution, national elections cannot be held before 1971. Thieu probably would like at least this much time to complete his task of broadening his political support.

In their resolutions, the South Vietnamese Senate, National Assembly and National Security Council took the position that elections can only be held under terms of the constitution.

Credit Interest Bill Is Amended

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Proponents of a 33-per cent boost in the price of retail credit have blocked down and settled for a 2 per cent increase.

With pressure mounting from consumer groups and the state attorney genreal, Assemblyman Walter W. Powers, D-Sacramento, quietly amended the 33-per cent boost out of his bill on the Assembly floor yesterday.

The Powers bill originally would have raised the maximum interest rate on retail sales contracts from 18 per cent to 24 per cent — a 33 per cent hike — and made corresponding increases on smaller contracts.

But Powers said the amended bill, in its present amended form, would only make one change in the Unruh Retail Installment Credit Act — raise the interest rate on contracts under $1,000 from 10 per cent to 12 per cent.

Tax Hike Sought For Fairfax Rec

A 1969-70 budget calling for a 7-cent hike in the tax rate was approved last night and forwarded to the city council by the Fairfax Park and Recreation Commission.

The commission is asking for $36,000 for the coming fiscal year, which if adopted would raise the park and recreation tax rate from nine to 16 cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

OBITUARIES

James S. Mathewson Dies At 86

James S. Mathewson of San Rafael, a retired mining engineer, died yesterday at the age of 86 at Ross General Hospital, where he had been under care for one month.

Mathewson, a 12-year resident of San Rafael, was a native of Scotland. He lived in Canada and San Francisco before moving to Marin.

He is survived by his wife, Jane; two daughters, Mrs. John Gorevan of San Anselmo and Mrs. Harriet Moore; a brother, Thomas Mathewson, and a sister, Mrs. Kate Wickham.

Private funeral will be held Monday at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael, with burial to follow at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

funds, Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni dissenting, Dr. Adebonojo, who has been EOC chairman since April, said he may resign from the council.

"What they have done is thumbed their noses at the poor," said Dr. Adebonojo, bitter and distraught. "By their action, they have said that they would rather put down riots than spend money on preventive measures.

"If they refuse to react to people like me," said Dr. Adebonojo, a pedicatrician for the Permanente Group, "they'll have to react to the Black Panthers. I feel I'm wasting my time if I cannot get $15,000 from county government."

Dr. Adebonojo told the Independent-Journal that the $15,000 could have brought in as much as $200,000 in foundation or federal funds and in-kind contributions for the pediatrics and training programs.

The $15,000 would have been added to a $26,000 appropriation for EOC operations approved by the supervisors in March. The supervisors also deferred an EOC request for a total county contribution of $41,000 for the 1970-71 year.

Other budgets approved yesterday were: board of supervisors, $148,955, compared to $149,602 this year; assessment appeals board, $19,449 ($17,671); personnel department, $95,151 ($88,484); county counsel, $164,000 ($133,783); data processing, $606,292 ($528,000); Neighborhood Youth Corps, $189,300 ($155,431); human rights, $51,403 ($42,588), and county pound, $242,324 ($209,889), rejecting a proposal to increase dog control.

Youth Charged With Joyriding

A 19-year-old San Rafael youth was arrested early today by California Highway Patrol officers for investigation of auto theft after officers found him driving a car he allegedly had stolen for a joyride.

Ralph Dwayne Sisler of 355 Canal Street was held in Marin County Jail on $1,200 bail.

Sisler was stopped at 2:20 a.m. while he was driving south on Highway 101 near California Park becauwe the tailights of the 1963 Pontiac were not working, officers said. A routine check revealed the car had been taken earlier in the evening from Marin Auto Wholesale, 296 Jacoby Street, San Rafael, officers said.

Oil Men Freed

LIBREVILLE, Gabon (AP) — Eighteen foreign oil workers who were sentenced to death by Biafra, then pardoned, were released and arrived in Libreville today. They were taken to a French military hospital for checkups.

Meanwhile the flag-draped caskets of 10 Italian oil workers reportedly killed by Biafran forces in the same incident arrived in Milan. Their funerals will be held tomorrow.

Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Valenta, Marini Perata and Co., 649 Green Street, San Francisco.

Mrs. Rosellini died Thursday in San Rafael after a brief illness.

Born in Italy, she came to California with her family as a young girl. Her husband, Lorenzo, who died four years ago, at one time operated a supermarket.

Besides her two daughters, Mrs. Rosellini is survied by five sisters, Viola Piccetti, Jennie Melosi and Frieda Rosellini, all of San Francisco, and Nellie Biondi and Lena Marchetti, of Italy, and five grandchildren.

Memorials may be made in the form of contributions to the Heart Fund, the family said.

HARLEY HOOPER

Services will be held at 3 p.m. Tuesday at the Harry M. Williams Mortuary in San Rafael for Harley L. Hooper, who died last Wednesday in a local hospital after a short illness.

Hooper, who lived at 27 Myrtle Avenue, Mill Valley, was a claim examiner for the California State Compensation Insurance Fund until his recent retirement. He was born in Palmyra, Wis.

Hooper was a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley and a member of the California State Employees Association, the Retired State Government Employees Association and the North Bay Branch of Sons in Retirement. He was also a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

He is survived by his wife, Eva; a sister, Mrs. Carol Hooper, Buxbom of Riverside, and two brothers, Thomas J. and Wesley Hooper, both of Los Angeles.

Entombment will be in the Mount Tamalpais Cemetery, San Rafael.

VIRGINIA WILSON

Requiem Mass for Virginia L. Wilson, president-elect of the American Legion Women's Auxiliary Post 284 in Mill Valley, will be held at 9:30 a.m. Monday at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church in Mill Valley. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery, San Rafael. Rosary will be at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Russell and Gooch Mortuary.

Mrs. Wilson, who lived with her husband, David R. Wilson, at 42 Loring Avenue, Mill Valled, died at her home Thursday after a short illness.

In addition to her recent election to the auxiliary post, Mrs. Wilson was a member of the Native Daughters of the Golden West, Tamalpa Parlor 231 of Mill Valley.

A native of California, she had lived in Marin County for 20 years. Her husband is a civilian employee at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Mrs. Wilson is also survived by her mother, Mrs. Edna Brandecker of Mill Valley.

Governmentese Quiz Continues To Bring Additions For Column

DEAR HELEN:

Here are a few additions to your governmentese quiz:

1. A copper disc which is retained has the equivalent value of such a disc acquired through renumerative labor.

2. The continuous progression of the days and seasons, coupled with the regular phenomenon caused by lunar and solar attraction, refuse to be detained by homo sapiens.

3. It is advised that one refrain from circumventing the shrubbery.

4. Proximity of a personal nature propagates a condition of being despised.

5. Lack of physical presence makes a bodily organ more amenable to pleasant palpitation. — LAWRIE AND JANE

(Answers at end of column)

DEAR READERS:

I'm still being beseiged with requests for answers to the governmentese quizzes printed earlier this year. For your copy of the word tests — and the answers — please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Helen Bottel, care of the Independent-Journal.

DEAR HELEN:

So you and your readers like quizzes and tests. Well, I'm sending a couple that have been around a long time, but I'll bet they'll still be new to a lot of people.

This one is called, Can You Follow Directions? Do exactly as you are told:

1. Read everything before doing anything.

2. Put your name in the upper right hand corner of a paper.

3. Circle the word "name" in sentence 2.

4. Draw four small squares in the upper left hand corner of the page.

5. Put an "X" in each square.

6. Sign your name under the title of the page.

7. After the title, write: "yes, yes!"

8. Put a circle around sentence 7.

9. Count from one to five in a loud voice.

10. Now that you have finished reading carefully, do only sentence 1 and 2.

(Now, don't you feel silly, if you fell for it?)

Here's another test:

Are you aware of these few things, without checking?

1. What hand do you put into your coat first?

2. What is the last thing you heard on radio or television last night?

3. Did you leave your closet door open or shut?

4. Did you wake up lying on the same side as when you fell asleep?

5: How many buttons do you button on your coat?

6. Which leg to you put first in a pair of pants?

7. Which shoe do you put on first?

8. With which foot do you start up a flight of stairs?

9. How many times do you touch your face while thinking or talking?

(Keep count and you'll be surprised!)

10. Which knee do you cross when you sit down — if you cross your knee? — DEBBIE AND DORIS

KEY TO GOVERNMENTESE QUIZ ABOVE:

1. A penny saved is a penny earned.

2. Time and tide wait for no man.

3. Don't beat around the bush.

4. Familiarity breeds con-contempt.

5. Absence makes the heart grow fonder.

Mill Valley Couple Return From Europe

By MOLLY MARIN

The Richard Evanses are home in Mill Valley after a month's tour of Europe. After stopping in Florida to visit a relative and in New York City they flew to Spain and went on to Italy, France and England.

Highlight of the trip was visiting their daughter Laura, who is just completing the equivalent of a master's degree in languages and French culture at the University of Lille. She is to be married some time this summer to Andre Sirot, who will be a teacher of philosophy at a junior college in Lille.

An especially interesting experience for Mr. Evans, who has been in the insurance business for many years, was a tour of Lloyd's of London.

The Evanses say they left their hearts in Spain because of the wonderfully warm, friendly people and their pride in their country and cities. They hope to return there some day.

MRS. CHALMER Sargent of Sayre, Ala., has returned to her home following a visit with her sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Fedrick in Novato.

Mrs. Sargent also visited her brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Yates in Novato. The families planned several trips for her including one to Lake Tahoe and another to the family ranch at Marysville.

THE ROBERT Goetzes of Belvedere were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hoge of Oakland last weekend at Pajaro Dunes, where the Hoges are building a beach house.

MEREDITH LINMAN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl A. Linman of Tiburon, was awarded the Bronze Key on recommendation of the special events committee at Chico State College.

Meredith was homecoming publicity chairman, co-chairman of presents for Chico's Pioneer Week celebration and was chosen this spring to be a member of Cardinal Key, Chico's honorary leadership and scholarship sorority.

She will be graduated this semester with a B.A. in social science.

PARENTS HONORED Reed principal Jack Usilton at a luncheon yesterday at the home of Mrs. James Atkin in Belvedere. Mr. Usilton is leaving Marin for Florida after 11 years as school principal. Also honored at the luncheon was Mrs. Alfred Matson.

SEW SIMPLE

Bikinis And Bra Dresses Simple To Make With Aids

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE:

A group of us who are young-marrieds want to make the cotton bikinis as well as the new bra dress. How can we give these cottons the neat shape found in the ready-to-wear ones?

JUDY S.

DEAR JUDY:

With the price of bikinis and the amount of fabric that is used, you are thinking in the right direction when you plan to make your own. It seems impossible to justify a price of $15 or more for a garment that only requires a yard of fabric (with almost a half yard left over).

Fortunately, there is a new product on the market, that is available in most fabric shops as well as notion counters, to give the bra dresses as well as swim suits the shape that is needed. It is a lightweight, washable bra-shape that can be inserted permanently in your garment.

It may be necessary to change your darts slightly, but you will have a perfect guide; just make your garment fit smoothly over the shaped bra insert. Thanks to the companies who produce notions for the home sewers, we are gradually finding the same helpful aids that are used by the manufacturers.

DEAR EUNICE:

I have a 12-year-old daughter who has been making doll clothes for years and loves puttering around with my leftover scraps of material and trims. Now she wants to sew for herself but, when I take her shopping for material, the things I think she should use, she doesn't want, and I don't like the things she picks out. We have reached the point of no return and consequently, she doesn't want to make anything.

Perhaps you can give us mothers of young teens some ideas on the kinds of materials they should use for their first sewing projects.

MRS. M. K.

DEAR MRS. M. K.:

First, it would be very unlikely that two completely different age groups would like the same thing and you are trying to force your own ideas on your daughter. I would let her shop with her friends, tell her what she can spend and let her make her own decisions. Naturally, she is going to make some mistakes in selection (but unfortunately, Moms, this happens to you too once in awhile).

The first step for any beginner is to begin sewing with a fabric that they dearly love. This compensates for the ripping and other discouraging things that are bound to happen. Also, be tolerant of their sewing. Perfection comes with practice and it's better to get a garment completed that "sorta passes inspection" that can be worn with a smile on a face than to have one that is perfect and worn with bitter tears.

DEAR EUNICE:

I had the good fortune to find a fabulous fabric shop in the East that featured only imported fabrics. The only kind of underlining they carried for silks was a very fine batiste. Why can't I find it in my local fabric shop?

MRS. R. R.

DEAR MRS. R. R.:

At one time, this was the greatest underlining in the world, because silk is a notorious hot fabric to wear in the summer. It has a tendency to cling to you and doesn't breathe like cotton. For this reason, a sheer cotton batiste would absorb the moisture and make the silk more comfortable to wear.

Thanks to our marvelous new lightweight underlinings that are a combination of cotton and Dacron polyester, batiste is no longer considered as suitable for this purpose. The only disadvantage to batiste is that it must be preshrunk before using and today it seems no one wants to wash a garment, all you have to do with the new underlinings is to wet them and let them dry without having to press them before using.

Mrs. Lee Larimer To Be Honored By St. Stephen Church Guild

Honored guest at St. Stephens Guild Spring Champagne Luncheon at noon Tuesday will be Mrs. Lee L. Larimer. The luncheon will be held at Whitaker Hall, Belvedere.

Mrs. Larimer, a Tiburon Peninsula resident for over 20 years, will be leaving Marin for Mountain View later this month. For the past seven years she has been director of Church School Education at St. Stephens Episcopal Church, where she has trained church school teachers and directed the program for more than 200 children enrolled in the church school.

The responsibility, which started out as community service for Mrs. Larimer, became a professional assignment in 1965. She will be going to St. Timothy's Parish in Mountain View, where she will be adminitsrative assistant to the rector, the Rev. Dwight Edwards, and director of church school education. She is also a member of St. Stephen's Guild, and a former secretary of that organization.

Mrs. Alfred Matson is luncheon chairman; Mmes. Carlisle Becker and James Walsh, assistants.

THE MARIN Country Club Garden Club members will go on an outing to Angel Island for their annual picnic on Monday. Members will meet at the Country Club at 10 a.m. and go by bus to Tiburon where they have chartered a ferry to the island for a picnic luncheon. Alternate plans will be used if the ferry strike prevents going to the island.

Mrs. Edward Rifkind will be installed as president following the luncheon. Other officers are Mmes. William Fergus, vice president; Kenneth Borchardt, corresponding secretary; Roy Ricksham, recording secretary, and William Bills, parliamentarian.

NOVATO NEWCOMERS Club members, their husbands and guests will have a brunch tomorrow at the Red Vest restaurant in Novato. The guests will gather at noon for a social hour, with brunch to be served at 2 p.m. Mmes. George Klose, Edwin Fleming and William Hayton are reservations chairmen.

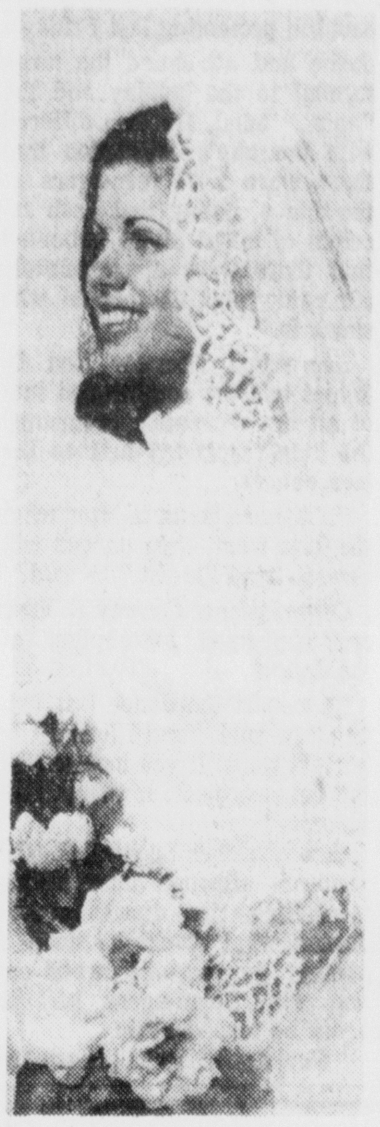
West Point Graduate Takes Bride There



MRS. STEPHEN DAVIS

Margaret Carmeron Arnold, the daughter of Mrs. Theodore S. Watson Jr. of Garrison, N.Y. and Ralph G. A. Arnold of Fairfax, Va., was married yesterday to Lt. Stephen Frederick Davis. Lieutenant Davis is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Reid Davis of Fairfax.

The ceremony was performed at the West Point Cadet Chapel. The bride's matron of honor was her twin sister, Mrs. Thomas R. Lawson Jr. She was also attended by Mrs. Louis Simmons, Miss Helen Simmons and Miss Sara Maurer.

Thomas R. Lawson Jr. was best man. Ushers and sabre bearers were Lts. Jeffrey Donaldson, Peter Drower, Lawrence Feigenbaum, Paul Feyereisen, Wayne Murphy and James Ondo.

A reception followed the ceremony in the ballroom of the Officers' Club.

The bride attended Westbrook Junior College in Portland, Me. and Blinn College in Texas. She is a direct descendant of Roger Williams, the founder of the state of Rhode Island and of Benedict Arnold.

Lieutenant Davis was graduated on Wednesday from West Point. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Turner of Downey and Mrs. Arthur Davis of Fairfax and the late Mr. Davis.

Folowing a wedding trip, the couple will be stationed at Fort Sill, Okla.

Tamalpa Salon Installs Officers For Coming Term

Hazel Field Pauline of Ross was installed president of Tamalpa Salon 558 of the honor organization of the American Legion Auxiliary— 8 et 40.

HAZEL FIELD PAULINE

Those who will serve with her are Mmes. Harry Fitsgibbons, vice president; Dorothy Sollar, second vice president; Ralph Slonecker, treasurer; Norman Boyd, secretary; William Wider, historian, and Frank Bird, chaplain.

Mrs. Pauline has been active in many areas, having served recently as the president of San Anselmo Unit 179 of the American Legion Auxiliary. She is a past president of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Fleet Reserve Association and of the Marin Business and Professional Women. She is a charter member of the Marin Soroptimist Club and San Rafael Toastmistress Lunch Club, also a member of Fairfax Parlor of Eastern Star.

The 8 et 40 has two programs —the prevention and control of tuberculosis, juvenile type, and cystic fibrosis.

New Careers Program Voted; Budget Axed

A drastically reduced version of the New Careers Program, sliced from $76,928 down to $17,543, won the approval of the Marin County Board of Supervisors yesterday in a 4 to 1 vote.

Dr. Arthur Pearl of the University of Oregon, a consultant, and Asst. County Administrator Thomas F. Campanella — who earlier had presently widely differing proposals for a New Careers program — offered a compromise program which would have opened 10 positions for New Careerists as they were vacated by regular county employees and created 14 new jobs to be filled by the New Careerists.

This compromise plan would have cost $76,928. Supervisors decided that all they could afford for next year was the first component — substitution when vacancies occur. This would require $17,543 for a coordinator and a part-time secreatry.

James E. McKenna, director of the Neighborhood Youth Corps program, announced he could do the work for nothing.

Supervisor William A. Gnoss, who said he is impressed with McKenna's work, moved to approve the abbreviated version of New Careers with McKenna as coordinator. Baar seconded the motion.

The other three supervisors said they were not sure McKenna could take on the added duties and wanted to delay a decision.

On New Careers, all five voted in favor, but a second motion — to have McKenna as coordinator — lost 3 to 2, with Gnoss and Baar on the losing end.

Board chairman John F. McInnis and Superviosr Louis H. Baar, his former colleague on the San Rafael City Council, argued over whether McInnis, who had framed the motions, deliberately called for a vote first on whether to approve the program to insure defeat of the second motion to appoint McKenna.

The supervisors then voted 4 to 1, with Baar dissenting, to set aside $17,543 for a coordinator and a part-time secretary, with the understanding that if McKenna can do the job, the money would not be spent.

Even if a new coordinator were hired, the $17,000 would be more than offset by reduced salaries because New Careerists with low pay would replace high-salaried employees, said Pearl.

Burglary Is Denied By San Franciscan

James Roger Kraft, 23, of San Francisco, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court ot burglarizing a Forest Knolls home on May 28. A preliminary hearing was set for Tuesday.

Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. refused to release Kraft on his own recognizance after learning he has a long arrest record. But he reduced Kraft's bail from $9,375 to $1,000.

Friday Plea Date

The case of Andrew Lawrence Stitch, 18, of San Rafael — accused of stealing a $350 guitar from a San Rafael music store May 21 — has not been accepted in juvenile court, it was reported yesterday in Marin Municipal Court. Stitch is scheduled to appear Friday to plead to the felony charge.

Nichols Holds Vote Valid At Sonoma

Sonoma State College President Ambrose R. Nichols Jr. upheld yesterday the May 27 election of Black Student Union leader James G. Gilette as student body president.

The decision came after a five-and-a-half hour session with students, many of whom claimed the election practices had been illegal.

Nichols said, "Although as president, I have the authority to insure that the affairs of the associated students are properly conducted, the evidence presented regarding the elections did not demonstrate substantial improprieties or inadequacies which would require my intervention."

In making the ruling, Nichols validated the decision of the campus elections commission and associated students board of directors.

An attorney from the chancellor's office was also present at the lengthy session to give legal advice. The public and press were barred from the meeting and only students wishing to testify were permitted to enter the meeting room.

Gilette, 34, of Cotati, last week defeated Jon Owen, junior political science major from Novato. Owen had previously won the general election and runoff election which were later ruled invalid by the student board of directors.

In apparently ending the controversy, Nichols did, however, call for study and revision of the elections process. "It is clear that aspects of the bylaws and the elections code dealing with the conduct of elections definitely need to be studied carefully by the students.

Fairfax Teen-Agers' Dances Get Reprieve

Teen dances at Fairfax Pavilion — which in one week mushroomed from virtual obscurity into such an overcrowded "success" that 18 peace officers were needed to quell a rock-and-bottle-throwing incident — will apparently continue to be part of the city's recreation program.

The park and recreation commission last night unanimously approved the resumption of the dances, but under stricter compliance to existing rules.

The 17-year-old promoter of the dances, Steve Jensen of San Anselmo, told the commission that he would continue to bring in "name" bands to the dances.

'It was the appearance of just one of those name bands — The Sons of Champlin — that sent attendance at the Memorial Day dance soaring from the usual 120 persons to between 650 and 1,000 and touched off the melee that left Fairfax Police Chief James Orr, another police officer and a 17-year-old juvenile injured.

The millile-throwing aparently began when Fire Chief Charles Thornton ruled that the capacity of the pavilion had been reached and refused to allow about 200 teen-agers to enter the dance.

Jensen told the commission that he had done nothing unusual in promoting last Friday's dance and attributed the large turnout to the holiday and the "name" band. He also differed with the city's estimation that there were 1,000 teen-agers at the dance, noting that cash receipts of about $1,500 indicated that there were approximately 550 paid "plus another 25 who snuck in."

Recreation Director Ron O. Samet told the commission that of all the recreation programs, the kids responded best to the teen dances.

"If we are going to offer what the kids want, then dances will have to head the list," he said.

Commissioner Conway E. Enscoe supported resumption of the dances.

"I was at the dance last Friday," he said, "and I found it to be very good. If you look at just the dance aspect, it was a real success."

Commissioner Leonard J. Wilgenbush, although later voting to continue the dances, asked Jensen what would be done if another large crowd turned out and some teen-agers had to again be turned away.

"Would you like us to turn the fire hose on them or what?" he asked.

Jensen said that in the future he would use pre-sell ticketing, only printing up to 700 tickets, the maximum number of persons allowed in the pavilion under city ordinance.

Several in the audience urged the commission to allow the dances to continue, but also urged greater city control. Many praised Jensen for his work in organizing and running the dances.

"Earlier in the evening, you were seeking ways to get better participation at your recreation programs. Now this lad (Jensen) is doing what you are trying to do. I think he should be commended," an unidentified spectator said.

Most of the 15 to 20 persons in the audience indicated they favored allowing resumption of the dances. No one spoke against resumption.

The commission, however, turned down a request from the Switchboard of Marin to sponsor a dance at the Pavilion.

"In light of what has happened, I think for the time being we should limit the pavilion to use by Fairfax groups," commissioner Joseph E. Martinez said.

New Charges Delayed For Felony Suspect

No new drug charges were filed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court against Charles Noel Hess, 26, of Oakland, pending further invsstigation by the district attorney's office.

Hess, who is awaiting trial in Superior Court on five felony charges, was rearrested yesterday on suspicion of possession of a dangerous drug after he was stopped for speeding in Larkspur.

PETALUMA FACES BOND DECISIONS

$3.2 Million In Five Separate Proposals; Midtown, Street Jobs On Ballot Tuesday

Petaluma voters on Tuesday will decide on five bond issues totalling $3.2 million. Two involving street improvements have emerged as the most controversial.

The measure, appearing to receive the most criticism, is Proposition "D." It involves $1,580,000 for the widening and improvement of Petaluma Boulevard north from D to Prospect streets. A small portion of the bond money would provide for the improvement of Washington Street from Kentucky to Keokuk streets, including new street lights and traffic signals.

Proponents of the issue maintain that Petaluma Boulevard must be widened from four to six lanes to ease the bottleneck in the north-south flow of traffic. The purchase of business properties on the east side of the roadway would be included in the cost.

In speaking for the measure. city officials have said the street's traffic capacity has already been surpassed and that future projections indicate the flow will reach 24,000 to 28,000 daily.

Hoping to ease the situation in the business district, proponents say the improvements will help revitalize the downtown area and bring increased business and profits.

Opponents of the plan include several council candidates and councilmen who registered some opposition in the consideration of the bond measures Many say the $1.5 million figure will not be nearly enought to get the promised project underway.

They maintain the funds will provide only enough to acquire the needed land and perhaps some demolition work. Several have charged it would be putting the city into the real estate business.

Others have charged the issue is a watered-down version of the Core Area Plan to revitalize the business district. Proponents have countered that the measure has no relation to the redevelopment plan, but is only an effort to relieve traffic congestion.

The other street improvement issue will appear as Proposition E and involve $1,295,000. Included will be the improvement of Caulfield Lane between South McDowell Boulevard and Lakeville Highway and an overcrossing of Highway 101 at Caulfield Lane.

Continuing the new traffic pattern to the downtown district, the plan includes the extension of Lakeville Highway to Hopper Street, and D Street to Petaluma Boulevard South. A new lift bridge at D Street is also included.

Another section of the measure would provide a pedestrian overcrossing of Highway 101 attached to or near the Washington Street overcrossing. The walkway would be used mainly by youngsters who attend Kenilworth Junior High School or who make use of the municipal swimming pool.

Residents of East Petaluma, led by the East Petaluma Civic Association, have supported the measure saying that a second highway overcrossing from east to West Petaluma is a necessity.

Other proponents say the extension of Lakeville Highway, parallel to the railroad and into Hopper Street, will provide a needed northerly route to Petaluma Boulevard for drivers wishing to by-pass the central business district.

Opponents of the measure have said the estimated costs are too high and have questioned the necessity of a new bridge at D Street.

Proposition A on the ballot involves $185,000 for the fire department. Included would be a new station on South McDowell Boulevard and an addition to the central fire station on D Street.

With the growing number of homes and businesses on the east side, the need for closer fire fighting facilities has increased. Many residents east of the freeway have said they worry that trucks from the west side may not be able to cross the lone overpass in heavy traffic should an emergency occur.

The issue would also provide for a two-bay addition to the central station as well as added office space.

No opposition has been raised.

Proposition B if passed would earmark $45,000 for an addition to and remodeling of the police station. Officials report the building constructed in 1955 became inadequate in 1963 and requires more office and storage space.

Adding to the rear of the building at the civic center, the funds would provide a new radio room, records room, squad room and three offices.

No opposition to the measure is apparent.

Proposition C will be $100,000 for park improvements and park land acquisition. Half the funds are earmarked for improvements to Lucchesi Park on Maria Drive. Now only the site of baseball fields, the city recreation department hopes to develop the 30-acre area into the city's major recreational site.

The bond money would provide for playing fields, picnic area, play equipment, trees and shrubs, irrigation systems and neighborhood meeting areas to accommodate all age groups.

The remainder of the funds would be used to purchase additional park sites for the Neighborhood Park System adopted by the city council to provide green belts in high density residential areas.

No opposition has been raised on the parks measure.

City Mgr. Robert H. Meyer said that, should all the measures pass, the additional tax load on a home with a market value of $20,000 would be $25.10 per year. The owner of a home valued at $30,000 would pay an additional $37.50.

A total of 9,218 Petalumans will be eligible to vote Tuesday, according to Lillian Nommsen, city clerk. Polling places will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Polling places within the city include the Veterans Memorial Building, McNear School, City Hall, Valley Vista School, the George Buick Showroom, Kenil-

City, School Candidates Crowd Petaluma's Ballot

In a ballot crowded with candidates, Petaluma voters will select Tuesday a mayor, three councilmen and three board of education members.

Of major interest is the race between Mayor Helen Putnam and her challenger, Councilman Robert S. Lipman, both veteran campaigners who scored well in the city elections four years ago.

Mrs. Putnam, who is completing her first term, defeated Norman Van Bebber in 1965. Principal-teacher at Two Rock School, Mrs. Putnam was active in school affairs before joining city government.

She served for 12 years on the Petaluma Board of Education, as president of the Sonoma County School Trustees Association and as president of the California School Boards Association.

Mrs. Putnam, 59, serves as chairman of the Mayors and Councilmen's Association of Sonoma County, president of the Redwood Empire division of the League of California Cities and as an alternate to the Sonoma County Local Agency Formation Commission. A graduate of the University of California at Berkeley, she is married and the mother of two grown children and lives at 900 B Street.

Lipman received the highest number of votes in Petaluma history in 1965 when winning his council seat. A graduate of George Washington University, he is employed as a public relations consultant and director of public reations at Sonoma State College.

Lipman, 31, lives at 1217 West Street, is married and the father of three. He has based a major part of his campaign on city planning and more orderly development to include parks and green areas.

He has been endorsed by the East Petaluma Civic Association.

Philip L. Joerger is the only incumbent councilman seeking re-election in a field of nine candidates. Three will be elected.

Joerger, 43, ran twice unsuccessfully for county supervisor and is seeking his second council term. A businessman, he lives at 1 Jensen Drive, and serves on the recreation, music and parks commission.

Candidate Lawrence R. Bernauer, 28, of 824 St. Francis Drive, is seeking his first political post. The owner of a Speedee 7-11 store, he attended Golden Gate Business College and has been endorsed by the East Petaluma Civic Association.

Robert A. Brunner, 31, of 212 Seventh Street, operates an independent insurance agency in Petaluma. A graduate of San Francisco State College, he is single.

Rodney L. Cameron, 33, of 1537 Lauren Drive, has been endorsed by the East Petaluma Civic Association and the Operating Engineers Union Local No. 3. A computer operator, he attended Heald College and is employed by the union.

Lawrence E. Forney, 56, of the Petaluma Hotel is an ex-prize fighter and retired Navy man. He has based his campaign on providing more youth activities.

Fred V. Mattei, 53, operates Mattei Brothers Clothing store in Petaluma. He has been president of the Chamber of Commerce, Rotary Club, 20-30 Club, St. Vincent's Father's Club and the Petaluma chapter of the American Red Cross. He now serves on the Petaluma Redevelopment Committee, Mattei, of 23 La Cresta Drive, is the third candidate endorsed by the East Petaluma Civic Association.

Donald P. Petro, 36, has based the major part of his campaign on dividing the city into six council electoral districts. Petro, of 1300 Glenwood Drive, is employed as general operations manager for the Romac-Pacific Corp., San Rafael.

James Edward Reed, 35, is making his third bid for a council seat. A graduate of Norwich University, he is employed as production manager for an electronics firm. He served as local president and state director of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, president of the Fairchild Management Club and is a member of the St. Vincent's Father's Club, Knights of Columbus, Elks Lodge and American Legion. Reed lives at 962 McNear Avenue.

Eulon O. Stanley, 55, of 1432 East Madison Street, is a former Novato resident. A member of the John Birch Society, he was local chairman of the George Wallace for President Committee in 1968. Stanley is employed as a salesman, also owning a bookstore in Novato.

The names of three incumbents and three challengers will appear on the ballot for three seats on the board of education.

Sol Fishman, 50, is seeking his third term on the board. He had previously served on the Penngrove School Board for five years and has served as vice president, secretary and legislative chairman of the Sonoma County School Trustees Association. Fishman operates a janitorial supply service and lives at 1265 Dutch Lane, Penngrove.

Dr. William M. Kortum, 41, of 180 Ely Road, is seeking his second term. A veterinarian, he is a graduate of the University of California at Davis. Dr. Kortum leads a Sonoma County conservation group seeking public access to state tidelands.

Clay Thompson, 43, president and manager of the Poehlmann Hatchery, is seeking his third board term. He is a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley. He lives at 610 Petaluma Boulevard North.

Challenger Alfred Neal Brengle, 26, is a school teacher in San Rafael and lives at 531 Virginia Drive. He is a graduate of the University of California at Riverside.

Arthur L. La Franchi, 32, is seeking his first term, but has served previously on the Cinnabar School board. He is an attorney and lives at 12 Parkside Terrace. He is a University of San Francisco graduate.

John K. Murphy, 34, has been active in youth work at his church and through parent-teacher organizations. He is employed as a technical cost estimator. Murphy lives at 102 Seventh Street. He is a graduate of Claremont Men's College.

Also appearing on the ballot will be two charter amendments, one allowing the board of library trustees to enter into a merger agreement with the Sonoma County Library System and the other permitting ordinances introduced by city council to be posted rather than published upon a two-thirds vote of the councilmen, rather than by the unanimous opinion needed now.

Juvenile Court May Take Marijuana Case

The case of John Avedian, 19, of San Francisco, accused of having marijuana while hitchhiking near Gate Six, was referred yesterday to the probation department for possible transferral to juvenile court from Marin Municipal Court.

He was told to return to court June 20.

Weekends In Jail For Weed Peddler

Judge Thomas J. Keating of Marin Superior Court yesterday sentenced a 24-year-old Fairfax man, who sold two ounces of marijuana to a narcotics agent, to spend weekends in jail for the next six months.

Henry Lee Quiroz has been convicted by a jury in April. Testimony in his trial showed that he had taken a ride with a narcotics agent while hitchhiking and later sold him the marijuana.

HOT, DRY JUNE

Maps prepared from U.S. Weather Bureau's 30-day forecasts indicate Marin County will be in for even warmer, dryer weather than normal through July 1. Average rainfall for the month is only .25 of an inch; last year none fell, and the season total ended up at 28.10. The last time it rained in San Rafael this year was April 26-27, with .01 inch, but the season total is already 56.51, far ahead of the average 36.57. June's hottest day last year was 97 on the 16th; coolest was 49 on the 13th.

Juvenile Court Takes Suspects

The cases of Philip David Harrison, 18, of Sleepy Hollow, and Duncan Peter Dunn, 18, of Santa Venetia, have been transferred to Marin Juvenile Court.

The youths are charged with possessing marijuana for sale and encouraging a 14-year-old girl runaway to lead a dissolute and immoral life.

They were arrested in a panel truck near the Civic Center May 21.

Convict Tells Of Sabella Robbery Role

A San Quentin inmate, who has confessed to taking part in the kidnaping and robbery of restaurant owner Luciano A. Sabella last November, took the witness stand yesterday and cheerfully incriminated his alleged confederates.

Walter John Hoefler, formerly of Larkspur, described for a Marin Superior Court jury trying Daniel Thomas Stathos and Kenneth Lee Harnal, both 22, how the three of them planned and executed the crime.

Hoefler also told the jury that he and Stathos were responsible for the October armed robbery of the Greenbrae Lanes.

Hoefler reported what he told Sabella to gain entrance to his Peacock Gap home on Nov. 24: "I need help, Lou. I just ran over a little dog in the street."

After he pulled a revolver on Sabella, Hoefler testified, Harnal, also armed, followed him into the house as did Stathos, who wore a stocking over his head.

Harnal stayed in the living room of the home for most of the two or three hours that the three waited for the time that Sabella said his restaurant would be deserted, Hoefler testified. Stathos and he stayed in a den with the Sabellas, Hoefler said.

Shortly after midnight, Hoefler said, he and Harnal went to the restaurant, forcing Sabella to accompany them and open the safe. Stathos was left in the house with Mrs. Sabella and the four sleeping children.

At a prearranged telephone signal, Stathos left Mrs. Sabella, whom he had handcuffed to a piano leg.

"Shaking and nervous" was Hoefler's description of Mrs. Sabella during the long evening. He added that Stathos offered to bring her a tranquillizer once if she wanted it.

Hoefler also told how he and Stathos told the Sabellas that if they described any of the three men to police they would "harm the children" later.

Earlier yesterday, Sabella identified Stathos and Harnal in the courtroom and Hoefler from a picture. He related virtually the same story as Hoefler, describing Hoefler as the man he had originally described to police as "the dapper one."

The trial will continue Tuesday before Judge Samuel W. Gardiner.

Kidnap Hunt Ends

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Magdalena Van Der Spuy, daughter of the South African ambassador in Vienna, who told her mother by telephone Thursday she had been kidnaped, has been found in good health this morning, the South African Embassy reported.

"See, Mrs. Smedley, I told you there's an Oak Floor underneath."

Most home buyers insist on Oak Floors, even with wall-to-wall carpeting. This enables them to change their room decoration to accent rugs when the carpeting gets worn and shabby, or needs replacement as a result of damage. Oak floors also insure higher resale values . . . make homes more salable than ones with carpeting laid directly over concrete or plywood.
Rather than furnish carpeting with your homes, doesn't it make more sense to provide a permanent floor of solid Oak and let the owners choose their own floor covering . . . in colors to match their furnishings and personal tastes?
Both you and the buyer come out ahead when you use Oak floors in your homes and apartments. Think it over.

Thinking About Smuggling

If not, then try smuggling along your favorite dreams, for here you will see, that, from which the tapestry of dreams is woven. Would you be intrigued by about 275 feet of your own Tiburon-on-the-Bay shoreline, private beach, and about 5 acres of tidelands as a protective buffer? Visualize a beautiful acre plateau above the beach; with every window in command of magnificent views to blue Bay, rugged rock or green stately lawn & trees. Via land the main portals of this majestic, authentic English mansion are first sighted thru an iron-gated brick-entry wall. There it stands proud, sturdy, ageless, 'neath the rambling charm of a multi-gabled slate roof. Its entire exterior is garbed in mellowed-red-brick that appears complacently relaxed in the caress of soft green ivy.

The butler and maids have departed, and tho vacant, much warmth prevails.

Upon entering the two story high beige Carrara-marble-floored reception hall, the gracious flow of living space will begin your capitulation. Descend to the grand paneled Dining Room; amble thru the masonry tile-floored sun-room; stroll over oak plank flooring; figuratively recline before the handsome black marble fireplace of the elegant Living Room. 'Tis quite natural that you will then envision the grandeur of gay social events and the delightful tranquil living that can be revitiated here.

Finally, you will note the 4 family sized Bedrooms with 4½ Baths on the 2nd floor; the central thermo controlled heating system, the built-in elec. kitchen., the 2 Bdrm. & ½ Ba., maids' quarters and . . . and . . . and . . .

Please phone for an appointment; we will be happy to smuggle you in via land or sea.

AN IDEA

Are you reading the Want Ads every day, hoping to spot a good buy? Then consider for a moment another way of doing the same thing which we think may be better.

It is a fact that often OUR best buys never get advertised at all. We have over $13 million in Marin property listed for sale at any one time, and naturally we can't advertise all we have for sale every day. And furthermore, we call OUR buyers BEFORE a property gets to the papers, and if it is what they want, it is sold before it is advertised at all!

So our suggestion is that you tell us what it is that YOU are looking for in Marin. Chances are we have it listed now, or if not, that we will have it listed soon, because we have a continuous flow of new listings from a backlog of FIFTY-NINE YEARS of selling here (relistings) as well as from our complete coverage with SIX MARIN COUNTY OFFICES.

As soon as we spot what you are looking for, WE WILL CALL YOU FIRST, BEFORE WE ADVERTISE THE PROPERTY. Become one of our buyers . . . call

Belvedere

RELUCTANTLY FOR SALE

High on protected side of Belvedere Island with sweeping views from every room through stately oaks, stands this large elegant Belvedere home designed by Architect Francisco Centurion. This naturally wooded lot is one of the larger in Belvedere with over 30 trees.

Living room, formal dining room, and library/den has 12 ft. high, unusually beamed ceilings, walls of floor-to-ceiling modular glass windows with tall French doors opening on decks, and dark stained hardwood floors.

Dining room wall is paneled with 80 year old siding from barn in Coloma. Built-in china cupboard.

Library/den completely paneled in redwood with over 12 ft. wide modular bookcases that swing out to reveal hidden storage area.

Three bedrooms (all newly carpeted in deep off-white pile), three baths include large master suite, with beautiful master bath, walk-in closet, sitting/bedroom combination. Plus laundry and ironing room.

Open house: 146 Madrona Saturday and Sunday, June 7 and 8, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. or call owner for appointment, 435-0079. Price: $89,500.

BRIDGEWAY WIDENING COMPLETED

Sausalito's Bridgeway widening project was completed last week when construction workers put the finishing touches on the special emergency lane. The widening cost $144,804. Workmen reported that some drivers have been using the center strip for parking and as a passing lane. The center strip was built for use by police, fire and ambulance vehicles. The city is considering painting a double line to discourage parking and passing on the new, raised lane. (Independent-Journal photo)

Students Pick Slate At San Marin High

Phillip Peterson outpolled two other candidates and was named yesterday as president of San Marin High School student body for the 1969-70 school year.

Although voting was done last Tuesday, results of the election were not announced until yesterday by student advisor Donald T. Nicholas. The number of votes each candidate received was not released by the school.

Peterson won the presidency by defeating John Briggs and William Eckhoff.

Robert Fowler won the vice presidency over Mark O'Connell and James Osborn. J. D. Catlin was elected secretary over Jeff Bedford and Lynn Kircher. Peter Sorensen was unopposed for treasurer.

Sue Dennis, Genine Loveland, Pat McDowell, Sandy Nakamine and Donna Richardson were chosen varsity cheerleaders. India Colfer, Diane Jacques, Darlene Knickerbocker, Tamara Larsen, Marcie Long, Marua McCarthy and Holly Reynolds won the posts of songleaders.

William Swearingen won the presidency of the senior class for next fall over Dwight Darling. Barbara Kurtz was unopposed for vice president, as was Carla Clements for secreatry. Linda Elkin won the treasurer position over Chris Dahl.

Walt Antonio, Lisa Davis, Joan Leverington, Terry Loegering, Sand2y Nakamine, Paula Richardson and Jackie Smith won places on the representative council.

James Osbon was elected president of the junior class for next fall, winning over Daniel Fries. Greg Maloney won the vice presidency over Mike Leeper. Mike Trahan was unopposed for secretary and Gayle Thompson was unopposed for treasurer.

Curt Barton, Jeff Bedford, Mike Kassenbrock, James Nakamine, Mark O'Connell, and Rodney Yee won places on the representative council.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Most Alcoholics Look Normal And Are Not On Skid Row

VAN DELLEN

Less than 3 per cent of our alcoholics live on skid row. The majority are well-dressed, clean-shaved, and look like any other citizen. Physicians have difficulty recognizing these individuals when they seek medical advice for any number of related and unrelated complaints. Estimates indicate that 9 out of 10 with drinking problems escape detection, even by experts.

Persistent drinking, regardless of quantity, is a medical problem. Of greatest importance is whether alcohol has impaired mental and physical health.

ESSENTIALLY, the problems of the heavy social, or problem, drinker are:

Dependence upon alcohol in much the same way as addicts become dependent upon drugs.

Withdrawl symptoms shortly after the drug is discontinued. The individual awakens with the shakes, sweats profusely, and has butterflies in the stomach. Chronic alcoholics may develop withdrawal fits and delirium tremens.

At first, a tolerance to booze develops so that the person can drink more without getting drunk. Later tolerance declines and he "feels" his liquor sooner.

The individual cannot remember the night before due to amnesia. During alcoholic blackouts, there is no loss of consciousness and many behave normally and are able to perform complicated tasks.

SUSPICIOUS FINDINGS are enlargement of or tenderness over the liver. In many, there is a fine tremor of the outstretched hands and tongue. Redness of the face and palms may be seen. Liquor on the breath does not necessarily indicate alcoholism.

Many alcoholics complain of nervousness and stomach trouble, but hesitate to blame booze for their distress. They also are accident prone and frequently ask the physician to sign disability certificates stating that they were absent because of sickness. Alcoholics are found in all walks of life, and often we forget that many women are also victims.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J)

CORONARY DISEASE

D. C. writes: What is coronary disease?

REPLY

The term coronary applies mainly to diseases involving the arteries that bring blood to the heart muscles. Arteriosclerosis is the most common cause and angina pectoris and coronary thrombosis are the most common results. Send stamped, self addressed envelope for our leaflet on coronary disease.

AFTER A CORONARY

S. R. writes: Does the heart ever return to normal after a slight coronary attack?

REPLY

Not to normal, because coronary thrombosis seldom occurs unless the coronary arteries are hardened. On the other hand, the damaged area heals and, in tnis respect, the organ is no worse off than it was before the attack.

RAISINS FOR BABY

Mrs. C. writes: I give raisins to my 20-month-old baby occasionally and note that he passes them undigested. Am I harming him?

REPLY

No, but since he is not digesting the raisins, they are doing him no good. Why not forget them until he can chew, or else cook and puree them.

GAS FROM AIR

M. C. writes: Why does a nervous stomach produce gas, even when it is empty?

REPLY

Gas in the stomach usually comes from air that is swallowed.

LSD Case Sent To Hospital

Atwood Donald Travis, 35, of 1326 Third Street, Apartment 2, San Rafael, was taken to Napa State Hospital for psychiatric care after reportedly drinking wine and taking LSD, Sausalito police said yesterday.

Police said they found Travis lying on a sidewalk at 300 Bridgeway at 9:20 p.m. Thursday, unconscious, rigid and cold to the touch with his eyes open and staring. When put on a wheeled stretcher by Sausalito firemen, police said he became violent and four men were required to hold him down until restraining straps could be applied.

Travis' wife said he had drunk wine and taken LSD earlier, police said.

Teen Surrenders In Burglary Case

A 16-year-old San Francisco boy was booked into Marin County Juvenile Hall Thursday on suspicion of burglary after turning himself in to authorities in Nevada City, Sausalito police said yesterday.

The youth, Ricky Van Lohuizen, was said to have taken part in the burglary Tuesday of the John C. Arpels residence, 159 Cloudview Trail, and the Nevada County sheriff's office reported he had several items taken in the burglary.

Another San Francisco youth was also believed involved and is being sought, police said.

Waldo Statue Suit Dismissed

Charges of building without a county permit against statue builders J. Christopher Roberts and Andrew Loveman, who are constructing an edifice at Gate 5 near Sausalito, were dismissed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court.

Asst. County Counsel Joseph Forest said that the county will continue with a civil suit against the two men in an effort to get the 65-foot structure, variously described as a building and statuse, removed.

Roberts and Lovemen claim their structure is a statue of a mother and children. The county, however, has maintained it not only is a building being constructed without a building permit, but is also likely to fall over. It rises above a sunken barge.

Floods Threaten Southern Valley; Army Keeps Watch

HANFORD (AP) — The Southern San Joequin Valley neared a state of emergency yesterday as water began washing over the banks of the area's two major river systems.

The rainy season ended more than two months ago, but the Kings and San Joaquin rivers reached flood stages this week as melting snow from the Sierra Nevada began filling upstream flood control reservoirs.

The reservoirs are on the lower slopes of the towering Sierra Nevada range that borders the valley on the east.

The lower Coast Range forms the western border of the long, flat, agriculturally rich valley.

Population in the threatened areas is sparse.

The San Joaquin River eventually winds north to the delta in central California and drains into San Francisco Bay.

The Kings River drains into Kings and Fresno counties. In normal water years its flow is diverted for irrigation and any surplus percolates into the ground.

This year the river volume has more than tripled. The excess has been diverted to Tulare Lake Basin to the south.

The basin, usually dry, now contains more than one million acre feet of water and covers nearly 90,000 acres of prime farm land.

Waters flowing over the banks of the Kings now threaten to inundate another 50,000 to 60,000 acres of farmland.

Volunteer crews have been on duty 24 hours daily shoring up levees.

Officials say they have a 50-50 chance of containing the water without further damage.

"We're holding our own," said Frank Irwin, administrative officer of the Kings County Public Works Department.

"But if Pine Flat Dam goes over the top, there is big trouble." The dam, the Kings River upstream control point, has a capacity of 1,024,000 acre feet.

Storage yesterday stood at 984,343 feet and was rapidly rising.

Deputies Halt Bolinas Center Rock Dance

A rock dance at the Bolinas Community Center, attended by more than 250 youths, some from as far away as the East Bay, was stopped last night after some of the youths refused to quiet down when warned by Marin County sheriff's deputies.

Deputy Richard Russell said he received complaints from Bolinas residents that music from the dance could be heard for blocks around.

When he arrived, he said, "quite a few" teen-agers were milling in the street, some drinking and others just getting some fresh air.

Most cooperated when he and the 10 other deputies called to the scene asked those outside to disperse but some started calling names and throwing rocks.

When the rock throwing started, Russell said he asked those in charge of the dance to shut it down, which they did immediately.

During the disturbance, he said, a small butane gas line connected to the building accidentally was broken, causing unfounded rumors that the downtown streets were filled with gas.

COLLEGE GOES NATIVE

Tobrianders, Kwakiutl Hold Fete

By BRUCE COLEMAN

Male "Trobrianders" in white feather headresses passed among "westerners" on the College of Marin campus in Kentfield yesterday and frightened them occasionally with wild yells.

Girls in flowered bras and grass skirts moved in and out under a grove of trees carrying slices of fresh fruit and glasses of punch.

"Kwakiutl Indians" stood by their hand-built longhouse with its symbol of a bullhead fish on the front prepared for a potlatch.

The whole affair was a festival climaxing an experiment in a cultural anthropology course in which students made thorough studies of two far distant peoples — the Trobriand Islanders who live off eastern New Guinea and the Kwakiutl Indians who live on Vancouver Island, B.C.

All semester, both groups of students researched their peoples and reproduced authentic clothing, houses, beads, pottery.

They also have done skits re-enacting marriage, garden magic and shamanistic curing ceremonies. They have also portrayed funeral and puberty rites. Some of the ceremonies were enacted yesterday.

The two cultures were chosen, student Mary Mohler said, because of their great differences. While the Trobrianders are much more isolated and have had few visitors, the Kwakiutls have felt the invasion of the western culture since 1700 and, hence, have become quite "dissipated" as a people.

"Getting into this required understanding the salient parts of the culture," said a feathered Trobriander, Jerry Lannigan. "We had to find these things (cultural aspects). We felt like Trobrianders."

Grass-skirted Ronnie DePasquale declared that when students did the skits they felt as if they were living in the respective culture.

"You get into this and you really see how deep these older cultures are. If we could grasp this idea," she continued, "we could get off the thing of Americans wanting everyone to be entirely like ourselves."

The Trobrianders are known for putting down their mothers-in-law and neighbors.

The Kwakiutls, who build longhouses and fishing boats, are known for their potlatch. This is a challenge between two chiefs where one challenger tries to improve his image by destroying as much of his own property as he can. Sometimes this property is blankets which Kwakiutls wear in the winter. In the summer they wear cedar bark wrap-arounds.

A source book, Bronislaw Malinowski's "Argonauts of the Western Pacific," wasn't too much help for fashion, reported Miss DePasquale. "But," she said, "they don't wear much anyway."

Other students made beads and student ceremicist Gabriel Perez turned out clay cooking pots at the college. Students built both a longhouse and a yam house in as authentic fashion as possible from their source books plus a Kwakiutl yam garden and a fishing dock suspended by ropes from a tree over Corte Madera Creek.

Dave Roscoe, who tended a roasting pig, said students started cooking it at 8 p.m. Thursday and the beast caught fire twice.

Anthropology teacher Diane Wickstrom, a geranium wreath around her hair, also stayed up all night with the pig. She reported she was "bushed" but she felt the experiment was highly successful.

Police Charge Marijuana Sale

A Petaluma man was held today on suspicion of marijuana possession following his arrest on a downtown street after a passing officer noticed an alleged purchase of the narcotic.

Officer Stanley Wells reported sighting the alleged "buy" as he cruised Fourth Street about 10:40 p.m. yesterday. He turned around and confronted two men on the sidewalk near a pool hall.

Wells said he found a vial of vegetable matter resembling marijuana and three hand-rolled cigarettes, also suspected marijuana, on Harlan E. Osborne, 22, 1297 Magnolia Avenue.

Osborne was arrested and transferred to Sonoma County Jail where he was held on $5,000 bail. The second man was not arrested.

Petaluman Dies Of Bullet Wound

A Petaluma man was found dead of a gunshot wound to the head in the bedroom of his home yesterday. Police said the wound was apparently self-inflicted.

Sgt. William Reed said a neighbor heard a shot from the home of Howard Lloyd Woolsey, 44, and called police. No notes were found at the home at 44 Sixth Street, police said.

Further details were not immediately available.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, June 7, the 158th day of 1969 with 207 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Saturn. The evening stars are Mars and Jupiter.

On this day in history:

In 1864 delegates meeting in Baltimore nominated Abraham Lincoln and Andrew Johnson to head the Republican presidential ticket.

In 1933 Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany signed a 10-year Peace Pact.

In 1939 King George VI and his queen became the first British monarchs to visit the United States.

In 1948 Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower became President of Columbia University.

A thought for the day: Ralph Waldo Emerson said: "Beauty without grace is the hook without the bait."

Declarer At Notrump Contract Sometimes Safe On Short Suit

When you're the declarer at a notrump contract you usually try to develop the longest suit in the combined hands. This custom does not have the force of law; sometimes you're safe if you start on a shorter suit.

COUNTED

East put up the nine of spades at the first trick to force out South's queen. South counted his tricks and saw that he needed four tricks in clubs and diamonds combined.

Declarer could get his four tricks at once if the club finesse worked. Moreover, the clubs were the longest suit in the North-South hands, but South came a cropper when he led a heart to dummy and returned the queen of clubs for a finesse.

West took the king of clubs and returned a spade, setting up East's suit. Now when South eventually led a diamond, East took the ace of diamonds and the rest of his spades, defeating the contract.

WRONG SUIT

South should enter dummy with a heart at the second trick but then should lead a diamond rather than a club. If East takes the ace of diamonds and leads spades, South refuses one spade trick, and the East hand is then dead. If East ducks the first diamond, South takes the king and then goes after the clubs to get his nine tricks in perfect safety.

South would be safe even if West had the ace of diamonds and captured the king. No matter how the diamonds were divided, the defenders could take only four diamond tricks at most. In this case East would surely have the king of clubs for his opening bid, and the club finesse would eventually assure the contract.

New Hard Look At Tax-Exempt Status Of Churches

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

A growin gnumber of budget-pinched cities and states are taking a harder, hungry look at old American tradition—the tax-exempt status of the churches.

In at least a dozen cases, steps recently have been taken, or are under consideration, to require churches to pay levies for certain municipal services or on some kinds of church property, an Associated Press survey shows.

As state and local governments hunt new sources of revenue to meet swollen budget demands, the indications point toward tightening restrictions on religious exemptions. Some aspects of federal exemptions allowed religious organizations also are under review in Congress, particularly the provision enabling church-owned businesses to avoid the 50 per cent tax on profits.

An end to this exclusion has been recommended by national church bodies themselves, including Protestant, Orthodox and Roman Catholic representatives.

On the state and local scenes, too, many churchmen have supported moves for taxes on religious properties not devoted to specific religious uses, or to pay for certain government services. Some churches have chipped in voluntarily.

In other areas, however, the proposed tax changes have caused considerable controversy, and some court fights.

The question, "Should the churches be taxed?" is no longer the key issue, says an official denominational journal, the Episcopalian, adding that the issue has now become, "What kind of taxes should the churches pay?"

In Nashville, Tenn., a center of many national religious agencies, the metropolitan tax assessor last week issued a ruling revoking the exemption from property taxes on facilities of six major agencies, including:

The Southern Baptist Sunday School Board, the Methodist Publishing House, the Methodist Board of Evangelism, the Seventh Day Adventist Southern Publishing Association, the National Baptist Publishing Board and offices and National Baptist Convention, U.S.A.

"We will appeal," said Dr. James L. Sullivan, executive secretary of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board, the denomination's publishing arm.

In Oregon, where parsonages and various other church properties aready are taxed, the House of Representatives this year voted to subject churches themselves to 25 per cent of the going property tax to pay for fire and police protection, but a Senate committee killed the bill.

Catholic spokesmen opposed it, while Protestants offered no testimony.

In Washington State, legislation was introduced this year to tax church property, but it failed to clear a committee. The United Church of Olympia, Wash., gave the city $200 last fall as equivalent of taxes on the pastor's residence and budgeted $350 for the same purpose this year.

"We believe that all tax free property not used for worship should be on the tax roles says the pastor, Rev. Maurice Haehlen.

Altogether, religious assets in the United States have been estimated at $80 billion, in land, buildings and securities, most of it tax exempt.

Other untaxed property, of private educational and charitable institutions, amounts to even more, an estimated $135 billion, with government real estate bringing the total to an estimated $325 billion.

Studies indicate tax free property has increased in three decades from 12 per cent of the national total to 30 per cent of it.

In Boston, with its concentration of university and church facilities, about half the real estate is tax exempt. Mayor Kevin H. White has pleaded for change, to ease the strain on municipal resources.

Amid rising criticism of the situation, Massachusetts legislative bills for some form of tax on exempt properties this year were consolidated in a resolution to broaden the scope of a special commission named to draw up a master tax plan.

In Virginia, the Legislature has just completed constitutional revisions, subject to final action by a 1970 session before being submitted for voter registration, allowing localities to impose service charges on exempt groups.

The changes would permit levies on churches, foundations and other exempt institutions for police, fire department, garbage and other services.

In Kansas, the 1969 Legislature repealed a law granting tax exemption on buildings used as parsonages or dwellings for ministers.

Major Protestant denominations, through the Kansas Council of Churches, favored the change, while the Roman Catholic Church voiced some opposition, maintaining priests use their rectories as offices, as well as for living quarters.

Kansas courts also have interpreted the state tax exemption provisions to be limited to facilities used exclusively for religion, and not such properties as church-owned book stores and parking lots rented out for income.

In Florida, a bill is before the legislature restricting exemptions more narrowly, with automatic religious exemptions confined to the house of worship burial grounds and one rectory per church. Any other church property would be exempt only on evidence of its specific religious usage.

In Phoenix, Ariz., the Maricopa county assessor, Kenneth Kunes, recently ordered all church parsonages placed on the county tax rolls, and is investigating all church property with the aim of taxing any of it not used specifically for religious purposes.

The move touched off protests from some churches. Kunes says he understands the Catholic Church plans a court challenge to the parsonage tax.

He said "A very pious layman could have as much religious activity in his home as a minister in a parsonage. Therefore, they're not exempt."

The Santa Fe, N.M., county assessor also is pressing an effort, now in court, to tax church property not used solely for religion. Recent studies indicated such holdings valued in the millions of dollars.

Studies into property tax exemptions are under way in Minnesota, Idaho, Vermont, Pennsylvania and the city of Philadelphia.

In authorizing a broad two-year study, the Minnesota Legislature said, "Because of the change in circumstances through passage of time, or because of the need for increased revenue for state and local governments, such exemptions should be discontinued."

Some Minnesota church groups have started making volunteer payments in lieu of taxes for municipal services, as have a few others in New Jersey, New York City and elsewhere.

In Milwaukee, Wis., the city recently enacted an ordinance to impose a sewer fee on tax-exempt organizations, including churches, with the fee estimated at $8.78 per $1.000 of assessed valuation. But amid a wave of criticism, start of the plan was deferred until next January 1.

A ministerial group agreed "it is fair for churches to pay for this service, and perhaps other services," but argued that the charge should be based on actual usage rather than assessed valuation.

In Colorado, the state for several years has allowed taxation of church-owned property not used for specific religious purposes. Under a special scale, church-owned clergy residences are exempt, if their assessed value does not exceed $6,000, or about $20,000 sale value.

The Colorado Legislature also passed a bill specifically exempting homes for older people, if their incomes are near the poverty level, but subjecting other such homes, including those owned by churches, to taxes.

A Presbyterian-owned home in the Denver suburbs, where residents have substantial incomes, was ordered put on the tax rolls last year by the Colorado Supreme Court.

In New York City, where about a third of the real estate is tax exempt, proposals are being studied for enacting fees in lieu of taxes on exempt property owners to help pay for city services.

A NEW LOOK

Argentine Bishops Advocate Reforms

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Argentina's traditionally conservative Roman Catholic council of bishops has issued its first document advocating reform.

The 18-page declaratiion was drafted at a recent four-day, closed-door conference of the nation's 70 bishops. They sought to apply to Argentina the principles of church modernization and social reform adopted by the synod of Latin American bishops last year in Columbia.

For nearly a year, more than 300 young, openly rebellious priests have been accusing both the church hierarchy and Argentina's military government of being out of touch with the nation's social and economic ills.

30 RESIGN

In march 30 priests resigned in the archdiocese of Rosario, the nation's second largest city. They accused Rosario's archbishop Guillermo Bollati, of paying too little attention to the problems of the poor and refusing to discuss these problems with his parish priests.

Both sides have sought the arbitration of Pope Paul VI. Archbishop Bollatti has been in Rome awaiting an audience.

The council of bishops declaration, although generally mild and abstract in its advocacy of reform, alluded to the Rosario conflict. It stated the need to "institutionalize church dialogue between the bishops and the priests and between the priests and the people." It also referred to the "changing mentalities" of rebellious priests.

The document declared that "after a long, historical process which is still going on, our country has acquired an unfair structure. Freedom must be sought because there is oppression in all sectors: the judicial, political, economic and social."

SOME PRAISE

Nevertheless, implied criticism of President Juan Carols Ongania's military regime was offset by praise for some Ongania policies.

The bishops, for example, called for the community participation approach to solving the nation's ills. Under this approach, Gen. Ongania wants to create community advisory groups — made up of representatives of each segment of society — to counsel the government. The president's critics claim Ongania really wants the advisory groups to replace political parties, which were banned with the closing of Congress after the 1966 coup.

Antonio Cardinal Caggiano, primate of the Argentine church, says constitutional, elected government should be restored as soon as possible. Ongania has stated that "elections are still far in the future."

The 80-year-old cardinal said priests should keep out of politics but he called for the legalization of political parties and commented that Argentines are capable of electing their leaders freely.

Cameras Need Special Permit

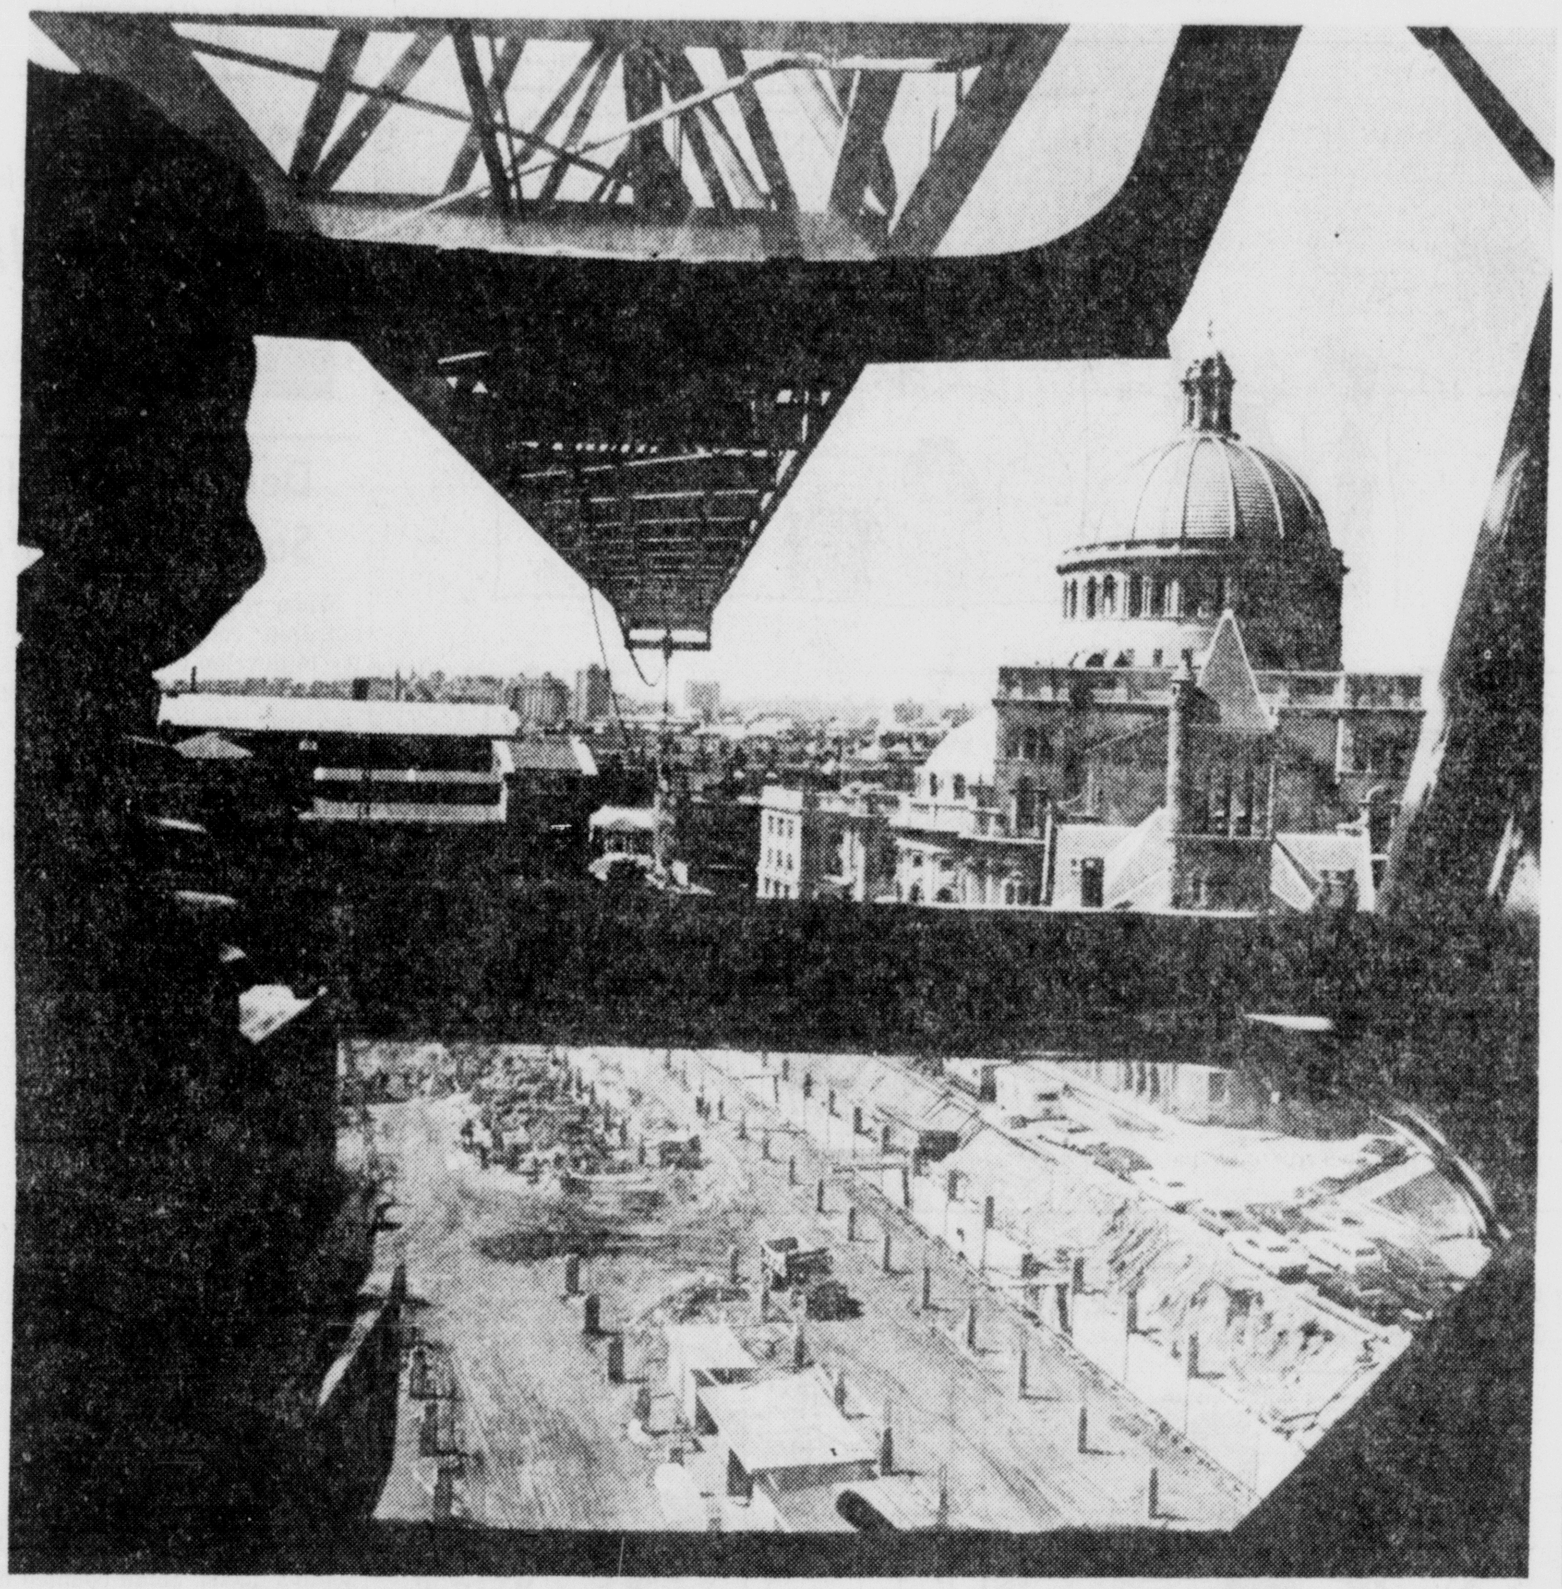
LONDON (AP) — American and other tourists will no longer be able to use their cameras inside Westminster Abbey unless they have special permission from the Abbey's receiver-general.

During an experimental year they were allowed to take any pictures they liked, but the situtation got out of hand when some climbed on seats and monuments.

As one Abbey official put it, the interior of the Abbey sometimes looked "like a thunderstorm" from the popping of flash bulps, and worshippers were disturbed.

Soul Questioned

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Turning up paradoxical results, a survey of adult Helsinki residents found that 75 per cent of them believe that God exists, and 74 per cent believe in life after death, but only 52 per cent accept the idea that man has a soul.



THE CHANGING SCENE IN BOSTON

An operator's view from the cab of a 100-foot crane dramatizes new construction at the world headquarters of the Christian Science Church in Boston. Members attending the annual meeting this week were told the new center, which will house a new administration building, new Sunday school building and an exhibition hall, will be completed by 1971.

Guest Will Preach At Holy Innocents

Rev. Rudolph Garnes, a Methodist minister from the Barbados Islands who has just recently completed his bachelor of divinity degree at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, will be guest preacher tomorrow at Holy Innocents' Episcopal Parish in Corte Madera.

The guest minister will preach at the 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m. services.

Roof Being Sold For New Church

TITCHFIELD, England (AP) — Rev. Norman Miller, vicar of St. Peter's, Titchfield, is selling off the roof of his 13th Century church to raise funds for a new covering.

As workmen take down the old oak beams, twisted with age and damp, the vicar and a few helpers cut the timbers into small blocks which are polished and mounted with plaques giving a brief history of the church.

Then they are sold at one pound ($2.40) each to help raise the 8,000 pounds ($19,200) needed to give the church a new roof. The blocks can be used as paperweights, bookends or doorstops. "We hope a few American tourists will come our way," says Vicar Miller.

Delegates Named For Conference

Fred Sumner will represent the Mill Valley Methodist as lay delegate at the 121st session of the California conference of the Methodist Church in Stockton beginning Wednesday.

Named as alternate to the four-day session is Scott Nelson. The conference will be held on the University of the Pacific campus.

Novatan Is New Leader Of Kol Shofar

David B. Block of Novato has been elected president of Congregation Kol Shofar to succeed Merrill Ring.

Serving with Block will be Dr. Robert Pedrin, first vice president; Philip Ruby, second vice president; Max Chodes, treasurer, and Harry Yaffee, corresponding and recording secretary.

Board members include Robert S. Gottesman, Irving Taznikov, Phil Sennette, Sid Koalkin and Dr. Howard Lang.

Also serving as part of the congregation's administration will be Mrs. Barbara Babow, newly elected president of the Kol Shofar Sisterhood.

Rabbi Jacob Milgrom has also been retained as spiritual leader. He is currently on a tour of Israel.

It was also announced at the recent annual meeting that the weekly Sabbath summer worship service will be held at the regular 8:30 Friday meeting time with lecturers to be announced at a later date.

500 Resolutions Due At Convention

DENVER (LC) — The 48th general convention of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, convening here July 11-18, will consider 500 resolutions, about half of which deal with the controversial issue of church relations.

Some 1,000 voting delegates, 600 advisers and 1,000 visitors are expected to attend the week-long session of 2.8 million-member denomination which, some observers predict, "might make minor ecclesiastical history by its decisions on church relationships."

Namath Leaves Door Wide Open For Quick Comeback

By MIKE RATHET

NEW YORK (AP) — Did Joe Namath really mean it?

Yes, Joe Namath really meant it when he said he was quitting.

But because he meant it when he said it doesn't mean that Namath won't be back taking the snap from center, the familiar No. 12 on his green and white Jet jersey stretched over his slouched shoulders, when the 1969 pro football season begins.

That Namath meant what he said was apparent yesterday when the shaggy-haired quarterback of the New York Jets, tears running down the cheeks that have so often been bussed by adoring mini-skirted girls, announced he was quitting pro football rather than sell his interest in an East Side cafe frequented by gamblers.

But Donn Clendenon announced his retirement, and changed his mind. Ken Harrelson announced his retirement, and changed his mind. Maury Wills announced his retirement, and changed his mind. Joe Namath announced his retirement, and can change his mind.

Namath, himself, left the door open when he was asked following his announcement at the Bachelors III night spot, center of the dispute, whether he thought his differences with Pro Football Commissioner Pete Rozelle could be resolved.

"I hope so," said Namath. "The last thing I want to do is quit football."

And what could make Namath change his mind? His loyalty to his teammates.

Namath's hand may already have been pushed in that direction by the quick support he received from three other members of the Jets — splitend

George Sauer Jr., tight end Pete Lammons and defensive back Jim Hudson.

All three, first-stringers on the team that stunned the pro football world by upsetting the Baltimore Colts 16-7 in the Super Bowl less than five months ago, said they would join Namath in retirement.

But while Namath already has his first $400,000 contract in the bank, a string of lucrative drive-in restaurants and a possible movie career awaiting him, Sauer, Lammons and Hudson would be far less able to withstand the loss of their football salaries.

Realizing this in the days of lessening tension that lie ahead, it would be fully in Namath's character for his loyalty to those three teammates to override other considerations and lead him to renounce his retirement so they can renounce theirs.

Namath indicated his intense loyalty to his teammates following the Super Bowl victory over the Colts when he speculated that his ailing legs might force him to quit, but emphasized that any decision he would make along those lines would have to take his teammates into consideration.

"There would be," he said at the time, "a sense of letting them down if I quit."

In order to resolve his differences with Rozelle, however, Namath must divest himself of his interest in the swinging restaurant that apparently attracted a mixed clientele of fresh-faced girls and somewhat less fresh-faced gamblers.

"If he wants to reconsider," said Rozelle, "I'll be happy to talk to him privately. I'd like to see him play football very much. I was surprised at the news from the press conference because I thought last night (Thursday) that he had agreed to sell."

Rozelle had issued an ultima-

Phil Hurler Awed By McCovey Power

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pitcher Rick Wise of the Philadelphia Phillies, well qualified to speak on the subject, paid the ultimate compliment to Willie McCovey of the San Francisco Giants.

"Most sluggers are not good hitters, but McCovey is," Wise said after McCovey smashed a pair of tape-measure home runs off him last night as the Giants blanked the Phils 4-0.

"I would say McCovey is the most respected hitter in baseball right now," Wise added. "He's so strong that even when you keep the ball away from him, he can still hit it out of the park."

McCovey's first homer missed by a few feet of being the first ball ever to clear the bleachers in right field. It traveled an estimated 440 feet.

Willie's second homer went over the right center field fence and traveled 430 feet.

He now has 10 homers in the last 12 games and 19 for the season — high in the major leagues.

He was asked if he ever hit a ball farther than his first homer.

"I really don't know. As soon as I see the ball go out of the park, I stop watching," McCovey said.

"I have probably hit longer homers. It depends on lots of things like the wind," he added.

The Giants' first three hits last night off Wise were homers. Willie Mays got the other, a 410-footer over the center field fence. It was the 594th of Mays' major league career and seventh of the 1969 season.

The homer barrage made it easy for pitcher Gaylord Perry to post his eighth victory of the year. Perry pitched his second shutout of the season, both against the Phils. He allowed only two hits until the ninth inning, when the Phils added three singles but couldn't score. The Giant infield saved the shutout with a double play.

Perry hasn't set any victory goal for the season. "I would like to win 20 games again. Any pitcher would. But what I want to do most is pitch every four days and help the team as much as I can."

It was the third straight for the Giants and the sixth straight loss for the Phils.

JACK HANLEY

Giants' Clyde King Lays Down The Law

Clyde King is sure the Giants are going to stop giving away ball games. He isn't going to tolerate it any longer. He so told the team in a closed-door clubhouse meeting at which the rookie manager laid down the law.

"I named names and cited misplays that cost us ball games," King told baseball writers traveling with the team on the recent road trip. "How many have we given away in the 8th and 9th innings? Eight? That's my count."

King called the writers into his office when the club reached Montreal. He briefed them in a 30-minute re-evaluation of the club, a re-evaluation based on his own observations since spring training. He acknowledged he had been guided by reports and opinions of others.

"Now I have my own opinions who the best players are," he said. "And we are going with our best men. We won in St. Louis and Chicago on our last road trip with the kids — no I don't like that description of them. They are our young subs, our bench."

Henderson Moved To Third

It was immediately after this briefing that Ken Henderson was moved from the outfield to third base, the ninth man to be used at third this season. The move of Henderson to third had been contemplated a couple of weeks. It held in abeyance, however, until Jim Davenport jammed his right shoulder in a head first dive back to first base on an attempted pickoff play during the Met series sweep of the Giants last weekend in New York.

When Willie Mays is resting in future games, Henderson will return to the outfield and Tito Fuentes will play third. There were other shifts announced by King such as Dave Marshall for Jim Ray Hart in left field and Don Mason for Ron Hunt at second base. Jack Hiatt is going to be the catcher for the time being because Hiatt has impressed him most.

Willie McCovey, of course, remains at first base. King not only praised McCovey's bat for keeping the Giants from falling out of sight but handed the palm to Stretch for "bearing down and hustling in every game."

He also praised Bobby Bonds for constantly "bearing down." Bonds will continue to shift from right to center when Mays is resting and Henderson will take Bonds' place in right.

'Our Pitching Let Us Down'

King reported that the overall feeling of the club was "Our pitching let us down." But he made an exception of Mike McCormick's recent efforts and he also predicted Rich Robertson is going to become a mentneedsmore experience.
winning pitcher in the major leagues but at the mo-

As for the relief pitching King made no effort to hide his disappointment. "I've been disappointed, very disappointed."

But nobody is in a state of despair on the ball club. Aside from all other reasons why the club has had its ups-and-downs, the main one may be traced to the absence of Juan Marichal from the starting rotation.

Marichal, a winner of only one game in the past five weeks, is expected to return to duty this weekend in Candlestick Park. Whether he will be effective depends on his left rib cage from which a muscle tore loose when Juan sneezed in the Astrodome. There now is a walnut sized lump where the tear occurred.

A's 'Kid' Dazzles Detroit

DETROIT AP) — "With a name like Lauzerique he would pitch every day in Montreal," someone quipped.

But George Lauzerique isn't French. And he doesn't play for the Expos.

And although he won't pitch everyday, he looked fully capable of joining the starting rotation as he pitched the Oakland Athletics to a 5-3 win over the Detroit Tigers last night.

It was only his second major league start, but it was his second straight win since being called up from Des Moines of the American Association May 28.

"That boy dazzled us with his motion," said Tiger Manager Mayo Smith.

CAMPY STARS

Bert Campaneris ripped three leadoff hits and scored three times and rookie catcher Gene Tenace hit his first major league homer for the decisive dun in the victory. Norm Cash hit a two-run homer and Bill Freehan a solo blast for the Tigers.

In today's game, Chuck Dobson, 5-4, faced Tiger ace Denny McLain, 8-5.

"It was a big thrill to win against the Tigers," said the 21-year-old Lauzerique, who was born in Cuba but spent most of his life in New York City.

"It was a special thrill to win against Mr. Wilson, Mr. Kaline, Mr. Freehan, and all the others," he said admiringly of members of the defending World Champion Tigers.

RESPECTS STARS

"They are stars and you have to respect them, but I wasn't scared of them."

Lauzerique did not stick with the Athletics team that started the season. The coaching staff wanted him to be a reliever but he felt he should be a starting pitcher.

"It was a disappointment when they sent me down (to Des Moines)," he said. "But I had a 5-0 record down there and was doing well and that must have convinced them."

In his debut last week he gave up seven hits and one run in a victory over Cleveland.

"I just hope I can keep it up," Lauzerique said. "I want to help the club and help myself."

But he doesn't think his two performances will make him a part of the regular starting rotation.

"I'm just an extra man right now," he said modestly. "Jim Nash has a sore shoulder and I'm just taking his place."

Cash's two-run home run in the eighth brought Rollie Fingers in relief of Lauzerique, but the Athletics never appeared in any real danger.

Cage Great Lucas Reported Retiring

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Enquirer says it has learned that Jerry Lucas, Cincinnati Royals forward and the top rebounder in National Basketball Association history, plans to retire shortly and devote full-time to his business interests.

Lucas, 29, has two years remaining on a five-year contract with the Royals. His salary is in the $65,000-a-year bracket.

He was not available for comment early today.

The newspaper said in its Saturday morning editions Lucas has been expanding his restaurant operations here and other enterprises in the past few years and recently merged his business with the Cook Coffee Co. of Cleveland.

"Under terms of the agreement," the newspaper said, "Lucas must retire from sports and spend 100 per cent of his energies on the running of the various businesses that will result from the merger."

'NAME' PARTNERS

The Enquirer said it understood that former jockey Eddie Arcaro, Green Bap Packer quarterback Bart Starr and former baseball star Mickey Mantle "will be involved with Lucas under the new management—although the exact nature of their involvement is not clear."

Lucas has been in the pro ranks for six years, all with Cincinnati, and was voted to the NBA All-Star team each of the six years.

Marin Athletes Fail to Qualify For State Finals

Five Marin County Athletic League athletes who earned the right to compete in this weekend's California High School Track and Field Championships in Los Angeles failed yesterday to qualify for today's finals.

Entered from Marin were the Redwood High School mile relay team composed of Rob Williams, Todd Norris, Tom Estudillo and Tom Poppin; Norris in the 880-yard run and Tamalpais High's Luther Brown in the 220-yard dash.

Only the first three finishers in each heat qualified for today's finals and neither of the Marin entries finished that high.

Movies Improve Brewer

MIDLOTHIAN, Ill. (AP) — Gay Brewer, who hasn't scored a regular tour victory since the 1967 Masters, says a refound putting strike is responsible for his lead going into today's third round in the $130,000 Western Golf Tournament.

"I've been in a kind of a slump for a year and a half," the pug-nosed pro said after shooting a second round 67 yesterday for 136 and a one-stroke lead over Frank Beard and a couple of non-winners, Dick Rhyan and Rocky Thompson.

"I really hadn't been playing that badly," he said. "But it was my play around the greens, my putting. Then I was watching some home movies of myself and I discovered what I was doing wrong on my putting.

GOOD SHAPE

"I was moving my head with the stroke. I corrected it just this week. Now I'm putting much better. I'm concentrating well, hitting my irons good. My whole game is in good shape."

And the home movie he watched?

"The 1967 Masters."

Beard, who opened with a 66, had to settle for a par 71 and was tied at 137 with Rhyan and Thompson, each with a 70. Ken Still had a 66 for a 138 and was alone at that figure.

150-MILE STOCK CAR HEADLINER AT SEARS

A 30-car field will battle for first place money tomorrow in the $12,000 Weibel 150-mile late model stock car race at Sears Point International Raceway in Sonoma County.

The NASCAR-sanctioned 60-lap race will start at 1:15 p.m. on the 12-turn 2.5-mile raceway circuit located near the intersections of Highways 37 and 121. Final qualifying will be held from 10:30 a.m. to noon.

Qualifying highlighted today's portion of the two-day program, sponsored by Weibel Champagne Vineyards.

Cost for tomorrow's race is $6 for adults, with children under 12 admitted free when accompanied by an adult. Paddock passes are available in spectator areas at $5 each.

Pro Grid Moguls Adjourn; Dodgers, Cub Stars Injured

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Pro football's club owners adjourned their spring meeting yesterday without agreement on realignment of the National Football League. They did agree to retain the 40-man player limit and that interleague trading, effective for the 1970 season, will run from the day after last post-season game until March 1.

BASEBALL

LOS ANGELES — Hard luck Willie Davis, who missed the first three weeks of the season with a broken arm, will miss at least two more with a broken cheekbone, doctors said today.

Davis was hit on the right cheekbone last night by a Dan McGinn pitch. Davis was rushed to Daniel Freeman Hospital while the Dodgers were beating the Montreal Expos 4-2 for the Expos' 19th consecutive defeat.

CHICAGO — Glenn Beckert, Chicago Cubs second baseman, will be out of action for three to four weeks after suffering a fractured right thumb in the Cubs 14-8 victory Friday over the Cincinnati Reds.

GENERAL

CHERRY HILL, N.J. — Garden State Park, in New Jersey, and Hialeah, in Florida, two of the nation's leading thoroughbred race tracks, were sold by Eugene Mori to the Campbell Soup Co., Camden, N.J., in a $56 million package deal. The soup company, in turn, sold Garden State Park to the Man o' War Racing Association of Philadelphia.

GOLF

BALTIMORE — Carol Mann and Donna Caponi each shot five-under-par 68s and tied for the first round lead in the $20,000 Lady Carling Open.

NEW MAN—Michael (Mike) N. Hook, former top-ranked player on the Idaho State College tennis team, was recently named tennis professional at the Tiburon Peninsula Club. He is former teacher at the Racquet Club in Pocatello, Idaho; director of tennis for the City of Newport Beach, and associate pro at Seattle Tennis Club. Mike is 31, married and the father of three daughters. He and his family live in Tiburon. His most recent assignment was club pro at the Beach and Tennis Club, Del Monte Lodge, Pebble Beach.

TENNIS

MANCHESTER, England — Clark Graebner, top seed from New York, reached the final of the English Northern Lawn Tournament by defeating Tom Gorman of Seattle 6-4, 9-7.

PARIS — Nancy Richey of San Angelo, Tex., was beaten in the semifinals of the French Open Championships by Mrs. Margaret Court, Australia, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5.

HOCKEY

OAKLAND — The Oakland Seals said they have signed a working agreement with the Providence Reds of the American Hockey League.

The deal gives the Reds first choice of any players who do not make the Seals National Hockey League team.

LOS ANGELES — Hal Laycoe, coach of the Portland Buckaroos of the WHL, signed a two-year contract as the new coach of the Los Angeles Kings in the NHL.

DETROIT — Detroit traded center Pete Mahovlich and defenseman center Pete Mahovlich and defenseman Bart Crshley to Montreal for forward Garry Monahan and defenseman Doug Piper.

BOXING

LOS ANGELES — Mando Ramos, world lightweight champ, broke his hand in training and his title fight against Japan's Yoshiaki Numata June 14 was called off.

HORSE RACING

ALBANY — Fastperk, $11.60, won the feature at Golden Gate Fields.

Marinite Sparks Team To Pennant

Former College of Marin infielder Steve LeBeck singled home a run in the fifth inning last night to give Paul Koss Supply a 2-1 win over Sunset Club, a victory that clinched the San Francisco A League title.

In a game Thursday night, San Rafael's Bill Baxter homered, tripled and singled to give Koss Supply an upset 3-2 win over Fairchild, the leaders in the Hayward AA Softball League.

The Thursday night win moves Koss to within one game of first place in the Hayward League.

Here's A Rundown On A's Draftees

NEW YORK (AP) — The Oakland Athletics drafted William F. Fitzgerald, a catcher from Tulane, as their major-league pick in the second day of baseball's annual draft yesterday.

Fitzgerald, 20, from Metairie, La., is 6-4, 190 pounds and bats and throws right handed.

The A's Triple-A choice was catcher Dennis Wallin, of Carmichael and American River J.C. He is 6-0, 190 pounds and a right-hander.

Russell Almquist, a left-handed pitcher from Northridge and Pierce J.C. was the A's Double-A choice. He is 6-0, 175 pounds.

Larry Prieto, a second baseman from Clovis and Fresno J.C. was Oakland's Class A pick. He is 5-9, 165 pounds and bats and throws right-handed.

Elder Withdraws From Western Golf Tournament

MIDLOTHIAN, Ill. (AP) — Lee Elder, one of the few Negroes on the PGA tour, withdrew from the second round of the $130,000 Western Open Golf Tournament yesterday.

Elder, who claimed he had been misquoted in a recently published newspaper story, pulled out of the Western before teeing off in the second round, telling officials he was injured. He said he had injured his right knee, and was wearing a rubber brace on it.

He had a first round 76, far back in the field.

Elder was quoted in a story published Thursday in Washington, D.C. as saying he would never again play in Pensacola, Fla., because of racial incidents he has encountered there. He later denied the story.

Mays Rated Best Giant Of 'Em All

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Fans in San Francisco and New York have four disagreements over who should be on the baseball Giants' all-time team.

Balloting was conducted in both cities as part of baseball's centennial celebration for an all star team for the Giants, who moved from New York to San Francisco in 1958.

Both cities agreed that Willie Mays is the greatest Giant of them all and both agreed on Bill Terry at first base, Frank Frisch at second, Mays and Mel Ott in the outfield and Christy Mathewson and Carl Hubbell as the pitchers.

JACKSON VS. DARK

But New York fans chose Travis Jackson as the Giants' top shortstop, while San Francisco partisans voted for Alvin Dark. New York likes Fred Lindstrom at third base while San Francisco went for Jim Davenport.

San Francisco likes Bobby Thomson for the third outfield spot, while New York voted for Ross Young. Wes Westrum was the choice of San Francisco as catcher while New York voted for Roger Bresnahan.

San Francisco fans also chose an all-time San Francisco Giants team with Willie McCovey at first, Ron Hunt at second, Hal Lanier at shortstop, Davenport at third, Mays, Felipe Alou and Harvey Kuenn in the outfield, Tom Haller catching and Juan Marichal and Johnny Antonelli as pitchers.

MARIN DiMAG LEAGUE OPENS 1969 SEASON

The nine-team Marin area Joe Dimaggio Baseball League opens its 1969 season tomorrow with four games, and this year sports a new look with two divisions.

In the Northern Division are Healdsburg, Novato Annex Motors, Terra Linda Herb's Pool Service and San Rafael Holiday Magic. In the Southern Division are Drake, Redwood, Mill Valley Chiefs, Toby's Truckers and Presidio of San Francisco.

In the opening games tomorrow it will be Toby's Truckers vs. Mill Valley, 1 p.m. at Marin Catholic High School's field; Redwood vs. Annex Motors at Novato High's field, 5:30 p.m.; Healdsburg at Presidio, 1 p.m., and Holiday Magic vs Herb's Pool Service, Drake High's field, 1 p.m.

Expos Keep Going Down And Mets Keep Going Up

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Montreal Expos, like the New York Mets, might have to wait eight years before winning eight games in a row, but right now the Expos must be asking what it takes to win one straight.

The Expos failed to come up with the correct answer again last night when they dropped a 4-2 decision to the Los Angeles Dodgers, their 19th straight defeat.

Muddling through their first year of existence as one of four latest expansion teams, Montreal already has replaced the Mets' expansion record of 17 consecutive losses and now is closing in on the modern all-time record for 23 set by Philadelphia in 1961.

The Mets, in contrast, are setting an example for perserverence for all expansion clubs. After suffering through years of ineptitude as one of the first expansion teams, the Mets have suddenly become a team to be envied, rolling by the new San Diego team 5-3 for a club record eighth consecutive victory.

END IN SIGHT

The Expos could see the end in sight after 5½ innings as Dan McGinn, making his first start after 23 relief appearances, held a 2-1 lead on a run-scoring single by reappearing Maury Wills and a sacrifice fly by Mack Jones in the fifth.

But in the sixth, John Miller, who entered the line-up in the first inning when Willie Davis was hit in the face by a pitch, singled and Wes Parker blasted his fifth homer.

The Dodgers added an unearned run later and Don Sutton 8-4, with ninth inning relief from Jim Brewer, sent the Expos after another answer.

The Mets, on the other hand, after eight years of losing, have come up with all the answers as they ended San Diego's six-game winning streak. Art Shamsky was one of them, coming up as a pinch hitter in the eighth inning and singling in the tie-breaking run.

Tommie Agee doubled home another run in the ninth and rookie Gary Gentry, 5-4, giving only five hits before needing ninth inning relief, got the victory. The only runs off him were Ed Spiezio's homer and a two-run error by Ed Kranepool, who later doubled in the tying run in a two-run Mets' sixth.

BOWLING NOTES

Youngster Shows Up Old-Timers

Junior bowler Keith Ray showed the old-timers how it's done when he banged out a 267 game and 604 series to lead all scores in the Adult-Junior League at Greenbrae Lanes.

Mike Tauscher led scores at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael when he rolled a 259 game in the 555 Trios.

Action this week at Nave Lanes will be highlighted by the annual Tournament of Champions, open to champ men's teams from the recently concluded winter leagues.

There was some fine play in the Hi-Lo's League at Country Club Bowl this week. Wayne Tobin picked up the 6-7-10 split on his way to a 606 series; Barbara Tobin and Faith Hicklin made good on 8-10 splits; and John Brusatori (166 avg.) missed a 600 by one lousy pin.

Hardwick Wins Redwood City Pro Bowling

REDWOOD CITY (AP)—Billy Hardwick of Louisville, Ky., defeated Jim Stefanich of Joliet, Ill., 289-192 to win the $6,000 first prize yesterday in the Professional Bowler's Association's $70,000 Smallcomb Classic.

It was the 27-year-old Hardwick's fourth championship this year and raised his leading money winning figure to $41,725.

Hardwick, who qualified in the fourth spot among the five finalists, won four games to take the title. He started by eliminating Harry Booth of Mountain View, 267-245. He then defeated Wayne Zahn of Tempe, Ariz., 279-246, and he won his way into the title match with a 247-237 victory over Larry Laub of San Francisco.

Stefanich received $3,200 for second place; Laub got $2,500 for third; Zahn $2,000 for fourth, and Booth banked $1,500 for fifth place.

Meeting Slated For Softballers

San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department is holding a managers meeting for the Summer Softball League Thursday, June 12, 7:30 p.m., at San Rafael Community Recreation Center, Second and Brooks streets.

Plans call for six leagues this season, according to Andrew J. Snyder Jr., director of the parks and recreation department. He said there would be four leagues of regular softball and two "slow-pitch" loops.

Games will be played at Albert Field during the evenings, and will start June 23. Entry fee this year will be $100, according to Synder.

Weber Tops Bowlers

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Dick Weber of St. Louis is the leading money winner in the professional bowling tournament trail, having won $279,362 in official tournament money over the past decade.

LOYAL NAMATH

Jet's Quarterback Facing A Dilemma

tum to Namath to sell his interest in Bachelors III by Friday night or face suspension, pointing to the undesirable characters who were frequenting the cafe.

"I asked him if it made any difference if I had nothing to do with gamblers or gambling," Namath explained. "He told me it made no difference. He told me I'm a football player and I can't be associated with those kind of people."

Rozelle, in a formal statement, explained why he had issued the ultimatum even while emphasizing that no evidence exists that Namath was personally involved in any illegal activities.

DEEP CONCERN

"It is obviously impossible," Rozelle's statement said, "for a player to be aware of the background and habits of all persons to whom he is introduced. However, continuation of such associations after learning of a person's undesirable background and habits is cause for deep concern.

"Such conduct gives the appearance of evil whether or not it actually exists and therefore affects the player's reputation, the reputation of his fellow players and the integrity of his sport."

While Rozelle declined to specify the nature of the activities going on at Bachelors III, an unidentified high police official was quoted as saying:

"The place was crawling with the worst sort of characters. We had men in there and there were all sorts of things going on downstairs (where a bank of pay telephones was used by customers). It was a case of his not knowing what was going on down there.

"But it was pretty bad."

In light of those statements, why did Namath quit rather than sell what can't be more than a moderate money-making operation by comparison with some of his other ventures?

Namath, at his press conference, attired in bell-bottomed brown pants with wide stripes and a blue-high collared shirt, said:

"It's a matter of principle."

He went on to explain, his voice several times cracking with emotion:

"I'm doing something now because I think it's right. I don't want to do it but I don't have any choice. What it comes down to is because I'm a football player, I can't be in the restaur-

"So I quit. I'm retiring — finished."

Besides the principle involved in that, speculation gave rise to several other reasons for Namath's retirement announcement:

AILING LEGS

—His still ailing legs, the subject of the earlier hint at retirement.

—His naturally rebellious attitude which would lead him to resent authority as represented by Roselle.

—His intense loyalty to his friends, represented not only by teammates such as Sauer, Lammons and Hudson, but his two partners in Bachelors III, including Ray Abruzzese, a teammate of Namath's at Alabama and with the Jets.

It's that intense loyalty, on the other hand, which is cited as the main reason for a possible change of heart.

Denning Named Marin Catholic Best Athlete

Rick Denning, four-year varsity baseball star for the Marin Catholic High School Wildcats, was named the school's outstanding athlete, it was announced yesterday by Gary Hughes, co-athletic director at the Kentfield school.

Denning, who has played outfield, third base and shortstop during his prep baseball career at Marin Catholic, was named to the All-Marin County Athletic League first team three times.

Other Marin Catholic award winners as picked by the school's coaches are outstanding players Jim O'Brien, football; Mike Murray, basketball, and Terry Stempel, track and field.

Miss Weaver Wins

Mary Weaver's net card of 63 won the Mill Valley Women's Golf Club's "Malcolm Brown Trophy" 18-hole medal handicap tournament yesterday, named in honor of the municipal course's professional.

Ship, Electronics Merger Planned

NEW YORK (UPI) — American Steamship Co. of Buffalo and Reiss Steamship Co., both operators of Great Lakes fleets, have agreed to merge.

Although American Steamship is buyer in the deal for about $10.5 million in cash and notes, Reiss will be the corporate survivor. Eleven vessels owned by Reiss are included in the deal.

American steamship is a subsidiary of Oswego Shipping Corp.

Tyco Laboratories, Inc., of Waltham, Mass., has agreed to buy Micro-Power, Inc., of Long Island City, N.Y., and Custom Products Corp. of Menominee Falls, Wis., for a total of $4 million in stock. Both are custom components producers.

ITE Imperial Corp. of Philadelphia agreed to buy Ray Bobbs Air-Draulics, Inc., of Portland, Ore., for cash. Ray Bobbs has annual sales of $1 million.

Union America, Inc. of Los Angeles, the former Union Bancorp, has agreed to buy Securities-Intermountain, Inc., of Portland, Ore., a mortgage banking firm, for $4.2 million in stock.

Household Finance Corp. of Chicago disclosed that its proposed purchase of Von's Grocery Co. of Los Angeles will involve about $120 million in stock.

Von's Grocery shareholders will get 0.74 share of a new $2.50 annual dividend cumulative Household preferred convertible into common on a share-for-share basis and redeemable after five years at $52.50 a share, for each share of Von's.

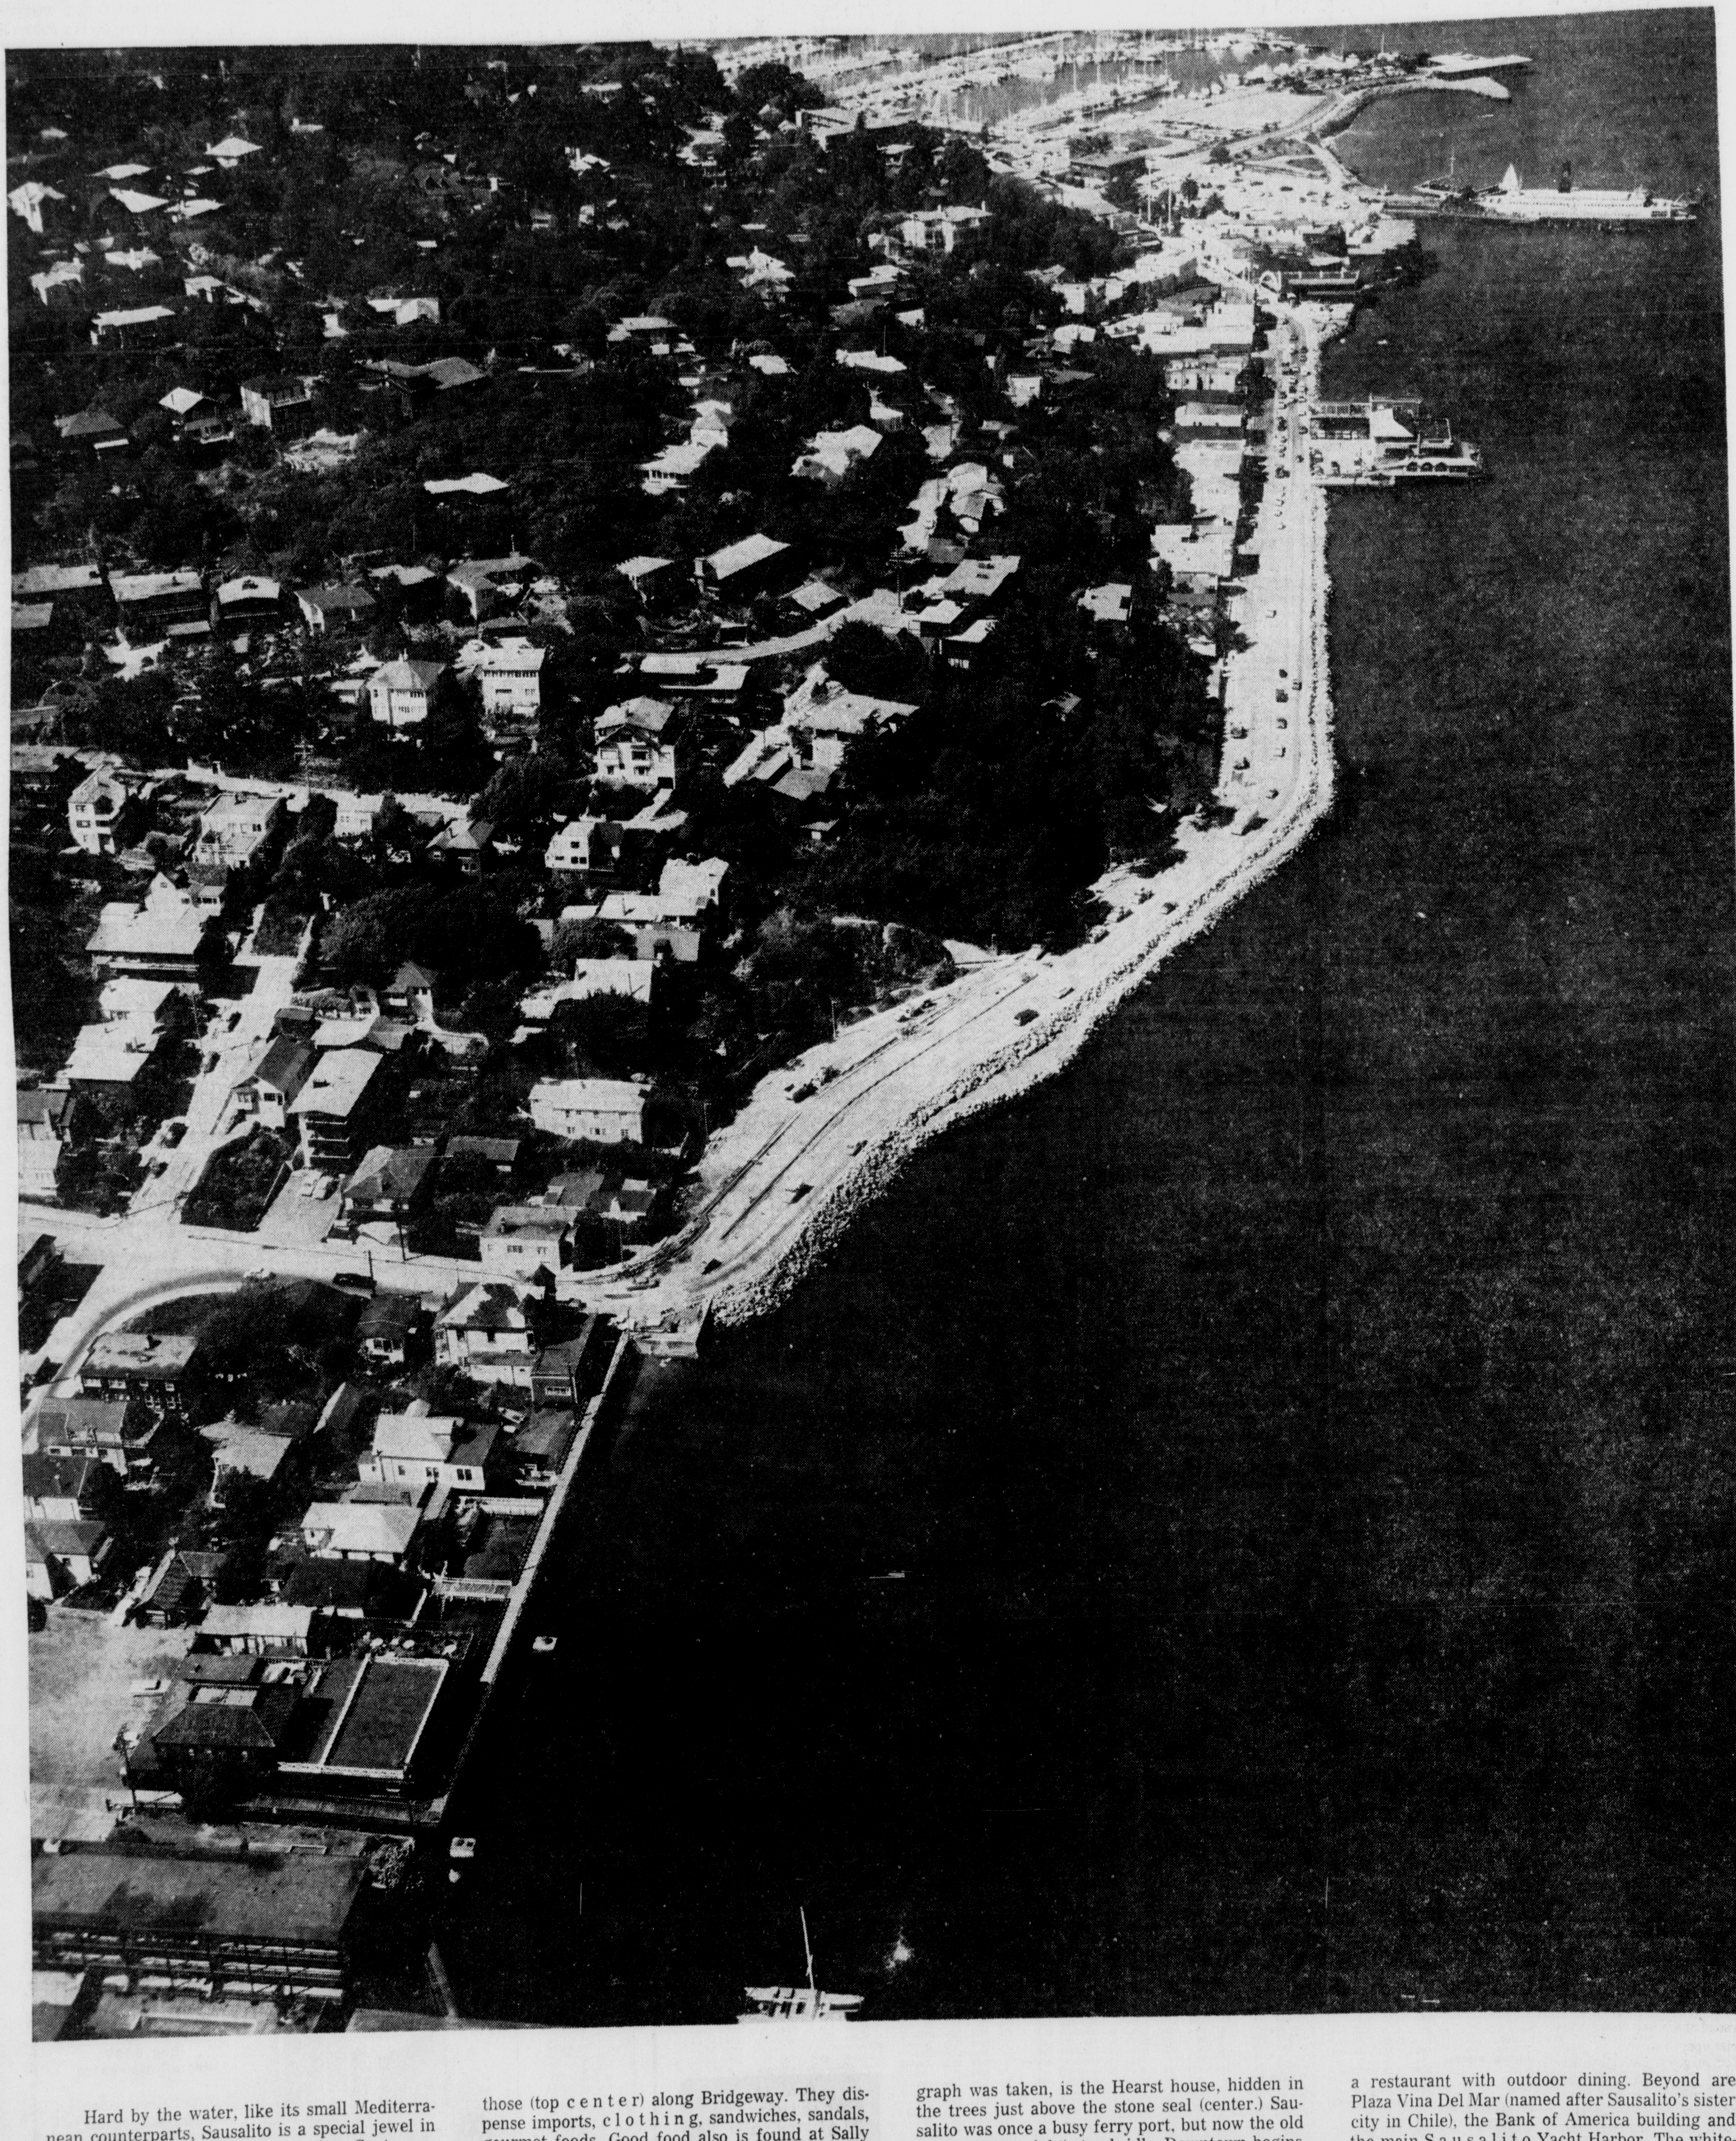
Sausalito: Toast Of The Waterfront



Hard by the water, like its small Mediterranean counterparts, Sausalito is a special jewel in the San Francisco Bay community. Contemporary, colorful and busy, it has something for everyone — from the prim tourist to garishly dressed street people. Shops have a special character, as those (top center) along Bridgeway. They dispense imports, clothing, sandwiches, sandals, gourmet foods. Good food also is found at Sally Stanford's Valhalla (bottom left) and Ondine and the Glad Hand on the waterfront (top.) Above Bridgeway, still being widened when this photograph was taken, is the Hearst house, hidden in the trees just above the stone seal (center.) Sausalito was once a busy ferry port, but now the old Berkeley (top right) stands idle. Downtown begins at Princess Street, across from the old Purity which is being remodeled. Part of it will become a restaurant with outdoor dining. Beyond are Plaza Vina Del Mar (named after Sausalito's sister city in Chile), the Bank of America building and the main Sausalito Yacht Harbor. The white-roofed building north of the Berkeley is the Spinnaker restaurant. (Photo by Aero Photographers, Sausalito)

Miss Ethel Tompkins A Modern St. Francis

IN DYING AS IN LIVING, Miss Ethel Tompkins of San Anselmo avoided the limelight.

She died quietly at home Monday of last week. A private funeral was held Wednesday. The Independent-Journal carried only a brief announcement of her passing on Thursday.

Such avoidance of the limelight would have pleased her immensely.

In dying as in living, she deserved more recognition than she received, or would accept.

SOME YEARS AGO, as she approached 90 still physically agile and mentally alert, she confided her sad feeling that she had lived too long.

Born in San Anselmo in the very home in which she died 93 years later, she was accustomed to transacting business only with people she had known for years. She outlived her own generation, she explained, and it was painful now to deal always with strangers, even at the grocery store.

Although known best publicly for her continuing efforts to insure humane treatment of animals, her personal relationships with people were one of her three great interests in life — as observed by this writer.

The multitude of people whom she regarded as special friends never were surprised to find on their doorsteps packages from "E. H. Tompkins." Such a package might contain the very finest Wisconsin cheese, the largest strawberries imaginable, the richest old-fashioned fruitcake imaginable, a flat of the largest flowered pansies you ever saw, or any one of a number of other specialties which she enjoyed.

Her chief joy, in later years, seemed to be to share these outstanding delicacies with her friends.

HER GARDEN WAS the second of her three great interests. She knew where to order the seeds for the most colorful, most profuse and the hugest blooms of her favorite annuals. Some of the nation's largest and best known seed houses knew her as their oldest customer and they lamented with her the intrusion of weed seeds into their seed packages because modern employees no longer had the love of quality for quality's sake which their predecessors of her generation venerated.

Finally, there was her concern for the welfare of animals. She was a late 19th and early 20th Century equivalent of St. Francis of Assisi.

She was the principal founder of the Marin County Humane Society, more than 60 years ago. She did not miss a single one of the first 50 annual meetings and she served as an officer or director for nearly 60 years.

But she regularly declined the presidency. She was by nature a behind-the-scenes worker. As late as 1950, she was instrumental in founding the World Federation for Protection of Animals, but she did not attend the first meeting of the organization in The Netherlands and she held no office in it.

PERHAPS HER GREATEST ability was that of recruiting effective workers for the causes she espoused.

Sometimes the Independent-Journal is damned as being too independent.

But there was one individual — and only one — who could and did regularly influence the I-J for decades.

In 1907 when she founded the Humane Society in Marin, Miss. Tompkins enlisted the support of M. F. Cochrane, publisher of the then weekly Independent.

Harry Lutgens, editor and publisher of the San Rafael Independent when it became a daily, ultimately served as president of the Humane Society. He instituted the practice of carrying free advertising for the Humane Society in the classified section, to assist in finding homes for animals at the pound.

Today's editor of the I-J serves on the Humane Society's board of directors.

No other person in the newspaper's 108-year history ever exercised such influence. It is unthinkable that any person ever will again.

What was the secret of this power of personal persuasion?

Miss Tompkins was a true lady. One just doesn't disagree with a lady who commands, deservedly, full respect.

WHEN MISS TOMPKINS DIED last week, the I-J library biographical file proved woefully lacking in details about her. She shunned personal publicity. She refused to permit pictures taken of her for publication. She refused to submit to biographical interviews. It was, she said, not proper for a lady's name to appear in a newspaper. She would then chuckle and say of course that idea was old-fashioned and obsolete, but she couldn't help it; that was the way she felt.

No amount of persuasive talk could change her feelings.

What could be learned of her biography was fascinating.

Her grandfather, Daniel D. Tompkins of New York, served as vice president under James Munroe, fifth president of these United States, from 1817 to 1825.

WHILE MISS TOMPKINS WAS at all time a proper lady in every respect, she was human.

On rare occasions she would recall the occasion when, as a girl, she was expelled from an exclusive girls' school on Riverside Drive in New York City.

She tossed a secret note from a dormitory window to a handsome policeman who rode a beautiful horse along the parkway below, asking if she could ride the horse. He signalled affirmatively. She left the dormitory after hours without authorization, was observed riding the beautiful horse, and thereafter was suspended.

Miss Tompkins died at 93. The incident with the policeman's horse had to have taken place 75 years ago.

IN 1951, MISS TOMPKINS was voted by the nation's 600 humane organizations to be the outstanding humane worker in the U.S.A. She was then 75.

Characteristically, she declined an invitation to go to New York to accept the award personally. Subsequently, it was handed over to her at a simple ceremony in the Humane Society's office in San Rafael. She didn't bother to take it home.

Compassion for dumb animals is a necessary prerequisite to genuine concern for one's fellow man.

So it was that Miss Tompkins was a 19th and 20th Century counterpart of St. Francis who sought "total denial of self."

Her departure fills us with sorrow. We shall not live to see another like her.

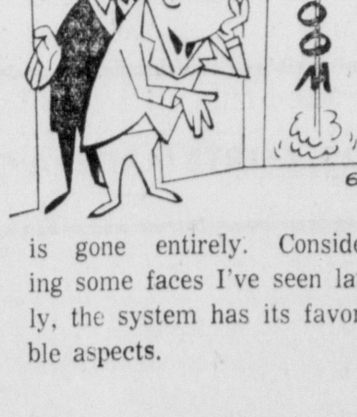
TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

The usual worried husband invaded the office of the usual society psychoanalyst to plead, "You've got to help my wife, doctor. She's convinced she's an elevator." "An elevator?" echoed the surprised analyst. "You'd better send her right up to see me." "I can't do that," demurred the husband. "She's an express elevator, and doesn't stop on your floor."



A leading dermatologist opines that a man scrapes away one-twentieth of his skin every time he shaves, with the result that in twenty shaves his face is gone entirely. Considering some faces I've seen lately, the system has its favorable aspects.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Town Meeting Role Questioned

With reference to the recommendations to the San Anselmo City Council emanating from the "Town Meeting:"

Because the meeting this year was planned and conducted by a closed group of approximately 20 citizens who did not openly seek the participation of San Anselmo citizens at large, but meeting secretly throughout the year drew up a series of only six subjects for possible disucssion;

Because a great number of citizens did not see or have an opportunity to answer even these questions (3,800 questionnaires were said to have been distributed — only 100-200 were said to have been returned);

Because topics some citizens would like to have discussed were not taken up (not having been previously screened?);

Because the "Town Meeting' was represented to be sponsored this year by the San Anselmo Homes Association when in reality the last meeting of this body was in July 1968 and there was no discussion of such participation at that time. As a director (recording secretary — duly elected) of this organization, I have not been aware of any request for endorsement by the board of directors or the membership at large to sponsor this project. . . .

Because the hands of youngsters in the audience were counted in the "official" votes summing up the recommendations of the "Town Meeting" — and because a large proportion (almost half) of those guiding the separate discussion groups were not residents of San Anselmo;

Therefore, a number of San Anselmo citizens including myself earnestly hope that the individual members of the city council not abnegate their own responsibilities as elected officials to seek out and determine for themselves what are the real desires of the people of San Anselmo. The present recommendations are certainly not a mandate of the people of San Anselmo, but appear to be that of a controlled opinion-forming group.

Academic Senate Vote Criticized

The vote by the University of California Academic Senate to recommend turning a piece of state-owned property over to an irresponsible group of law-breakers, even though they are just overgrown children, is an excellent reason why the taxpayers should insist that their elected officials keep control of the activities of the educational system.

If, as the vote indicates, this property is not needed for academic use, it should be sold back to private ownership and returned to the tax rolls. This would not only help to relieve U. of C.'s money shortage but would save the cost of maintenance. Any program that had been planned for the property should be cancelled at an additional saving. Such a move might be a start on restoring some of the taxpayers confidence in the judgment of university officials.

The vote also confirms what productive members of society have long known, that, ability to learn and recall large amounts of knowledge does not always equate with ability to use that knowledge for constructive purposes, or to make workable decisions.

More Than One White In Class

I would like to complain about the article in the May 23 edition that's called "School Yard Race Strife." The part where it says, "The class which had eight white students when Chaka arrived now has only one" is a lie. I know of eight white students in his class now.

I think it is mean of you to put the article on the front page to ruin the school.

(Editor's note: Mrs. Wanda Fudge, whose daughter was beaten, was quoted as saying only one white pupil remains in the class. A subsequent check showed three white pupils in a class of 33.)

Judge 'Never Did A Day's Work'

Regarding the news item (May 27) about retiring Judge William O. Douglas, it is no wonder to me that people complain about the equities of life. Here is a man who received a large salary all his life, and probably never did a day's work in his life. Yet he will receive $60,000 a year for life. While some hard working person who built the country, and also may have served his country, may look forward to $149 a month frmm Social Security if and when he retires.

There is no social justice when things like this can happen.

LINES ON LIVING

Miracles All Around Us, Yet We See Them Not

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

I can never understand why some people find life so boring that they have to look for kicks and thrills to escape reality. As for myself, reality is miracle. The experience of the present moment is worth more than a thousand tales of magic and wonder.

Thus it was to Walt Whitman, who saw miracle in every hour of light and dark and in every cubic inch of space; to Voltaire, who perceived all miracle in the stupendous order of nature, the revolution of a hundred million worlds around a million suns; to W. Macneile Dixon, who sees miracles everywhere and observes nothing but the works of magic: "Nature is not natural, but supernatural, delighting in marvels. . . ."

YET, IT HAS ALL become a matter of routine for us, We have taken the familiar to become mundane, the everyday spectacle to be a bore, the wonder of the living moment in time and in space and in creation as a cosmic imbecility. We have found a convenient and useful word, "nature," to conceal deeper perceptions and meanings. We dismiss wonder, miracle and awe as the works of some stupendous "natural" compulsion and let it rest at that.

It often seems so senseless and visionless. Miracle is all around us. But when we ourselves partake of the miraculous, we soar closer to our destiny. Such has been the fate of our generation when we witnessed the breathtaking glimpses of our earthlings as they closed in with their spaceships on a suspended, cratered moon in a black and awesome sky.

Who says miracles don't happen in our time? They do. And, what's more important, we have made this one happen. Think of it: we have seen in our own days not the crossing of one marshy, unpassable Red Sea, but the navigating of vast oceans of the blackest black in a stark void of the universe! We are treading where angels were believed to soar: a quarter million miles in soundless and weightless space. Who else could have done this but miracle-maker, man?

MIRACLE, in truth, is in the nature of man. For what is miracle if not the ability to rise above the ordinary and to do that which has been established as natural limits? But the ordinary and natural of today have been impenetrable unknowns of yesterday.

The miraculous and wonderous are within the reach of every individual when he grasps the truth that with faith and resolution he faces (reasonably speaking) few limitations other than those that he alone has set for himself.

In this sense we don't look for a miracle as an enchanting rainbow in the sky, but as an opportunity to stretch our own human powers so as to make that which seems impossible today the possibility of tomorrow. We need not invoke magical outside powers in order to see wonder, to behold revelation. We have only to release the God-powers within us to perform those God-things we call miracle.

Rockefeller Mission's Failure More Than Personal Tragedy

WASHINGTON — The disaster of Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's Latin-American exploration is more than a personal tragedy, although it certainly is that. For most of his career Rockefeller has had an active concern with the Americas to the south. Through his own and his family's fortune he has made investments of at least $10 million in Venezuela, intended to show the way to modernize the economy.

Venezuela told him to keep out for fear that hostile demonstrations would get out of hand and result in widespread damage. Rockefeller's personal safety could not be assured.

The informed private view here is that the two later trips should be canceled or at least postponed until the contagion of unrest subsides. The first stop on the next schedule is Brazil, where there is a better chance of a relatively peaceful reception. But in Argentina the military dictatorship is trying to suppress a workers' revolt threatening to break out in new violence. A Rockefeller visit would be pouring gasoline on the smouldering fire.

President Eduardo Frei of Chile, beset by attackers on the left demanding nationalization of American properties and critics on the right calling for an end to social reform, will hardly welcome the American visitor. The deep unrest in Uruguay is not a proper setting for the mission of the unhappy governor.

WHAT IS SO hard to understand is that all this could not have been foreseen. Reports from U.S. diplomatic missions throughout the Americas fill huge files telling the story of poverty, unrest and deep disillusion with the Colossus of the North. The Alliance for Progress has failed to make a dent in fundamental problems besetting the vast semi-developed lands south of the Rio Grande.

Perhaps better than anyone else, through his long relationship, Rockefeller knows the cause and effect triggering the unrest. A staggeringly high birth rate is a root cause. With more than half the population in most Latin American countries under 25, the educational system, starved and enfeebled, simply cannot cope.

The oligarchies ruling in most Latin American countries have dug in their heels against evolutionary change that might have tempered the wind of hostility and rebellion. All too often the hierarchy of the church has been old and also resistant to any change.

ROCKEFELLER'S mission was singularly inept in its concept and planning. He had with him 23 advisers plus assistants and briefcase carriers. Together with the press the party added up to nearly a hundred. As one tart and knowledgeable critic put it:

"Why he's had almost as many men with him as Pizarro had when he conquered Peru."

If the New York governor had gone quietly and unostentatiously, with possibly two or three assistants, he might have been accepted as a fact finder. The publicity heralding his mission was in itself calculated to stir suspicion and resentment. Here was one more instance of the Yankee overlord coming down to report on the progress, or lack of it, of the natives.

THE ROCKEFELLER mission was said to have been inspired by Galo Plaza, secretary-general of the Organization of American States. Plaza is an old friend of the governor who seems to have been as unaware of what the visit would touch off as were American officials who bought the idea.

During the first two trips Rockefeller seemed to think that lavish praise could compensate for hasty stops. Arriving in Guatemala for a 3½-hour visit, he said he was happy to witness the triumph of democracy. In light of the terror of the Guatemalan right and left and a level of poverty and oppression so dismal that a group of Maryknoll priests and nuns went over to the side of the oppressed, his statement seemed a slight exaggeration.

One thing can be said for the Rocketeller facaso, that useful Spanish word meaning snafu on a grand scale. There is an urgent need for far-reaching changes in U.S. policy with a positive approach and not just the tired, old rhetoric.

ART BUCHWALD

Nader Chipping At Hard Rock When He Tries Teeners' Hearing

WASHINGTON — No one has more admiration for Ralph Nader than I do, but I believe he bit off more than he could chew when he urged the Senate recently to investigate the noise levels of rock 'n' roll music. Nader said that studies had shown that young people's hearing had been impaired by "hard rock" music, and he urged Senate hearings to see if some legislation could be passed to put restrictions on noise produced by rock 'n' roll bands.

I believe Nader's task is formidable. It's one thing to take on General Motors, but when you start messing with teen-agers' tastes in music, you're really in a hornet's nest.

But I'm sympathetic with the project, and I've been doing my own studies concerning hearing and its relation to teen-agers, which I'll be very happy to let Nader have. The studies were done under laboratory conditions in my own home with the unwitting aid of my three teen-agers.

THESE WERE SOME of the conclusions I came to:

The first was that teen-agers do not actually hear the music they are listening to. I discovered this one night when the din of something called "Plasma Plus Five" was rocking the house. I went to my son's room and shouted through the locked door:

"TURN THAT DAMN THING DOWN."

When there was no response, I started hammering on the door. A few minutes later, when he opened it, I shouted, "GOOD GRAVY, DO YOU HAVE TO PLAY THAT MUSIC SO LOUD?"

He looked at me and said, "What music?"

"This music," I said, going over and turning it off. "Are you deaf?"

"I didn't hear it," he said. "I was doing my homework."

THE SECOND conclusion I came to was that while rock 'n' roll may play a part in the impairment of hearing, parents play a bigger part. Almost anything a parent says to the teen-ager falls on blocked ears.

For this experiment, I said in a loud voice to may daughter, "I want you to clean up your room."

"Huh?" she said.

"I SAID I WANT YOU TO CLEAN UP YOUR ROOM."

She still didn't seem to hear me.

"IF YOU DON'T CLEAN UP YOUR ROOM, YOU WILL NOT BE ABLE TO WATCH ANY TELEVISION TONIGHT."

"Television" was the only word that got through.

A FURTHER experiment with another daughter showed how bad teen-age hearing is getting.

"I want you in at 11 o'clock tonight."

When she came in at midnight, I said, "I told you I wanted you home at 11."

"I thought you said 12 o'clock."

Another conclusion I came to was that while teen-agers cannot hear things that parents tell them, they can hear things that they're not supposed to hear.

One night my wife barely whispered to me in our bedroom, "Did you hear the Merrills' high school daughter is pregnant?"

My teen-age daughter, who was listening to a rock 'n' roll record three bedrooms down the hall, came rushing in and said, "How old is she?"

MY RESEARCH revealed that teen-agers' hearing improves when they are on the telephone talking to other teen-agers, or asking a favor.

But it gets blocked up again when they're told to brush their teeth, comb their hair, take a bath or mow the lawn.

How much rock 'n' roll music has to do with this is something Nader is going to have to find out. I'm only turning over the raw research, and he has to take it from there.

IN THE FIELD — Charles E. Neal, newly appointed assistant to the chief engineer of Southern Pacific, dons hard hat and takes to the field whenever the need arises. Neal, of San Rafael, had been vice president and general manager of Northwestern Pacific Railroad before his promotion.

DREAMS GO LONG WAY

San Rafael Railroader Gains High SP Position

By JOANNE BRANT

Long ago, Charles E. Neal dreamed of being a locomotive engineer — not an unusual ambition for a youngster who came from a long line of railroad men.

When he was 17, he went to work for the railroad, as a laborer in the roundhouse in Oakridge, Ore. And eventually, he did get to operate a train, but it wasn't to be his life's work.

Instead, he moved up through the ranks, as section foreman on the Shasta Division, then as general foreman supervising extension of the yard at Klamath Falls, Ore., next as a roadmaster and later as general track supervisor for all of Southern Pacific's west coast lines.

In 1953, he was assigned to San Rafael on a temporary basis as acting division engineer and shortly was appointed division engineer. Later he became vice president and general manager of Northwestern Pacific, a wholly owned subsidiary of Southern Pacific.

His most recent promotion moved him from his "temporary" San Rafael assignment to SP headquarters in San Francisco as assistant to the chief engineer of Southern Pacific.

Until that promotion last month, his only absence from the San Rafael office was from 1961 to 1963 when he was assistant engineer of maintenance of structures with duties in Texas and Louisiana. "I stayed right here and commuted by air," said Neal in an interview at his home, 27 Kinross Drive San Rafael.

His years with NWP in San Rafael were marked with disasters such as the 1955 floods in the Eel River Canyon which caused more than a million dollars worth of damage to the railroad.

"Looking back, that was just a prelude to the December 1964 flood," he recalled.

It was at the end of 1964 that flood waters in the Eel River canyon tore out two large steel bridges and heavily damaged a third and ruined 100 miles of roadbed, track and minor structures such as culverts.

Neal was in charge of the vast effort that went into rebuilding the road, but he tells the story like an observer, speaking frequently of the fantastic team effort by railroad employees and private contractors.

"We employed every modern machine we could use," Neal said, "and worked six or seven days a week." At one time, 900 men were working in 22 locations on various phases of the project.

It took only 177 days to get the trains running again and a total outlay of more than $13 million.

The road through the canyon took five or six years to build originally, with the work completed in September 1913. Its primary purpose, then and now, was to move forest products all over the United States.

Neal was also in charge of rebuilding the Puerto Suello hill tunnel which collapsed in 1961. He recalled it was necessary to line the tunnel with concrete to withstand the tremendous pressure.

Neal's wide knowledge of the work he loves so well shows, especially when he lets his pride surface. "Northwestern Pacific Railroad has 550 employees, 67 here in Marin. It does about $9.5 million to $10 million worth of transportation business a year.

"We are one of the largest taxpayers in the area," he added, noting city and county taxes in Marin and four other counties the line serves exceed a total of $270,000 a year.

He knows how many miles of track are in the system — 350 miles; the number of customers — 156; what they ship and how much — one area sends out as many as 900 to 1,000 carloads of pears a year.

In his 42 years with the company, he has seen dozens of changes, ranging from the transition from steam to diesel power to improvements in cars and equipment to the current switch to computers.

He has also watched, nostalgically, the disappearance of passenger trains. Northwestern Pacific still has one car, self-propelled, which operates between Willits and Eureka with a crew of three and sometimes has more crewmen than passengers.

"The trains didn't go away from the people; the people went away from the trains," he said, adding that he doesn't think they will ever be revived as more and more people travel by plane and private car.

He pointed out that in countries where trains are successfully carrying passengers such as Japan the government heavily subsidizes the operation.

However, he sees the freight business thriving and commented, "I sort of wish I were young again so I could start all over."

Outside of railroading, Neal's major interest is family, wife Norma who works at Crocker-Citizens bank; son Michael, a student at Sonoma State College, and daughter Norma Candice who will graduate from Oregon State University this month.

And next comes Junior Achievement, with Neal serving as a director of the San Francisco Bay Area Junior Achievement. "I derive a great deal of pleasure from working with young people," he said.

GRANT and GARRITSON,

TAYLORS, from Philadelphia,

TAKE this method of acquainting their Friends and the Public, that they now carry on their buſineſs in Market Street, two doors from Mrs. Chilton's Tavern, in this town, and will be greatly obliged to all Gentlemen who will be pleaſed to favour them with their commands, as they may depend on having their work done in the neateſt and moſt faſhionable manner, with care and diſpatch.

☞ As the above GRANT reſides and carries on the buſſineſs in PHILADELPHIA, he will be always ready to convey to his partner any new faſhions, either in making or in trimmings.

Mount Vernon in Virginia, July 15, 1773.

THE Subſcriber having obtained Patents for upwards of TWENTY THOUSAND Acres of LAND on the Ohio and Great Kanhawa (Ten Thouſand of which are ſituated on the banks of the firſt-mentioned river, between the mouths of the two Kanhawas, and the remainder on the Great Kanhawa, or New River, from the mouth, or near it, upwards, in one continued ſurvey) propoſes to divide the ſame into any ſized tenements that may be deſired, and leaſe them upon moderate terms, allowing a reaſonable number of years rent free, provided, within the ſpace of two years from next October, three acres for every fifty contained in each lot, and proportionably for a leſſer quantity, ſhall be cleared, fenced, and tilled; and that, by or before the time limited for the commencement of the firſt rent, five acres for every hundred, and proportionably, as above, ſhall be encloſed and laid down in good graſs for meadow; and moreover, that at leaſt fifty good fruit trees for every like quantity of land ſhall be planted on the Premiſes. Any perſons inclinable to ſettle on theſe lands may be more fully informed of the terms by applying to the ſubſcriber, near Alexandria, or in his abſence, to Mr. LUND WASHINGTON; and would do well in communicating their intentions before the 1ſt of October next, in order that a ſufficient number of lots may be laid off to anſwer the demand.

As theſe lands are among the firſt which have been ſurveyed in the part of the country they lie in, it is almoſt needleſs to premiſe that none can exceed them in luxuriance of ſoil, or convenience of ſituation, all of them lying upon the banks either of the Ohio or Kanhawa, and abounding with fine fiſh and wild fowl of various kinds, as alſo in moſt excellent meadows, many of which (by the bountiful hand of nature) are, in their preſent ſtate, almoſt fit for the ſcythe. From every part of theſe lands water carriage is now had to Fort Pitt, by an eaſy communication; and from Fort Pitt, up the Monongahela, to Redſtone, veſſels of convenient burthen, may and do paſs continually; from whence, by means of Cheat River, and other navigable branches of the Monongahela, it is thought the portage to Potowmack may, and will, be reduced within the compaſs of a few miles, to the great eaſe and convenience of the ſettlers in tranſporting the produce of their lands to market. To which may be added, that as patents have now actually paſſed the ſeals for the ſeveral tracts here offered to be leaſed, ſettlers on them may cultivate and enjoy the lands in peace and ſafety, notwithſtanding the unſettled counſels reſpecting a new colony on the Ohio; and as no right money is to be paid for theſe lands, and quitrent of two ſhillings ſterling a hundred, demandable ſome years hence only, it is highly preſumable that they will always be held upon a more deſirable footing than where both theſe are laid on with a very heavy hand. And it may not be amiſs further to obſerve, that if the ſcheme for eſtabliſhing a new government on the Ohio, in the manner talked of, ſhould ever be affected, theſe muſt be among the moſt valuable lands in it, not only on account of the goodneſs of ſoil, and the other advantages above enumerated, but from their contiguity to the ſeat of government, which more than probable will be fixed at the mouth of the Great Kanhawa.

ALTHOUGH HE stands four inches less than five feet tall, Robert Ray Burgan still uses standard appliances and fixtures to keep house in his Corte Madera home, thanks to a number of strategically-located two-step ladders. At left, he stands on one of the ladders to feed the upright washer in his kitchen. In center photo, another comes in handy at dish-washing time, while his pet cat perches on the "rumble seat." When You Stand But Four-Feet-Eight

By GIL PEARSON

If holding your job depended on loading a truck with 90-pound, five-foot sacks of fertilizer, and you stood but four-feet-eight-inches tall — what the heck would you do about it?

The solution becomes a matter of brain rather than brawn as worked out by one Robert Ray Burgan, a 125-pound employee of the California State Division of Highways.

"I can't lift that much bulk," Bob says, "so I break it open and load by bucketsful."

Marinites by the thousands know Bob by sight because he has held on to his Highway 101 landscape maintenance job between the Golden Gate Bridge and Marinwood and Tiburon over the past six years.

He says: "Weeding and brush-hidden litter clearing are my forte because I am close to the ground and don't have to stoop as far as tall people."

BOB BURGAN'S gutsy attitude toward his job is in character with his total outlook on life. He looks you right in the eye when he says:

"God put little people on earth for some reason. He would not have done this if there wasn't some calling for us."

And he adds:

"I can't believe that anybody, regardless of size, goes through life without problems. Other than being short, the little people lead lives very similar to average-sized persons. Our special hurdles are clothes and jobs.

"I used to buy clothes and then have them fitted. But today alteration cost is such that it pays to get made-to-order suits.

"I've had a job every since I finished Tamalpais High School because I found I liked the landscaping field and was willing to learn it in courses offered by College of Marin and the state highway department. I hope to eventually take the exam for foreman.

"But many little people have a hard time finding jobs. Those who can convince employers that they are just as capable as big people usually prove their abilities in a short time. We have people in all the different fields — machinists, teachers, accountants, engineers, and on and on.

"Contrary to popular speculation, only about 2 per cent of America's dwarfs are in show business."

WHEN WE HAD completed our interview and picture-taking at Bob Burgan's home in Corte Madera, we drove off with the feeling that we had just met a very fine clean-cut and sensible gentleman.

Decide what you'd like to "keep" or change. (You may want one exactly as is.) Work directly with our architects. Maybe another room? Special den? Recreation center? Studio? Larger? Smaller? You name it . . . we'll build it. You'll save thousands compared to conventional architect/builder methods – because you'll start with Boise Cascade's volume building techniques and basic plans already created. Imagine how costly it would be to spend hours with a private architect and work from scratch. Your Boise Cascade team provides a firm estimate and time schedule on the customized home you wish . . . built exactly as you want it for your family. No, you've never heard of this being done before by a volume builder with "volume savings." So hurry! See for yourself. NOW, at Peacock Crest.

AND SEE PARKWOOD ESTATES IN NOVATO: UNIT #2 NOW OPEN!

Since Opening Day, a couple of months back, Parkwood Estates has proved to be one of the most exciting new communities in all Marin County. On opening day, 19 homes were sold in four hours. Buyers are delighted with the superb pastoral setting adjacent to San Marin Park in Novato. The first unit is now sold out, according to Division Manager Kenneth Johnson, and Unit Two's 34 homes are now available. Prices start at a pleasant $28,750, for all-new 3 and 4 bedroom homes featuring Boise Cascade's Panovista kitchen loaded with built-ins.

The rolling-hills environment of Parkwood Estates is like a serene world apart . . . yet just minutes from Marin shopping and an easy commute for San Francisco commuters. Furnished models are open daily until dark. From Highway 101, north of central Novato, take San Marin Road west (left) to San Andreas. Then turn left to San Miguel, where a right turn brings you to Parkwood Estates models. "Public demand for our new homes is so great," said Johnson, "that we can only urge people who want to live comfortably in Marvelous Marin to come out early while selection is still broad."

BOB BURGAN SHOWS his guest, interviewer Gil Pearson, two of his many diverse interests. At left, he bangs out some rhythm rolls on the trap drums which he has played for a number of years with various Marin County combos and bands. At right, he displays prized horse figurines from his collection of some 50 pieces. He has been riding horses since boyhood.

Bob Burgan, One Of The Little People, Has Done All Right

Marinite Proves That Dwarfs Can Lead A Very Normal Life

may marry within the next two years"), this only child of normal-sized parents lives alone with his cat in a neatly kept three-bedroom house which contains all modern appliances. His interests are widespread.

He is a camera bug ("just bought a new Spotmatic Pentax"). He has played the drums in various combos throughout Marin ("the Cordlords, in particular"). He directs the handbell choir at the Mill Valley Methodist Church where he also sings bass for the regular Sunday choir.

IN ADDITION, Bob can drive a motorcycle. And he rides horseback and has the hobby of collecting horse figurines, plaques and paintings. A large-scale copy of the painting "Free As The Wind" is featured in his living room.

He drives himself to work in a 1967 Dodge equipped with one-foot extensions of the foot pedals ("they cost me $50"). He cooks, and he does his laundry in an upright washer-over-dryer which he can reach by standing on one of a number of his specially-built two-step step ladders. He uses others for shaving and doing the dishes.

And he dances at parties given by little people.

WHILE BOB has a quick wit ("we little ones try to think big"), he does not smile readily. Perhaps this is because he is obsessed with the drive to help other, less aggressive little people.

We soon found out that his only interest in a feature story about him is that his experiences might provide opportunity and inspiration for other little people in Marin to learn that they can broaden their lives if they will but reach out, as he has, and overcome timidity.

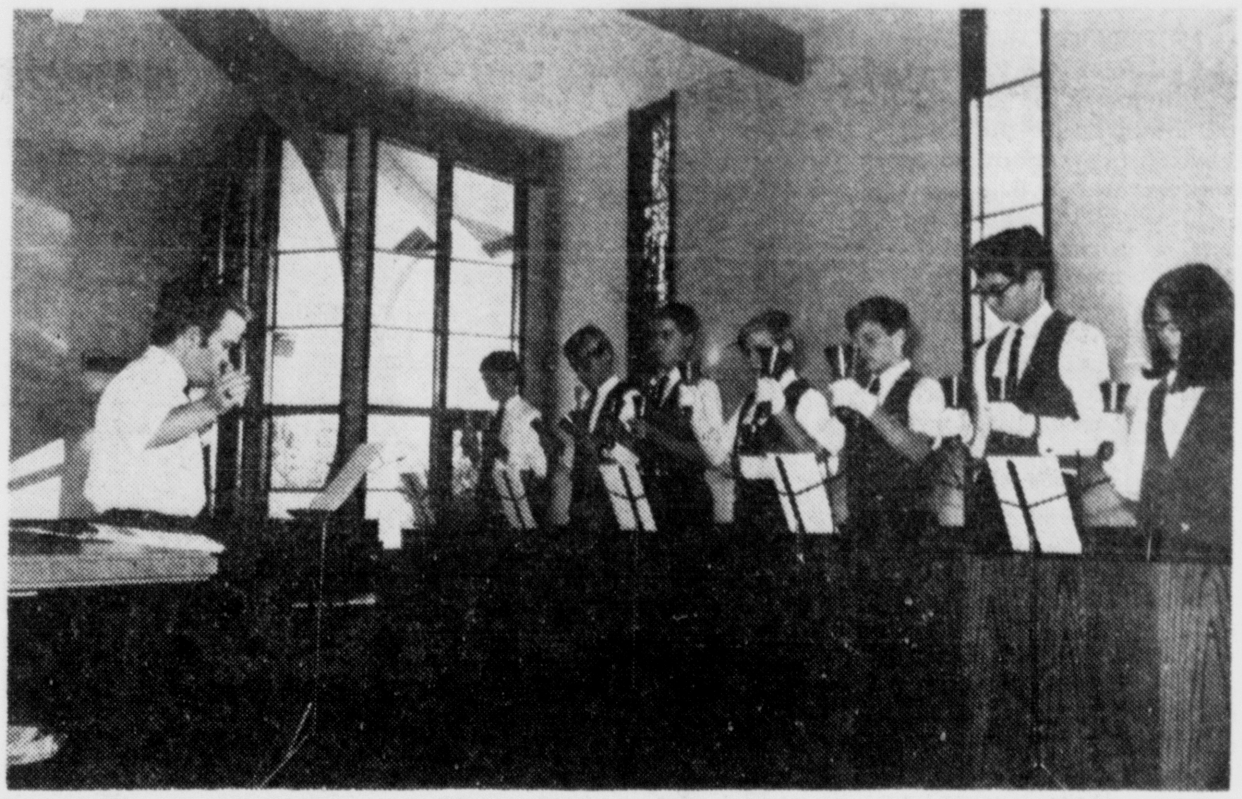
He says, "I want little folks under four feet 10 inches or their parents to write me at 629 Meadowsweet Drive in Corte Madera. I want to tell them of the many advantages they can enjoy by joining our national association, the Little People of America Inc.

"I, myself, delayed joining for many years because I felt I should try getting along in the world of tall people on my own hook. But that was a mistake. The association really does a lot of good psychologically and practically.

"FOR INSTANCE, there is Mrs. Harriet Stickney who is a member of our District 12 in San Francisco and who is in charge of the Parent-Auxiliary. This service helps parents who have dwarfs to help these youngsters solve their problems in getting along with regular-size children.

"For example, parents who have a little person and also children of normal size are advised to treat the little one exactly like the others and not to show any deference."

"In my own case," Bob recalls, "my parents would tell me to go and get my own chair rather than get it for me. But I must also add that their affection is something I'll always cherish.



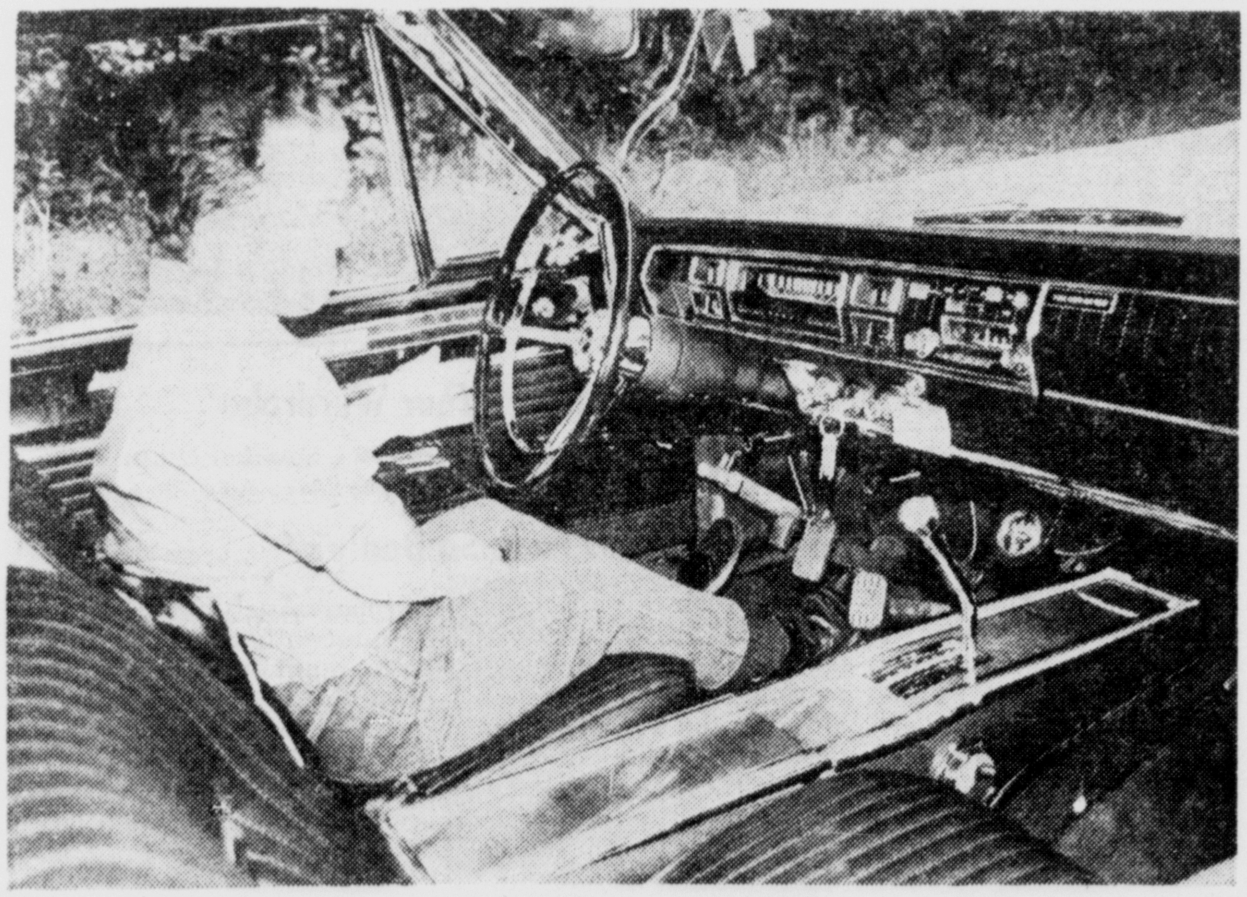
THE VERY busy Bob Burgan, at one of his several special interests and activities, directs the youthful handbell choir of Mill Valley's Methodist Church. He also sings bass with the church's voice choir.

"As a child I was annoyed by the pranks of the big kids, but as I grew older (if not up) I got so I just laughed it off and forgot it."

Bob East, another member of Little People Of America, makes automobile pedal extensions for the little people all around the nation.

NO REPORTER today could close out a story of this type without editorializing that the 850 dwarf members of Little People Of America Inc., one of America's most overlooked minorities, take a positive posture toward meeting and resolving their problems.

Bob Burgan is representative of that affirmative attitude.



THE 1967 DODGE automobile that Bob Burgan drives has been equipped with special one-foot extensions of the foot pedals so that they can be reached by the driver's short legs. The extensions were made by a friend.

Tips on Purchase and Home Care of Your Wardrobe

MARIN CLEANERS Phone 454-4792 — Member N.I.D. of San Rafael, Bel Aire & Fairfax

"What Made My Print Dress Fade So Badly?"

Your dress faded because of the manner in which the design was applied. Bright, colorful summer prints on cotton, rayon or polyester blend garments usually are pigment-printed and do not hold up under drycleaning. This is not true of all, but the majority of such suits, blouses, slacks and dresses are dyed by this more economical method and will not retain their brilliant colors when drycleaned. Many of these garments can be wet-cleaned satisfactorily.

According to the National Institute of Drycleaning Garment Analysis Laboratory, recently an unusually large number of pigment printed fabrics have been received for testing and all had a substantial loss of color. It is the method of applying the dye which is at fault.

New Beauty From Some Old Paintings

By SUZANNE D. STAMLER

Despite the agitation of young militants, art circles these days are more likely to think of the University of California in Berkeley in connection with restoration than revolution.

This is because of the efforts of two women, art conservators Margit B. Jensen of Fairfax and Doreen M. Vallis of San Francisco.

Decrepit and obscured paintings removed from the walls of Blake House, the university president's residence in Berkeley, during its renovation, were sent to the team of Vallis and Jensen in their San Francisco studio for restoration. The result: some masterpieces that had gone unrecognized or at least unappreciated.

ONE OF special interest is a Sir Peter Lee portrait of Nell Gwynne, first mistress of England's King Charles I, pictured in the role of St. Catherine martyred at the torture wheel.

During their restoration, the art expert noticed a crackling quality on the left side of the canvas that was not apparent elsewhere. Their curiosity aroused by this irregularity, they cautiously proceeded to clean that area until, to their delight, they disclosed a previously entirely hidden hand, resting on a torture wheel.

Mrs. Jensen suspects that the hand had been concealed purposely by a coat of dark paint.

"It is possible," she says wryly, "that the church didn't want a woman of Nell's reputation to portray a saint."

IN THEIR unusual profession of restoration and conservation of paintings, murals and interiors, the two women say, there are continuous surprises such as frequent uncovering of disguises.

A Marin attorney entrusted Mrs. Jensen with the restoration of a painting, and unexpectedly wound up with two paintings.

Rarely, the restorer says, does she find two paintings in one. But this time she did — oil on canvas glued to each side of a piece of cardboard. The lawyer agreed to the separation of the canvases and the relining of each with a resinous wax band on linen.

HE PLANS now to take the two paintings to England to establish their authenticity as possible masterpieces.

Asked about other highlights from her career as a conservator, Mrs. Jensen recalls when she and her partner, who hails from England, rescued a painting badly in disrepair from a basement of a private home during an auction in San Francisco.

"Actually I was there to bid for a chair," she relates. "But I spied this neglected painting, asked if it was to be auctioned, and was told it was worthless and would be discarded."

INSTEAD, SHE says, it turned out to be a masterpiece by Gustave Dore of the interior of St. Lorenz Cathedral in Nuremberg. "It is now on sale, and we have hopes it will be sold rewardingly."

Mrs. Jensen is also known as Margit Melbye, artist and designer. She is a descendant of Wilhem and Anton Melbye, two illustrious Danish marine painters.

At 18 she turned her talents to the exacting art of china painting, a pursuit that was fashionable among young Danish ladies in that day. She was to become chief designer for Lennox Chinaware, and one of the Castleton designers of a White House dinner service for President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

THE DISCIPLINE from the exacting art of china painting, she says, has served her in good stead in her art restoration work, particularly the "in-painting" or detailed touching up within the damaged areas, that must be done flawlessly, sometimes almost miraculously.

Mrs. Jensen received her training in restoration as an apprentice to a renowned German restorer before establishing her partnership in San Francisco with Miss Vallis. The latter had worked with Henry Rusk at the DeYoung Memorial Museum.

In addition to the restoration of paintings, Mrs. Jensen and Miss Vallis have collaborated in supervising the conservation of three conference rooms in the historic U.S. Customs House in San Francisco.

THE TWO congenial conservators occupy a spacious studio and gallery at 3615 Sacramento Street, San Francisco.

There in the midst of work tables, stretcher boards, wax heaters and assorted chemicals stands a most impressive piece of equipment they call "the hot table."

Used for the wax-resinous relining of paintings, it is electronic, hydraulic and vacuum in its operation.

Miss Vallis recalls that "Mr. Murray Pease, the late conservator of the Metropolitan Museum in New York, once remarked that if he could re-design his own 'hot table,' it would be planned so that it would heat up absolutely evenly over its entire surface, and would cool down quickly in the event of an emergency."

THE VALLIS-JENSEN hot table does just that, and much more under their expert supervision and operation.

Asked about the hazards that confront fine art and particularly paintings, Mrs. Jensen replies:

"Fire, flood, earthquake and explosion are all minor mishaps compared to the disastrous results inflicted by the do-it-yourselfers — the artists and the owners of art who try to improve upon the paintings without adequate professional training or equipment."

And her partner nods her wholehearted agreement.

The Colonel's Collection Of Americana

The newspaper advertisement extolls the virtues of 20,000 acres of bottom land for lease in parcels along the banks of the Ohio and Great Kanhawa rivers in Virginia.

The property is rich in soil, fowl and fish, potential buyers are assured by its surveyor.

But even if you find the described real estate appealing, you are a little late — nearly two centuries late — to make a deal, as indicated by the printed signature of the surveyor and developer.

THE NAME is that of George Washington, the most famous surveyor of them all. And the year was 1773.

The advertisement appeared in the Aug. 20, 1773, issue of the Maryland Journal and Baltimore Advertiser. And a well-preserved copy of the newspaper is one of the prized possessions of Col. Alan B. White, deputy commander, Sixth Region, Army Air Defense Command, at Marin's Fort Baker.

In part the advertisement that ran over the signature of the man who never told a lie and who was to become this country's first President promised prospective settlers that "the most excellent meadows" were, thanks to "the bountiful hand of nature ... almost fit for the scythe."

A SECOND item of Americana belonging to Colonel White is a May 17, 1837, copy of The Baltimore Sun.

Its pages would indicate that credibility gaps and urban disorders are not entirely new to America.

Concerning a report of the capture of a band of hostile Indians in Florida, the skeptical editor wrote:

"WHILE WE hope that this report may prove to be true, we must candidly confess that we doubt it. Osceola has been reported to have been captured so often and yet has not been caught, and the Florida war has been so often closed, and yet not closed at all, that one is obliged to exercise unusual credulity before he can believe one word of anything received in relation to Florida or the famous Indian chieftain."

And in the same paper, under the headline "Anticipated Disorders," it was noted:

"The laboring portion of the New York population is becoming dissatisfied, discontented, mad by the prospect before them."

THE REASON, the newspaper reported, was a bank failure where the laborers had deposited their hard-earned savings.

"The aspect of these men was menacing in the extreme," the story went on. "... their half-suppressed murmurs, and whispered execrations, but too well and too fearfully indicated the approach of one of those civil convulsions which spread deso-

THESE columns from the pages of the Aug. 20, 1773, issue of The Maryland Journal and Baltimore Advertiser belonging to Col. Alan B. White of Fort Baker bear the name of George Washington as surveyor and subdivider of a 20,000-acre parcel of rich Virginia bottom land. Less than two years in the offing was the outbreak of hostilities that were to become the American Revolutionary War and make Washington's name an immortal one in history.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 20, 1773. [VOL. I.]

To the PUBLIC.

THE great Difficulty and experience of Speedily obtaining a proper Aſſortment of Printing Materials, an inadequate Number of Subſcribers to defray the Charge of printing a weekly News-Paper, added to ſeveral unfortunate Events which have happened to me, have been the Reaſons why the MARYLAND JOURNAL and BALTIMORE ADVERTISER, ſo long expected, hath not before made its appearance. This, I flatter myſelf, will be conſidered an ample Apology, in the Minds of the Candid, for the long Delay in publiſhing it.— Many Gentlemen, however, encouraging me to hope for a conſiderable Addition to my Liſt of Subſcribers, I now venture to ſend the firſt Number abroad; and while I ſolicit the further Encouragement of the Public, I humbly beſpeak a candid Reception for this Beginning, which, I am ſenſible, must appear under many Diſadvantages, as I have not yet been able to eſtabliſh a ſpecial Poſt from this Place to Philadelphia, for the Purpoſe of bringing down, in due Seaſon, the lateſt Papers.

I was aware when it was firſt propoſed to me to undertake a News-Paper in this Town, that although it poſſeſſed many Advantages in

MY LORD,

THOUGH I preſume to addreſs myſelf to your Lordſhip on a ſubject in which you are unfortunately but too much intereſted, it is not my intention, by any means, to wound the ſenſibility of your temper, or to queſtion the benevolence of your heart. I am ſure you are a brave man, and I hear you are as good a man as any to be found among the youth of condition in this kingdom; yet, pardon me, my Lord, if I ſay that our youth of condition do not want advice upon any point ſo much as upon the point of honour, with which they fancy themſelves ſo intimately acquainted; and let me inform you, a father of the Church now begs your moſt serious attention, that, through your Lordſhip, he may communicate a few obſervations to the world, no leſs neceſſary to maintain the laws of his country than to enforce the commandments of his God.

Be not, however, terrified, my Lord, though an old man, and that man of ſome eccleſiaſtical conſequence too, breaks this abruptly on your retirement: He will talk to you as faſhionably as if he did not think religiouſly, and make (the better to anſwer his purpoſe) a ſerious queſtion in morals, an object of polite inveſtigation. To drop the third perſon, my Lord, I know experimentally what the paſſions are at your time of life; young men prefer any criminality with which meanneſs is not connected, to the ſlighteſt idea of diſhonour; they do not fear to commit a flagitious action ſo much as to be concerned in a fooliſh [illegible]; and there are particular crimes, ſuch as duelling, for instance, in which cuſtom has made it we may be ſuppoſed to poſſeſs a little share of underſtanding. Give me leave, therefore, to ask you ſeriouſly, whether any thing can be so abſurd as the faſhionable practice of duelling? We receive an affront, and we endanger our lives; we expoſe the long liſt of our friends to diſtreſs; we hazard all the glowing expectations of our tendereſt ſocial ties, all our deareſt proſpects in this world, and all our greateſt in the next, to—to do what? I bluſh, my Lord, at my own queſtion, puniſh some act of incivility that ſhould excite our contempt, or ſome diſreſpect which is wholly below our indignation. The man who is not ready to apologize for any offence he offers another does not deſerve to be conſidered as a gentleman; yet, ſuppoſing the caſe otherwiſe, the offence ought indeed to be deadly which induces us to take away a life. If it is of such magnitude as to require a bloody expiation, it should be left to the laws; and if it is not, we ſurely rebel against the majesty of our own hearts where we endeavor to wipe it away with blood.

In whatever light we look upon duelling, my Lord, I am perſuaded you will concur with me in thinking that it is founded no leſs in folly than in barbarity. Where we are even the victors, what is our triumph? A triumph over humanity, a triumph over juſtice, a triumph over our ſamilies, our country, and our God. If our reason, therefore, is not alarmed at the very dangers attending this horribly cuſtom, our pride should be rouſed [illegible] of weakness, to which it expoſes our characters. lation and terror through the moral world. It is scarcely possible that New York can escape the fury of her own population. We sincerely hope, however, that everything will pass off quietly."

And survive the crisis, New York did.

Colonel White, a native of Pennsylvania who makes his home at Fort Baker, says the two historic newspapers have been "in the family" for so long that no one is quite certain who first found them or when. But the discovery was made, he adds, in the bottom of a shoe box in which they had been serving as a lining.

FATHER'S DAY SPECIAL!

LA-Z-LOUNGER®
SIESTA!

Continental La-Z-Lounger by La-Z-Boy in Uniroyal Naugahyde®

$169.50
Easy Terms Available

Siesta, sir? Why not? It's a great Spanish habit and here's a chair specially made for snoozing, sprawling, just relaxing. It's by La-Z-Boy, and covered in Uniroyal Naugahyde, so stains just don't happen! Good-looking, too. Sleek continental styling, rich fruitwood trim, concealed ottoman. And built beautifully. So beautifully that La-Z-Boy guarantees its mechanism for the life of the chair. Need a siesta? You need a La-Z-Boy. At Young Bros., a complete selection in black, Ox-Blood or Tan, of course.

UNIROYAL Naugahyde vinyl fabric
®Naugahyde is Uniroyal's Registered Trade Mark for its Vinyl upholstery fabric.

The only medication that

Gets to a Major Cause of Hemorrhoids

Now! Most complete 3-way relief!

Important development: unlike every other hemorrhoid product, Counternoid™ works in 3 ways:
1. Lessens pain fast.
2. Coats, soothes and protects injured tissue.
3. Gets to a major cause of hemorrhoids: painful hard constipation.

In hospital X-ray tests, doctors have demonstrated that the exclusive Counternoid formulation with DSS30™ penetrates in minutes to the top of the rectal area to soften the stool and ease the bowel movement, to make natural healing possible.
Remember: Counternoid. For temporary relief of minor hemorrhoid troubles. The most complete 3-way relief you can get without a prescription or without surgery. At all drug counters.

THE CONTINUITY OF LIFE

If we Ourselves
Create our futures, in truth
Is it volitional?
Or do we unleash the force of "destiny"
Within us?
Is it then outside our control?

By accepting "destiny" as existent
We give it credence and value
And act upon it, Celeste.

Thus, we at once unleash ourselves to create our futures
According to the patterns of our inspiration.
And control becomes a constant process of decision-making.

When we begin to feel the continuity of life
Within us
And see it manifest
Without,
Is
To observe and identify God,
To find ourselves,
To be seriously happy,
To become free to do God's work,
To sing,
And dance
And laugh with the sun.

MILL VALLEY CELESTE SARLATTE

A TEACHER'S CONTEMPLATION

My words were wise, not always;
my manner, not always mild;
And now I gaze tall—
to what once was the child.

Oh, think on the day
you will look at the man;
And remember with awe
having touched the child's hand.

NOVATO GLORIA KNOEBEL TOVANI

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

TCHEREPNIN: Piano Concerti Nos. 2 and 5 — Alexander Tcherepnin, piano/Bavarian Radio Symphony Orchestra/Kubelik—DGG (Deutsche Grammophon) 139 379:

Russian composer Tcherepnin is one of the few composers still living who seem to span the musical style of the post-Romantic turn-of-the-century and the serialized music of today.

The Concerto No. 2 of 1923 makes use of a type of polyphony which he invented himself, based on a nine-note scale. The Oriental influences on the composer are here evident.

The Fifth Concerto comes from 1963 and is quite personal and unique-sounding in a rather traditional way. Its finale is especially brilliant, highlighting the still-considerable keyboard skills of its composer.

KARL HARTMANN: Symphonies Nos. 4 and 8 — Bavarian Radio Symphony Orchestra/Kubelik — DGG 139 359:

This is Hartmann's first entry in the record catalog in the U.S., except for an old mono disc on Capitol many years ago.

The composer died only in 1963, and some authorities feel he deserved the title "the last symphonist" more than either Bruckner or Mahler. His symphonies are grand structures which cover much of the same ground as those of Bruckner or Mahler, and in a considerably more abbreviated time-span.

No. 4 is for string orchestra, a form for which several 20th Century composers have been able to accomplish wonders. The Eighth is distinguished by a gorgeous slow movement — Hartmann was one of the great creators of adagios in this century. His love of Bach is also heard in his monumental formal structure and grasp of complex counterpoint.

It is difficult to praise too highly the consistently excellent sound quality of Deutsche Grammophon's pressings. They probably possess the best signal-to-noise ratio of any classical recordings, and without a doubt their quiet surfaces are bettered nowhere. If only U.S.-pressed LPs had this amount of craftsmanship and care invested in their manufacture! Some collectors have even begun ordering the European versions of albums recorded in the U.S. — paying a much higher price plus import duties and postage in order to bypass the seemingly increasing deterioration in U.S.-pressed LPs.

HANS WERNER HENZE: Muses of Sicily; Moralities — Soloists/The Dresden Kreuzchor/Dresden State Orchestra/Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra/Henze conducting — DGG 133 374:

Deutsche Grammophon's series of albums devoted to Germany's acclaimed young composer continues with these two vocal works.

The Muses are for chorus and orchestra and employ fragments from Virgil's "Ecologues."

Henze was turned on to the Rolling Stones shortly before composing this work, and while it is far from classical rock, it does turn to a more primitive and simpler type of structure than Henze's previous work. The circling around one tonal center and repetition bear some resemblance to the German primitivist, Carl Orff.

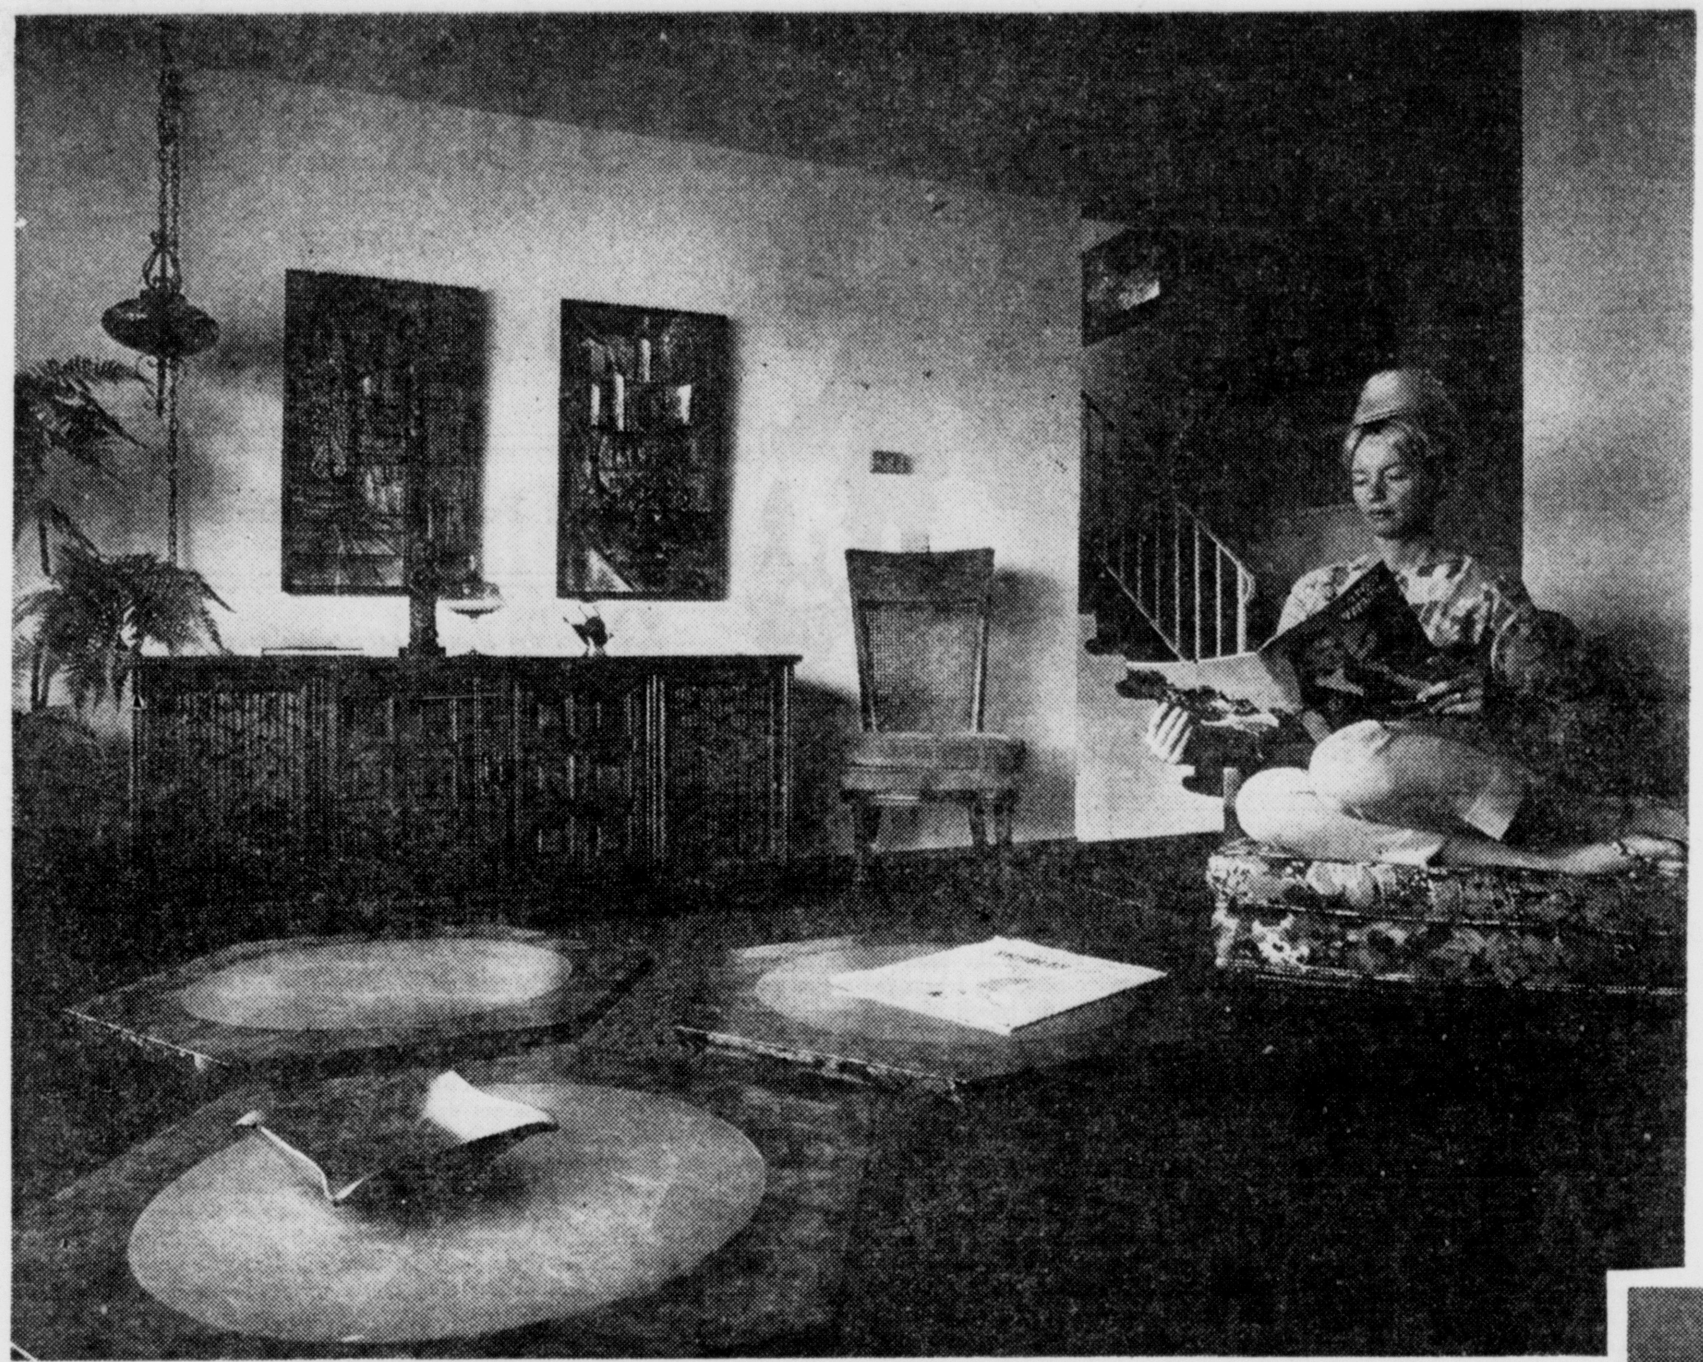
The Moralities were written also for performance by amateur or school ensembles; they may be staged like mini-operas or just performed in concert version. Their light-hearted sense of fun is apparent.

Translations of the German texts are, of course, included in the album.

PIANO MUSIC OF MENDELSSOHN: Anton Kuerti, piano — Monitor MCSC 2128:

Mendelssohn's piano music seems to be rather "out" at the moment, but one listen to these rich and stirring performances will make the listener wonder why this is so. The well-known "Rondo Capriccioso" opens the disc spectacularly, and besides the "Fantasy in F Sharp Minor," three of the Bach-influenced preludes and fugues are included in the LP.

Marin Living



MRS. JOHN WESTON relaxes in the comfortable living room of her San Rafael Park home. The room is on the middle of three levels. Arthur Wasser, of Wasser's Furniture Accents, San Anselmo, who did the interior design, combined contemporary and Mediterranean furnishings effectively, stressing heavy textures and unusual materials, in the attractive living room.

A Home With 3 Levels, Plus Elegance, Comfort

Television Personality John Weston And Family Enjoy New Residence

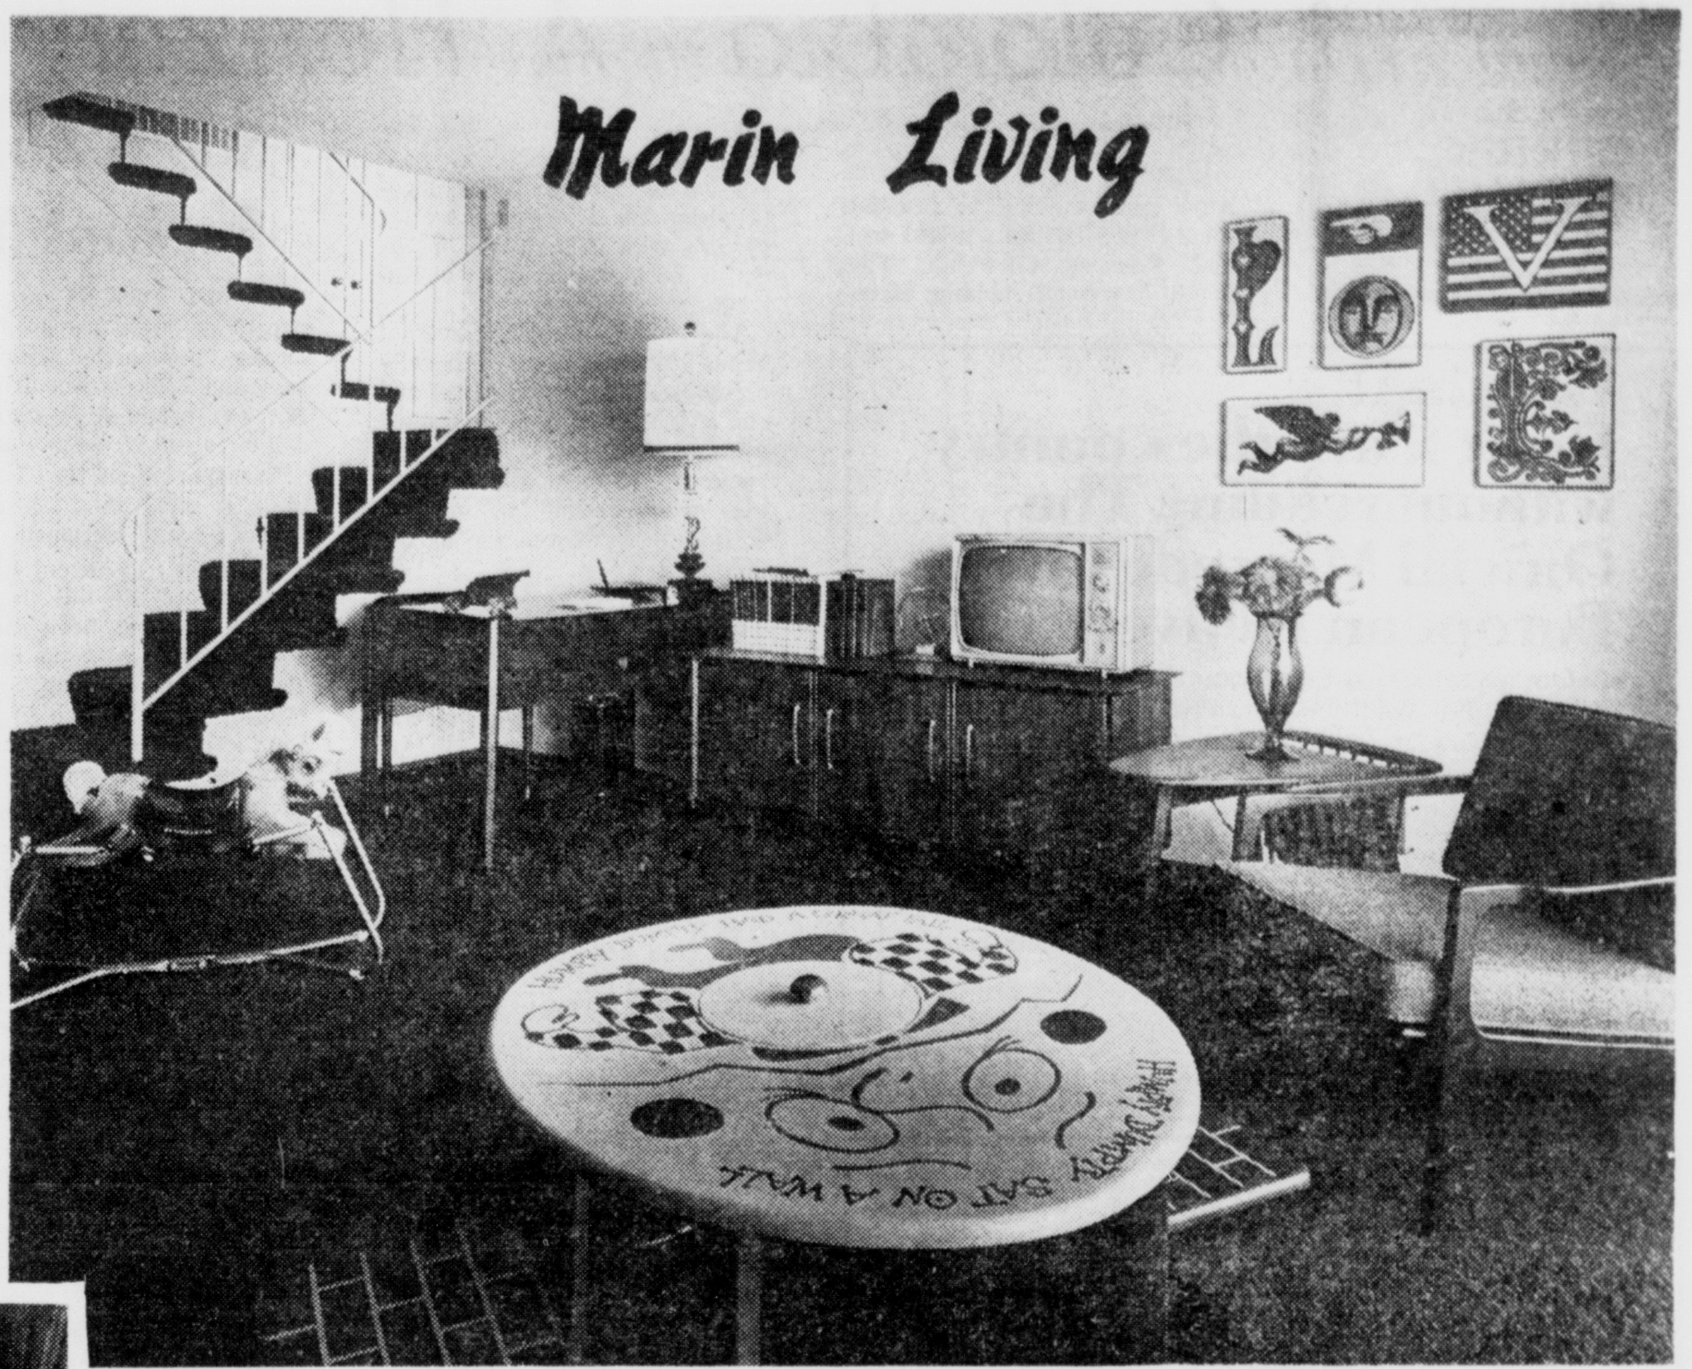
The new home of Mr. and Mrs. John Weston, in growing San Rafael Park overlooking the Marin Civic Center, makes excellent and unusual use of a tri-level arrangement, joined by a double stairway.

The living room is on the second level. It was furnished by Arthur Wasser of Wasser's Furniture Accents, San Anselmo, with a combination of contemporary and Mediterranean pieces. An antique copper coal hod sits on the hearth of the used brick fireplace beneath a Florentine leafed-branch of metal. Rare burl and gold leaf octagonal bunching tables are used before the sofa of green, deep gold and blue, colors that are repeated in floral chairs. A collection of old glass adds interest. Sliding doors separate a dining area from the living room.

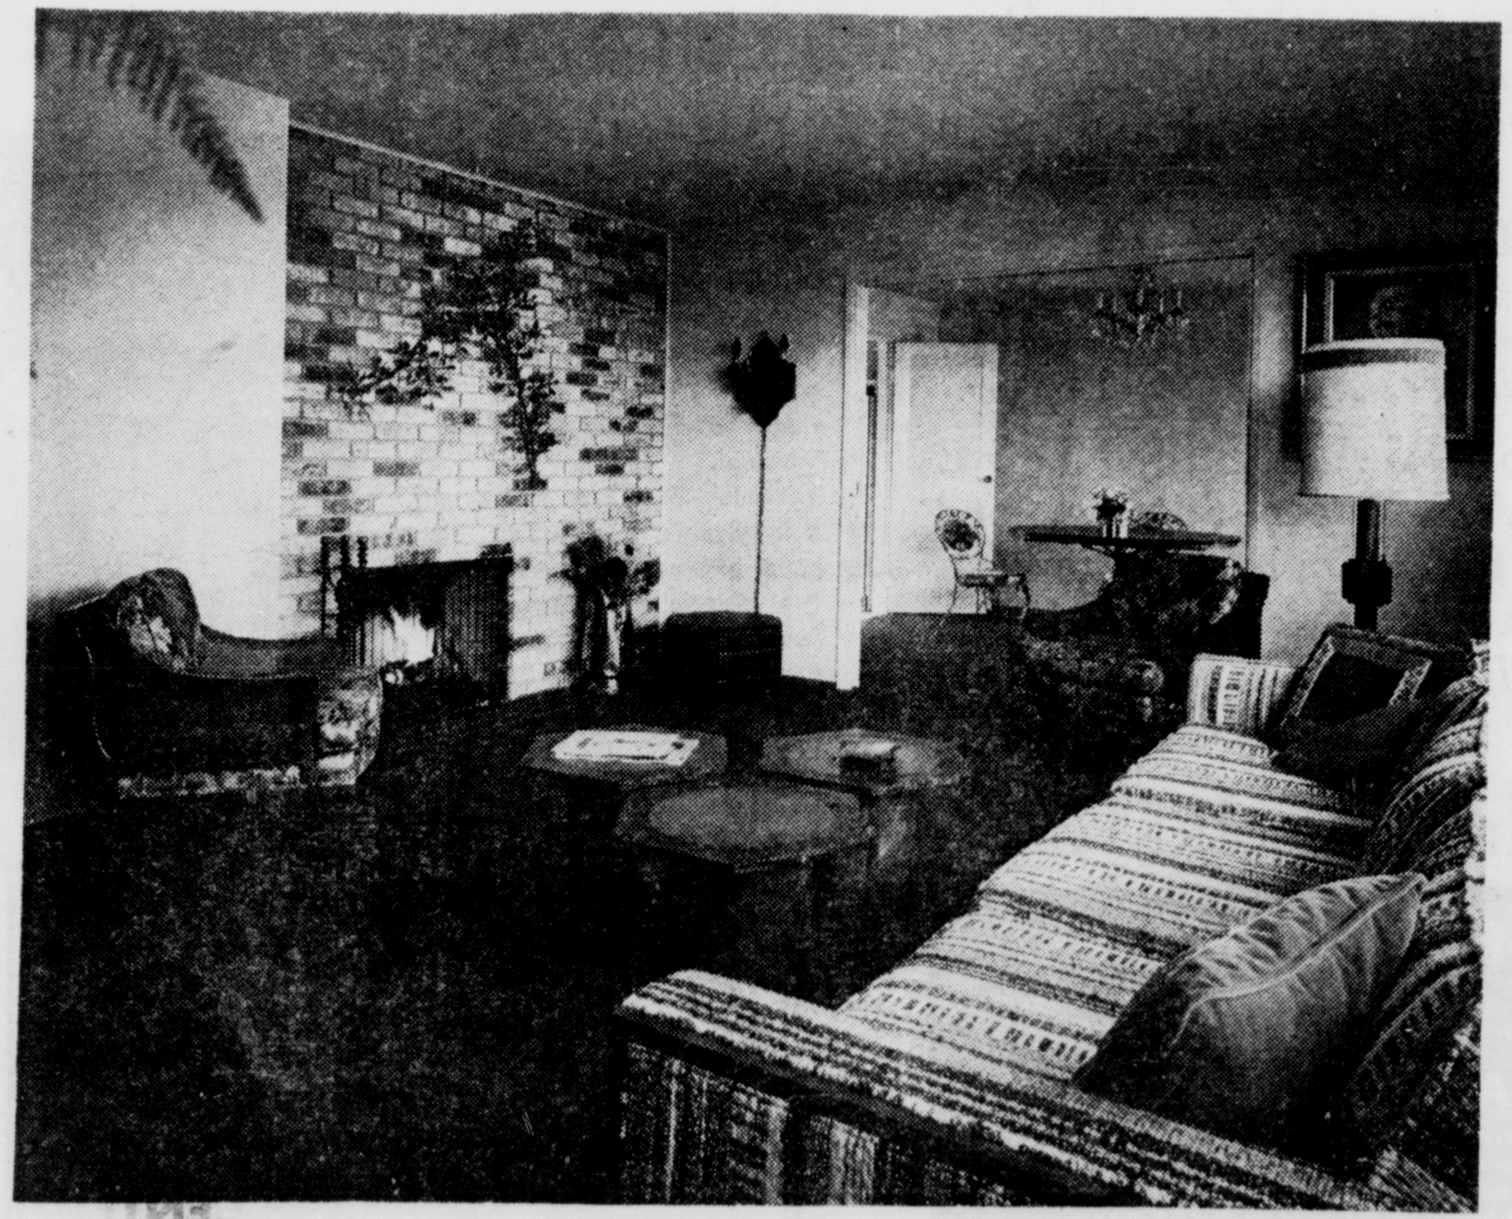
The lower level functions as a brightly-colored family room and office for Weston, the KPIX-TV (Channel 5) newscaster. The upper level contains the bedrooms.

And the connecting stairwell between the levels has a special function, too — as a gallery for the display of the Westons' collection of Walter and Margaret Keane paintings.

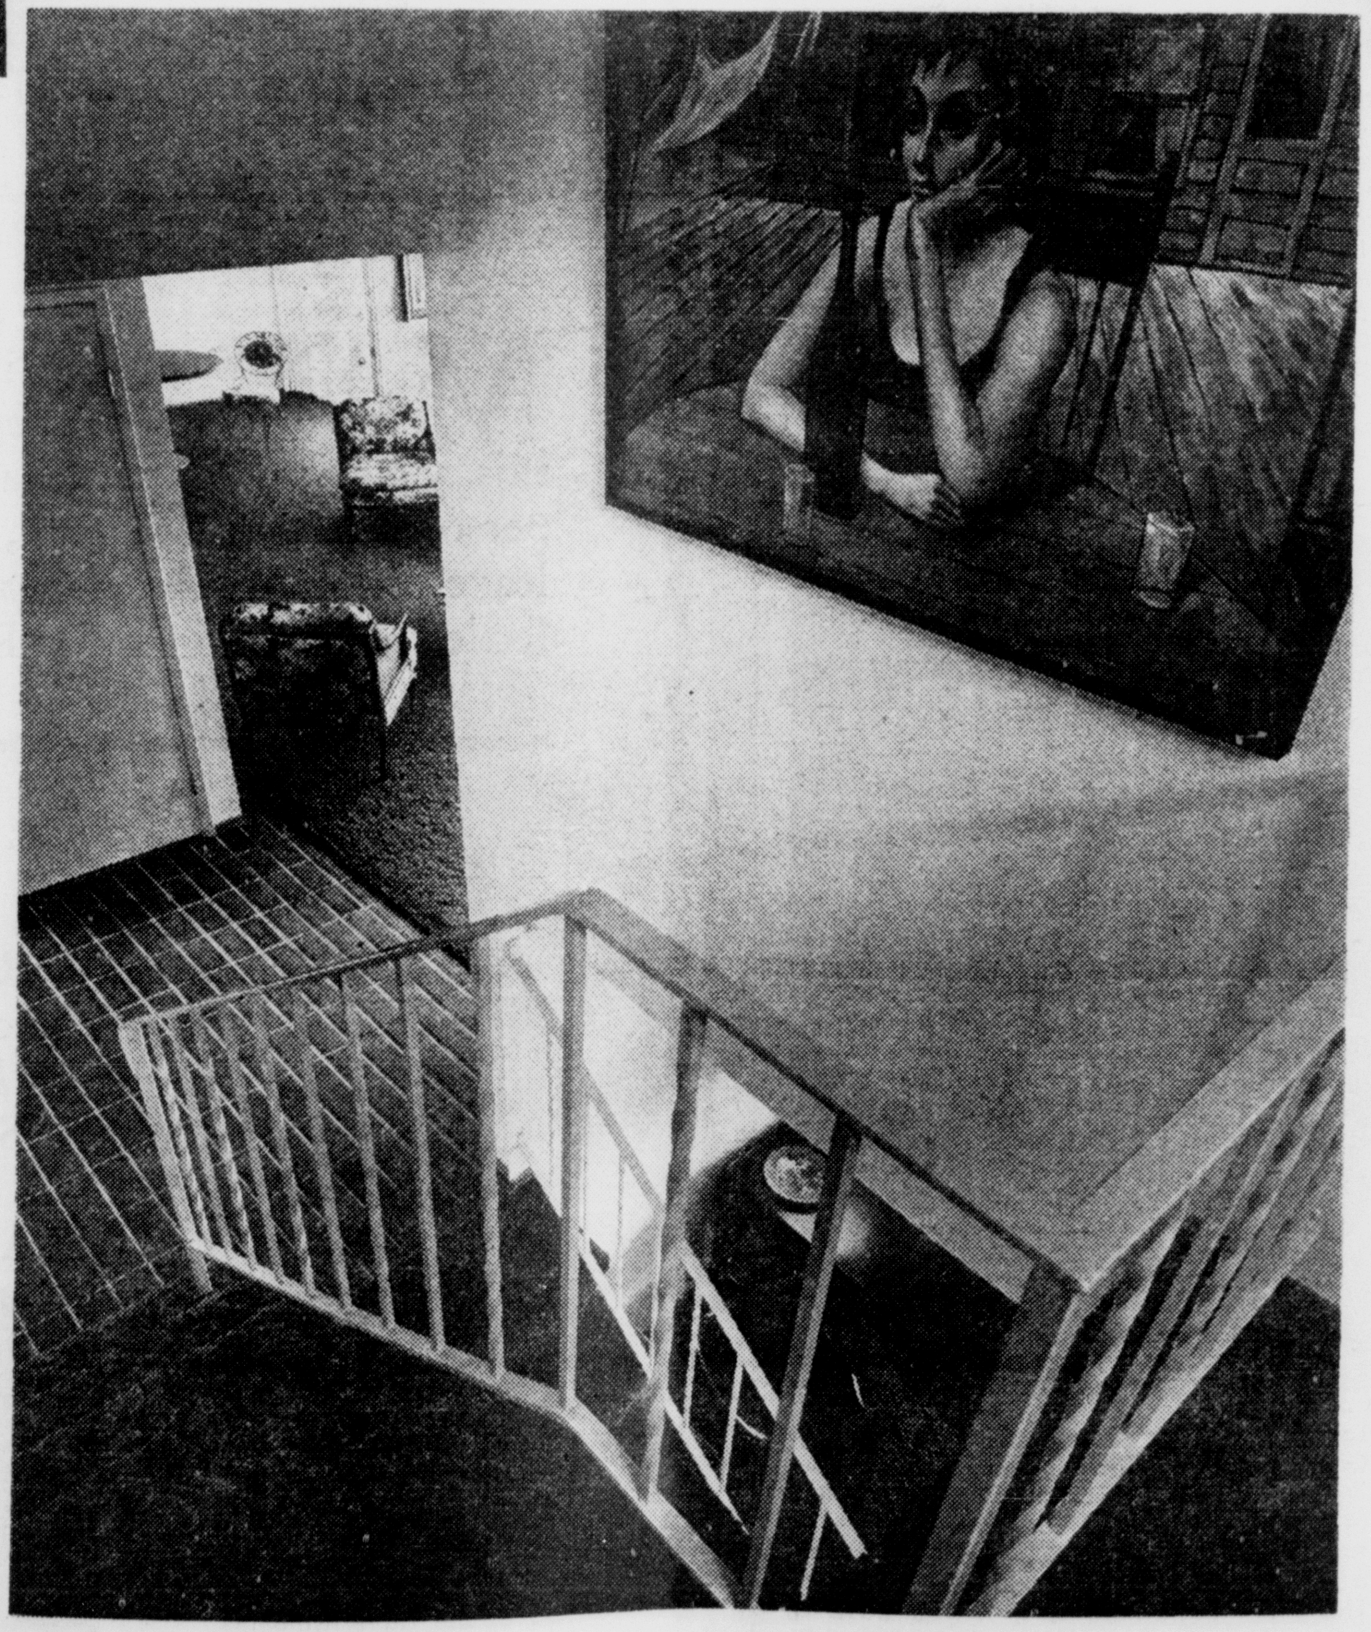
The decor worked out by Wasser and the Westons combines stylish elegance with comfortable hospitality. And the Westons are already feeling very much at home in their new residence.



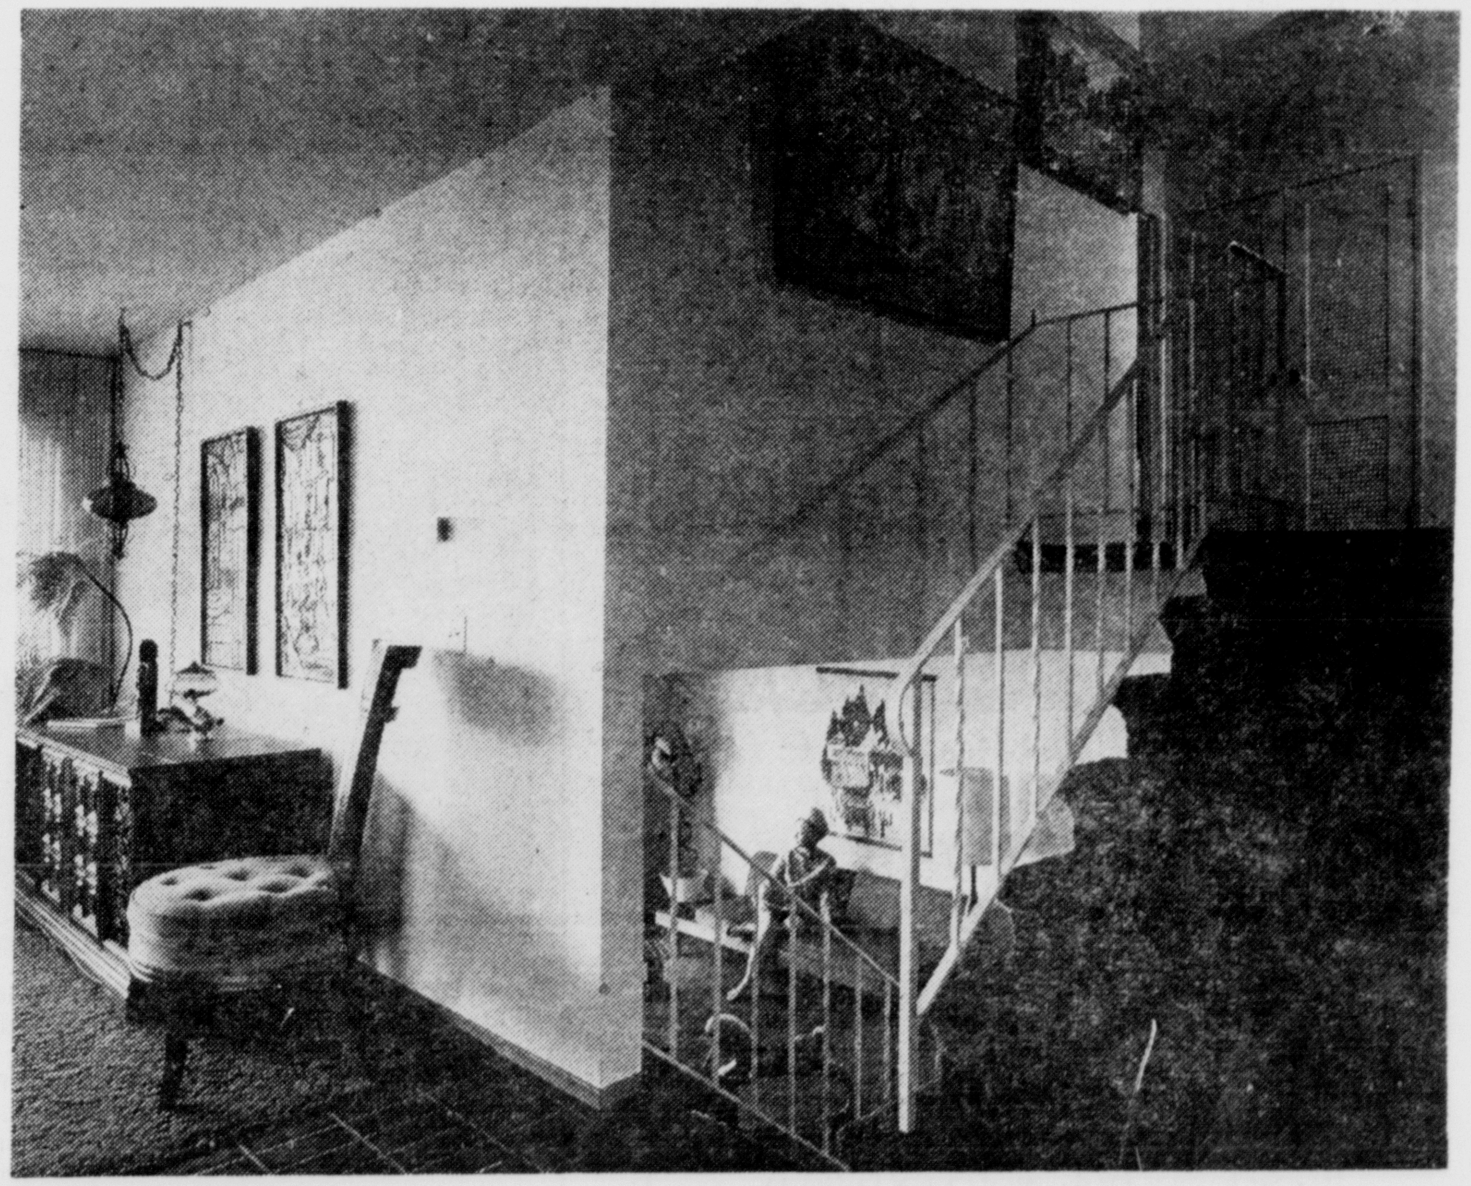
THE FAMILY ROOM of the John Weston residence is a gay and colorful place, dominated by bright reds and brilliant blues. It serves not only as a fun and relaxation spot for the family, but also as an office for Weston, the KPIX-TV newscaster heard daily on Channel 5. His desk can be seen at left next to the staircase. (Photos by Ken Molino)



ANOTHER VIEW of the John Weston living room features the recessed fireplace of used brick that lends a warm and hospitable touch to the room. The picture partially hidden by the lamp is a Keane portrait of Mrs. Weston, painted when she was a featured performer with the Ice Follies.



THE STAIRWELL and upper hall of the John Weston home serve as a gallery for the display of the Westons' collection of paintings by Walter and Margaret Keane and turn that area into one of the focal points of the house.



STANDING INSIDE the entry way to the Weston residence, photographer Ken Molino caught portions of all three levels of the home and its Arthur Wasser-designed decor. Mrs. Weston is seated in the family room on the bottom level. A portion of the second-level living room is seen at the left.

Colombia—A Horizon Widener

By MURRAY J. BROWN

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Americans seeking to broaden their travel horizons might well look towards Colombia. This South American republic is not only easy to get to, but the prices are right.

Take the capital city of Bogota whose top hotels compare favorably with those in major cities in the United States and Europe.

The deluxe Inter-Continental Hotel Tequendama, generally recognized as the city's best and one of the finest we have stayed at anywhere, offers single rooms from about $13 and doubles from around $19 a day, with bath or shower, during the off-season.

IN SEASON rates are only slightly higher.

For those on a tighter budget, there are several first class hotels with singles from as low as $6 and doubles from $10 daily.

All better class hotels operate on the European plan (no meals), but dining out is surprisingly inexpensive, too. We had a continental breakfast of juice, roll and coffee at the Tequendama for 85 cents and lunched on a thick steak with trimmings in its cafeteria for $1.85.

RESTAURANTS, coffee shops and cafeterias, featuring all types of cuisine — French, Italian, Spanish and native, among others—offer full meals for as low as $1, including Colombian coffee, naturally. Black coffee is usually served in small demitasse cups and called "tinto." But you can order U.S. style or cafe con leche, for which milk, usually boiled, will be provided.

Man-sized steaks, lobsters and other delicacies run to about $2 in the better restaurants and you can eat your fill of arroz con polla (rice and chicken) or paella Valenciana (seafood and rice) for about $1.50. There are several exceptional restaurants where prices are higher if you feel like splurging.

South American Republic Beckons Yankee Tourists

LIQUOR PRICES are comparatively high, except for the locally produced aguardiente, rum and beer, which are good. But top brand U.S. cigarettes sell for about 25 cents a pack.

Transportation, including taxis, is cheap. And taxi drivers do not have to be tipped.

Otherwise, the usual tip is 10 per cent of the bill if service charge has not been included. Porters get two pesos, or about 12 cents U.S., per bag, and it is customary to leave a few pesos for the chambermaid for longer than one-night stays.

INCIDENTALLY, don't panic if you get a bill for, say, $100. The dollar sign is used in Colombia for pesos — and $100 in pesos equals only about $6.20 in U.S. currency.

Many international airlines serve Colombia from the U.S.

We flew here non-stop from New York aboard an Avianca Boeing 720 intercontinental jetliner in about five and a half hours. Avianca also flies nonstop from Miami, about three and a half hours, and from U.S. West Coast cities via Mexico and Panama.

AVIANCA offers extra dividends for visitors in a special "Visit Colombia" fare. For $50, the tourist can buy 30 days of almost unlimited air travel on domestic routes with the sole proviso that any route may be flown but once. Avianca flies to more than 150 cities and communities in this republic on the northwestern tip of the South American continent.

For another $20, or a total of $70, the traveler can include a visit to Leticia, a jungle outpost in the Upper Amazon about four hours flying time south of Bogota, and go alligator hunting at night with Indian guides.

FOR THE same $70, he also can jet to the new resort island of San Andres in the Caribbean — about one hour 40 minutes north of Bogota — for water sports and free-port shopping.

Shoppers can find bargains in Bogota and other mainland cities. Excellent buys are available in emeralds — Colombia produces about 90 per cent of the world supply. But deal only with reliable firms or shops.

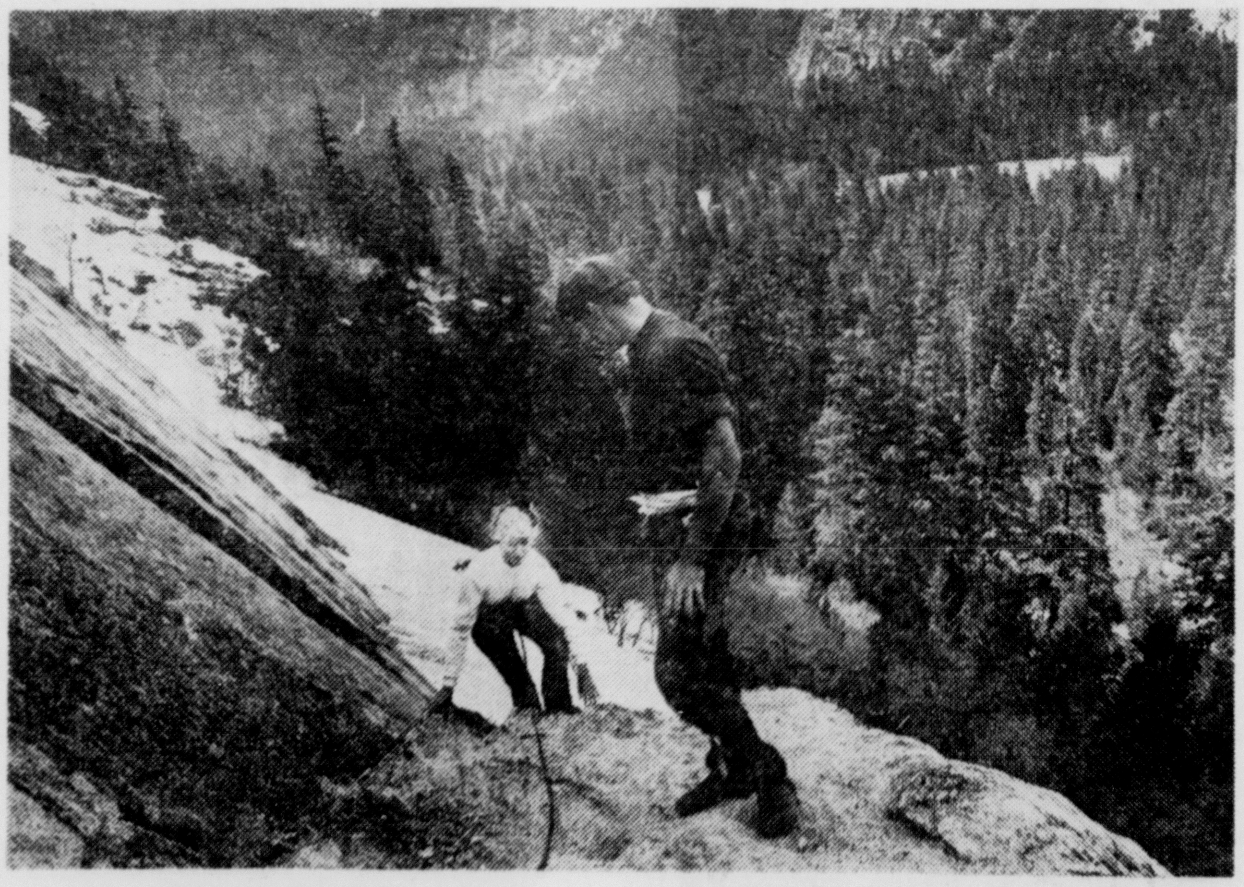
Other popular items include gold and silver jewelry, alligator skin bags, woolen ruanas, ponchos and other native handicrafts.

A RUANA could come in handy if you forget your top or rain coat. Temperatures in Bogota, about 9,000 feet up in the Andes, average 58 degrees throughout the year. Both men and women wear ruanas.

For last-minute purchases there are tax-free shops at the El Dorado International Airport. But hold on to 75 pesos ($4.50) for your departure tax.

To visit Colombia, American tourists need proof of citizenship (a passport is best), a tourist card (two passport pictures must be submitted) which can be obtained free of charge, a valid smallpox vaccination certificate and return or onward passage ticket.

For additional information or free booklets, you can write to Avianca, 6 West 49th Street, New York, N.Y., 10020.



A NEW ATTRACTION at Yosemite National Park is the Yosemite Mountaineering School and Guide Service, operated by Yosemite Park and Curry Co. with National Park Service approval, and with veteran climber Wayne Merry as director. The new school is functioning from the Yosemite Lodge Sports Shop, but will move for the summer to the higher Tuolumne Meadows Lodge, returning to the valley in the fall. Courses offered include basic rock-climbing, intermediate rock-climbing, advanced rock-climbing, guided climbs and climbing tours. Says Merry: "You don't have to be a Paul Bunyan to be a mountain climber. The main ingredient is that you have a desire for a new experience unattainable in any other sport."

What To Do In Iceland?

You Can Stoke A Geyser Or Ogle The Blondes

Is there anything to do in Iceland?

Flense a whale! Stoke a geyser! Take a cross-country pony trek!

What else?

Climb a glacier! Cross the Arctic Circle! Drink "Black Death!" Fly over the world's newest volcanic island! Fish crystal streams and lakes for trout and salmon

Want more?

Swim with the president! Scale a sheer cliff for birds' eggs! Try a sauna bath! Play golf on an 18-hole volcanic lava course! Ogle the world's prettiest girls — tall, long-legged, mini-skirted blondes

Is that it?

Glide in the air! Descend into a volcanic crater! Pick bananas! Photograph the midnight sun! Stalk the rare Icelandic facon!

WHAT ABOUT social, cultural and culinary activities?

Swing at lively nightclubs! Eat Chinese food! Taste shark meat! Tour impressive museums and art galleries! Rhapsodize to a symphony led by an Israeli or Italian guest conductor! Enter the hallowed halls where the world's oldest parliament is in session!

The question really is not what you can do in Iceland, but what Iceland can do for you. There's a lot more, but why bother with details about 60-pound codfish, or visiting weird moon-like crater landscape where U.S. astronauts have trained.

IF YOU LIKE, skip any or all of these exciting attractions. There's incentive enough to go to Iceland on the simple basis that you won't have to tip your cab driver — or anyone else for that matter. There's no tipping in Iceland

Many of the 13,191 American tourists who visited Iceland last year will tell you that they "didn't pay a cent extra to get there," even though the island nation is 2,675 miles from New York. This is because they were passengers of Icelandic Airlines which permits stop-over in Iceland at no added air fare for travelers en route to the British Isles and mainland Europe.

First-time visitors are surprised to learn that the Kentucky-sized island sits right in the middle of the Gulf Stream and has a mild climate, despite its northern location. Temperatures in the lowlands average about 30 degrees in January, the coldest month. This is warmer than January in such cities as Boston, Chicago and Spokane.

Today, Iceland is populated largely by multi-colored sheep (they outnumber people four to one), many shaggy-maned little horses (the famed Icelandic "pony"), and some 200,000 descendants of Viking settlers and the comely lasses they kidnaped in raids along the Irish and Scottish coasts 1,000 years ago.

INDIVIDUALISTIC and rugged as their land, Icelanders nevertheless have built a dynamic welfare state in which they enjoy one of the highest standards of living in the world — spending more of their per capita income on education, health, cultural projects and other public works than any other people. Yet private industry thrives.

Also, on a per capita basis, play more, catch more fish, and are near the top of the list in number of telephones, cars and other modern amenities.

The island's per capita gross national product of $2,470 in 1965 topped such wealthy countries as the United Kingdom, West Germany and Denmark!

MORE THAN half the people live in or near the capital city of Reykjavik, the leading seaport and center of political, cultural and social activities. Attractions and facilities of the capital include the government buildings, University of Iceland, eight museums and art galleries, the National Theater and Symphony Orchestra, the Reykjavik City Theater, sports stadium, luxury hotels, nightclubs, restaurants, cinemas, modern department stores and quaint shops.

The two largest hotels, the 216-bed Loftleidir (opened 1966) and the 155-bed Saga (1962) share the distinction of being the northernmost luxury resorts in the world. Each has nightclubs, several cocktail bars and restaurants. All rooms in both have private bath or shower, telephone, artistic decor and other amenities. Both have Finnish-style sauna baths, and the Loftleidir has an indoor pool heated by hot spring water.

NIGHT LIFE moves at a frenzied pace in Reykjavik during summer months. There are more than a dozen night spots — and when they close, residents crowd the streets, under the midnight sun, walking or driving to the many all-night parties in progress at private homes.

The major clubs offer big-name international entertainment. Bands are lively, usually with the latest rock and mod beat.

Icelanders enjoy dining, drinking, dancing and dressing in style. When they speak about "Black Death," they're referring to the local, appropriately named, aquavitae.

THE DUTY-FREE store at Keflavik Airport offers a wide variety of imported liquors, perfumes, cameras and other goods at bargain prices. Best buys in local products include fluffy sheepskin rugs, $10 to $14; pony skins, $23 to $35 (extra large); handmade Icelandic wool sweaters, $12 for a pullover, $14 for a woman's cardigan, $15 for a man's cardigan; machine-made Icelandic sweaters, $10; silver filigree bracelets or earrings, $4 to $6; Icelandic wool shawls, $8.

Swimming is the most popular sport, enjoyed year-round in open air pools heated by natural hot springs. President Asgeir Asgeirsson of Iceland usually takes a dip every morning at one of the public pools in Reykjavik.

Gliding is popular (about $3 for 15 minutes) at a small airport near Reykjavik. You can golf at the capital's volcanic-strewn 18-hole course (under the midnight sun, if you desire night golf.)

PONY TREKKING is a favorite with visitors and residents. Ride for an hour ($3) or cross-country over glaciers and lava fields for a week ($12). Icelandic ponies have an easy, no bounce, "dog-like" gait which even novice riders can master in a matter of minutes.

Iceland's cold streams and lakes abound in brown trout (up to 26 pounds), char, salmon and other game species. The best streams, especially for salmon, are private, so arrangements for angling should be made beforehand through travel agents.

Fine sea angling (giant cod, ling, haddock, etc.) can be arranged by the Reykjavik Sea Anglers Club.

Hiking and mountain-climbing are popular, with several organized tours of three to 13 days.

WINTER SPORTS such as skiing or ice-skating are not always possible at Reykjavik because of the mild climate. However, there's a good ski hotel at Akureyi, third largest city in the country and main center in the north.

Sightseeing attractions include the original Great Geysir (for which all other spouting springs in the world were named). Geysir is getting old, but occasionally can be "stoked" into action by dropping soap flakes into its gaping mouth.

There are literally thousands of other geysers, boiling mudholes, steaming sulfur mountains and some of the world's largest waterfalls. These are fed by seven glaciers. Vatnajokull is larger than Rhode Island and Delaware combined.

YOU CAN FLY abut 70 miles south of Reykjavik and view the amazing island of Surtsey. Now tranquil and serene in the ocean ten miles from Iceland's coast, Surtsey rose from the sea in 1963 in a cataclysmic eruption that sent clouds of lava and steam five miles high in the sky. Surtsey now is more than a square mile in size; permanent and lava-covered — the newest island on earth!

Americans can remain in Iceland for up to three months without a visa. A passport is all that is needed.

BILLED AS THE "oldest railroad west of the Rockies," the 115-year-old Arcata and Mad River ("Annie and Mary") Railroad is running a restored 50-ton steam locomotive and four bright red passenger coaches on an 11-mile round-trip route out of its Blue Lake Depot near Eureka on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. The train leaves the depot at 1:30 p.m. and again at 3 p.m. Round trip fare is $2.50 for adults, $1.75 for children under 14. The railroad is owned by the Simpson Timber Co. and is a common carrier serving 11 lumber mills in the lower Mad River Valley. Says John W. Thompson, general superintendent, of his seven-and-a-half-mile-of-track line: "We are not as long as a lot of railroads, but we are just as wide as any of them."

A Trite, Tedious Effort

CHUCK by Carl Sterland; Doubleday, 181 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Suzanne D. Stamler.

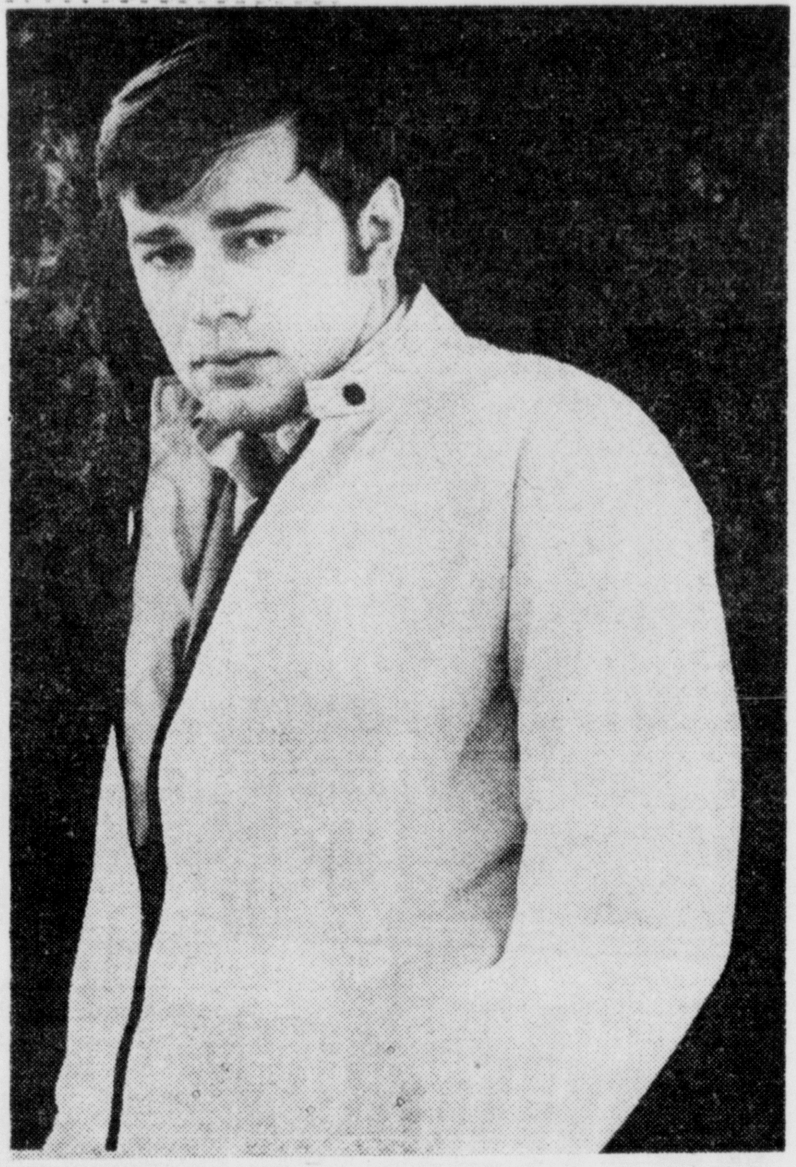
Triteness is exceeded only by tedium in a poorly-tailored yarn that swings from contrived vulgarity to mushy melodrama.

The pseudonymonous author's autobiography opens as he is fading into 40 in Cleveland's upper suburbia with a common malaise — ennui — that comes from a so-so marriage, superficial friends, three normally demanding creature-comfort-oriented children and a middling career as a freelance writer. Faltering in this fashion, the writer falls upon a seed of a former passion—his illegitimate 21-year-old son, Chuck, whose life he feels obliged to save from a bleeding ulcer and heroin-soaked-bitch.

His monthly jaunts to Los Angeles, where Chuck is hacking cabs, give way to pot-smoking forays (son turning on dad), man-to-man soirees in Mexican bordellos, smuggling "horse" across the border for "The Bitch," an older woman who is using Chuck as a runner and a stud, while father and son swap pasts too identical to be believable.

Each man trapped in his own unfulfilled existence establishes a band of affection beyond any thing he has ever known.

While dad is rediscovering his intensity and recapturing his fading youth through his escapades and all-night bull sessions with his son, Chuck confesses his love and admiration for his father whom he claims to have seen in a psychedelic flash of insight. "I'm only telling you what I saw, Carl. You were there. You will be there. I don't know what's going on between us, but there's more to come. I'm beginning to think I'll be okay, because of you in a way. I guess you've got to love something before it turns out right."



THE PHOTOGRAPH is from the jacket of "Chuck" by Carl Sterland, a pseudonym, about the new relationship of a father to his illegitimate son.

To confirm this, Chuck's ulcer too rapidly heals and incidentally Chuck coincidentally has talent — and not just a little. He wants to be a Hollywood actor. His father arranges tests for him and is told that his son will one day be a star. He wants to write and our rescuer romps with Chuck through Europe on assignment, while taking literary criticism from him from time to time. Chuck seems to have a knack for hacking away at professional writers' hackneyed phrases — thus giving dad greater insight into his own medium and even greater admiration for his son.

All of which proves that there are ways of closing the generation gap by opening ourselves up to each other, but there must be better ways to write about it and possibly wiser ways to do it.

Mill Valley Poet Has Fun With The Foibles Of Society

LECHEROUS, LICENTIOUS, LASCIVIOUS LYRICS IS NOT THE TITLE OF THIS BOOK. THE ACTUAL TITLE IS THE VIOLENT VIOLET by John Milton Hagen; A. S. Barnes, 104 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Readers of the Independent-Journal are familiar with the pithy and witty two-line and four-line verse of Mill Valley's John Milton Hagen from the I-J's "What Our Readers Say" column and from the Marin Magazine's "Poet's Corner." A good many of them have chuckled as well over his satirical collection published under the title "The Shrewd Nude."

He has followed that success with another book of typical Hagen verse, and this time he begins poking fun at our foibles right from the outset with a title that spoofs the modern literary trend toward pornography.

Inside, Hagen has his fun with hippies, De Gaulle, the pharmacist, politicians, Mother Goose, the bus company and a wide diversity of other targets.

A few Hagenisms from "Lecherous, Licentious . . .":

"Beware of the barbiturate—
You may become habituate!"

"Do you care who's Miss Universe? We don't — hence this puny verse."

"Youth more evil today is myth — They've merely more tools to do it with."

And: "Jack and Jill once bought a pill; Like 'twas no moral question, For, (in big print) 'twas SODA MINT, 'cause Jill had indigestion."

Hagen obviously had a picnic putting together this book, and his readers are not long in getting into the spirit with him. As Erskine Caldwell says in the brief introductory note he has written for "Lecherous, Licentious. . .":

"The world is in dire need of verse and verses the way John Milton Hagen does it and them."

Neglected Novel

THE TREMOR OF FORGERY by Patricia Highsmith; Doubleday, 254 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

This novel by a young American now living in France should be receiving greater attention and more praise than it has been accorded.

An unpretentious but splendidly told tale, it deals with an American writer in Tunisia attempting to work and to reestablish his identity.

What makes the novel so enjoyable is Miss Highsmith's fine feeling for characterization. Every member of her cast in individualistic and interesting. Furthermore, she has a gift for capturing the flavor of a culture — in this case Arabic — without sentimentality but nonetheless sympathetically.

That Howard Ingham does eventually arrive at new values and goals is both satisfying and acceptable to the reader, for Miss Highsmith has laid her foundation well [illegible]

New Nabokov Novel Fitting Climax To Magnificent Career

ADA by Vladimir Nabokov; McGraw-Hill, 589 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

To celebrate his 70th birthday, Nabokov has published what, when the dust settles, might well be seen as a masterpiece on the massive scale of a "Ulysses" or a "Remembrance of Times Past."

An erotic tour de force, it is also a mighty exploration of the interaction of time and love, and a joyous illumination of life and literature.

For this epic, Nabokov has invented his own world, or rather twin worlds: "Anti-Terra" which in many ways resembles the late 19th Century European milieu and "Terra" whose debatable existence is clearest to those whose minds are most unstable. It is a land that bears a striking resemblance to 20th Century America.

This superbly Nabokovian device gives the author access to two times, as it were. Thus one moment the scene is all 19th Century Russian country house — governesses, liveried picnics, duels and gigs; without losing a step on the next page the characters may be carrying on in a crease of "Terra" time, with bikini-coke-Hollywood swimming pool trappings.

The heart of "Ada" is Ardis Hall, the Veen family home ("ardis" in Greek is the point of the arrow, "the point of time"), and most of the first half of the book is devoted to the launching of the affair there between 14-year-old Van Veen, who is to become a renowned psychologist-philosopher of the nature of time, and what the family tree shows to be his first cousin, Ada, a nymphet of 12.

However it becomes evident (after a while, these introductory chapters are heavy going) that the relationship between the two children is far closer. They are in fact full sister and brother, and the account of their nevertheless idyllic summer is a triumphant celebration of sexual love on a scale rarely, if ever, achieved in print: for when it comes to evocating the heat and passion of a physical encounter (and just about every other kind of encounter, as well) Nabokov, operating on a level far above raw four-letter banalities, has the field all to himself.

Ada's and Van's lifelong love cultimates with their collaborating, in their extreme old age, on this book of memoirs. (Throughout their running comments and marginal notes are generously included.) And thus at the end we are again at the beginning of time, and love, and the vital communion between them that is the backbone of the novel.

This last section also includes a report by Van, now 97, on the vicissitudes of old age, one of the most poignant and cuttingly witty accounts of that state offered in all literature.

For a good many years to come, one would guess, "Ada" will be read for many reasons, not all concerned with Veen's philosophy of time-love. It will be read for the sheer delight of the grand-scale, full-passioned (incestuous) love affair, and for the masterly opulence of the sexual passages. One would further guess that more than one PhD candidate in English will find his dissertation in the endless wealth of literary tributes and/or parodies, puns, conundrums, myths and general erudite fun (some of it at the expense of his fellow writers).

One is tempted to say that Nabokov's material is as loaded as that of Joyce.

Certainly his grand theme, the balance of time and love, is worthy of his myriad talents. "Ada" is a staggering achievement, and as such, a fitting climax to the magnificent body of work he has produced.

An Elector Raps America's Outmoded Election System

PRESIDENTIAL LOTTERY by James A. Michener; Random House, 240 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Novelist James Michener was a presidential elector from Pennsylvania. That experience confirmed and reinforced his disgust with the outmoded and unreliable "electoral college" system and resulted in his book, "Presidential Lottery."

The system by which faceless men — mostly unknown to the voters — are placed in a position to negate the popular will in presidential elections has put American democracy in trouble in the past.

As Michener points out, the electors are not required by law to vote for the presidential candidates to whom they are pledged on the ballot [illegible] and some of them sometimes have not done so. In a close election, deals to switch electors' votes are possible; they were talked of when it was thought that neither Nixon nor Humphrey might get a majority of the electoral vote last year.

Michener prefers a reform that would retain the apportionment of electoral votes to the states, but cast them automatically for whichever candidate won a plurality in each state. He would, however, support either the direct election of the President, now under consideration in Congress, or a system of apportioning electoral votes by congressional districts.

Anyone who regards retention or abolition of the electoral college as a more-or-less academic matter will get an eye-opener from "Presidential Lottery."

Some Light Reading To While Away The Warm-Weather Days

A FARMHOUSE IN PROVENCE by Mary Roblee Henry; Knopf, 196 pages, $5.95.

THE SINO-VARIANT by Allison Ind; McKay, 306 pages, $5.95.

THE MAN ON THE RAFFLES VERANDAH by Lydia Kirk; Doubleday, 184 pages, $4.95.

ANYTIME, ANYWHERE by Martin Caidin; Dutton, 248 pages, $5.95.

This week, four books strictly for light, non-serious summer reading:

"A FARMHOUSE in Provence" is Vogue editor Mary Roblee Henry's account of how she and her diplomat husband acquired a historic but dilapidated farmhouse in France's wine country and transformed it into a refuge where they can enjoy a far different kind of life from what they had been accustomed to as city-dwellers.

Mrs. Henry writes very well, with a descriptive style that is especially well suited to this kind of material and reflecting her years as a writer of travel articles for her magazine. Her story of how La Serafine was found on a hillside in the Vaucluse and of how it was rehabilitated and given a new life is warmly humorous, and highly entertaining.

One flinches at what seems the vast amounts of money the Henrys have poured into their project. Few of us could afford it. But in this age of hustle and bustle and continuous pressure, one can understand their dedication to and affection for their quiet retreat.

Mrs. Henry offers us, too, some fine insight into the character of the Provencaux. They are individualists well worth your acquaintance. On the other hand, personally, we felt Mrs. Henry to be burdened with one of the most annoying fathers-in-law we ever encountered, although she obviously loves the old windbag and nuisance.

Mrs. Henry avoids cuteness and over-sentimentality, yet succeeds in capturing the charm and flavor of a region and its distinctive culture. Those of us who cannot create La Serafines of our own can share, through her book, at least some of the rewards and delights.

"THE SINO-Variant" is a spy thriller by Col. Allison Ind, U. S. Army retired, who has drawn upon his own background as a biochemist and as an intelligence officer, agent and technician.

Colonel Ind has written two well-regarded fact books on espionage, but, for us, his fiction is not quite so successful.

His latest novel strikes this reader as a curious blending of the old Fu Manchu school of thrillers, with its sinister yellow peril, and the newer James Bond school, with its gimmicks and its pretty girls.

His hero, Cornelius Craig, is, like the author, a retired U.S. intelligence agent living in England. He is somewhere between the flamboyant Bond and the LeCarre-Deighton non-hero, not as flashy as the former, less nondescript than the latter.

Craig believes his old career is behind him. But scattered outbreaks of meningitis around the globe pose the possibility of a new kind of threat to the West. Craig, with special training in microbiology, is drawn inevitably into the affair, and is soon hopping around England and eventually around the world, matching wits and scientific devices with the evil powers behind the menace.

Weaknesses of Ind's novel include a tendency to get carried away, so that his premises become less and less credible as the book progresses, and perhaps a too great preoccupation with gimmicks and a too frequent reliance upon cooincidence.

Yet the novel is unquestionably entertaining. It does not boost Ind into the top ranks of authors of spy thrillers, but your attention is unlikely to stray until you have seen Colonel Craig safely through his last encounter with the forces of "the New Dawn."

SURPRISINGLY, "The Man on the Raffles Verandah" is more convincing and in some ways superior to "The Sino-Variant."

We say surprising, because the photo of the author, Lydia Kirk, shows a pleasant-faced little old lady in her 70s.

And her biography does not indicate that Mrs. Kirk has had any personal experience with espionage.

She does know Singapore and England, however, where her novel is set. She is the much traveled widow of a former admiral who also served the U.S. extensively as a diplomat. Her lone previous book was a collection of letters written in Russia and entitled "Postmarked Moscow." Now she has set about carving herself a new career as a suspense novelist.

She, too, has as her hero a retired agent. But her Maj. Malcolm Gordon is British and considerably more conservative than Ind's Cornelius Craig. He is past the age of romantic involvement, and there are no devilish new devices or weapons at his command. But when he is called out of retirement to play deadly games against a Singapore smuggling and spy ring with Communist China connections, he shows considerable ingenuity and cool courage.

Mrs. Kirk's writing shows some stiffness at times, a tendency she will probably overcome with practice. And the mystery or surprise element in her story is minimal. But her background of one of the Orient's most intriguing cities is splendid, and her characters are generally interesting if not deeply etched. The septuagenarian has done rather well in her first outing in a highly competitive field and rates better than just a passing grade.

Cunningham

"ANYTIME, Anywhere" by Martin Caidin seems like another of those action novels that have been made into so many John Wayne movies, with the late Ward Bond as his sidekick, the two of them blustering and brawling.

Or, for more finesse, the late Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy could have played the lead roles.

Whoever actually turns up on screen, if the picture is made, it will probably be a better movie than it is a novel. For one thing, some of the rampant and sickening sadism will have to be omitted or toned down a bit. And the four-letter words thinned out somewhat.

Caidin, incidentally, has already sold three novels to Hollywood.

He is a specialist on aviation and the military, and is highly regarded for his knowledge of and writing on those subjects. Not surprisingly, the best parts of "Anytime, Anywhere" are to be found in those episodes of airmen and aircraft in the sky, particularly a splendid opening description of two pilots and their planes battling a tremendous electrical storm over the Atlantic.

The story itself is contrived and tiresome. It centers around tough Matt Bowden, flyer and aviation maverick in the risky business of ferrying old craft and flying stunt planes for the movies. When an opportunity for a dubious venture that offers bigger rewards presents itself, Matt decides to take the chance. Unfortunately, Matt Bowden is not an appealing character. His girl friend, Diane Kelly, is thinly drawn and almost lost in the masculine cast. Some of Matt's flying cohorts are mildly interesting.

No doubt the men in this rough and dangerous business do spew a stream of obscenities and profanities, as Caidin has them doing. But somehow he makes it sound unlikely and all quite self-conscious.

Aviation buffs and fans of "he-man" literature should enjoy the book. But for others, there is better reading around.

LOUISE TEATHER, a student of the history of the Tiburon Peninsula-Belvedere Island area where she resides, has written "Island of Six Names: A History of Belvedere, Calif., 1834-1890."

The booklet is sponsored by the Belvedere-Tiburon Landmarks Society through a memorial fund for Marjorie Rey Rickard, nature and history enthusiast, and all profits will go to the society.

Mrs. Teather, a former Independent-Journal correspondent, directs her attention upon Belvedere, following it through successive periods when it was known as El Potrero de la Punta del Tiburon (the Pasture of Point Tiburon), Kashow's Island for Israel Kashow, Peninsula Island, Promontory Island, Still Island and finally Belvedere Island, although throughout all these island titles it was actually connected by causeway to the larger Tiburon Peninsula.

The book was lithographed by Graphic Arts of Marin and is illustrated with maps and old sketches.

It can be ordered from the Landmarks Society, Post Office Box 134, Belvedere-Tiburon, 94920, at $3.20 per copy, including tax and mailing charge.

THE TALLYMAN by Bill Knox; Doubleday, 188 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

The police team of Colin Thane and Phil Moss functions in the toughest district of what has to be one of the most unprepossessing cities on earth, Glasgow, Scotland, working efficiently and humanely, while confronted with many of the same daily living frustrations and problems as you and I.

This time they are up against a loan shark, or tallyman, who doesn't hesitate to use muscle and even murder when his victims welsh or others get in his way.

Thane and Moss struggle to uncover the identity of the tallyman, and their quest takes them into both high finance and the underworld. The mystery element isn't all that perplexing. But Knox is adept at making his characters interesting and meaningful.

A FARR AND ASSOCIATES DEVELOPMENT

THE EXPLOITERS

Imperiled Pleasure Of Growing Up

ASSAULT ON CHILDHOOD! by Ron Goulart; Sherbourne Press, 278 pages, $6.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.

In affluent, child-oriented America, it seems impossible that there could be an "Assault on Childhood!," but writer Ron Goulart proves one exists in his book of that title.

He demonstrates conclusively that even while our youngsters might be under-disciplined in the home, they can also be over-regimented by society. That parents who pamper outrageously often also fail to protect their children from the exploitation of others.

"The child," Goulart writes, "is on his way to adolescence, and from there to adulthood, and his transition shouldn't be interfered with by the giants of the kid business. The meaning and pleasures of growing up should not be imposed from the outside."

Children, he claims, are more likely to be regarded and treated as consumers than as kids. "Everyone has the right to be left alone, the right to occasional solitude. Everyone, that is, except children."

Many of the producers of mass products regard the words "consumer" and "child-like" as synonymous, Goulart charges, and would like to see "the worst characteristics of children . . . survive into adult life. Too much advertising presupposes a residue of childishness in the viewer. The advertising aimed at children begins what can be a lifelong assault."

Some of Goulart's specific targets:

Toys, which are often only scaled-down models of adult appliances, or war toys that glamorize killing and encourage aggressions, or dolls such as Barbie that require extravagant spending that teaches small girls "to expect to be valued by an ever-increasing wardrobe and their ability to manipulate their fathers, and, later, their husbands into buying clothes and more clothes."

The Walt Disney organization, which Goulart describes as "a gigantic sprawling mechanism, antiseptic and incredibly efficient, with the driving purpose of making money from children. The Disney machine may be bigger and cuter than a slot machine, but it thinks the same way . . ." It is, the writer claims, a manufacturer of "the false dream . . . a world without the rigors of cause and effect . . . (it is) sugary sentiment coupled with engulfing commercialism." And: "America is not so much a sick as a childish society. Walt Disney did much to encourage this retreat from maturity."

Children's television programming, termed "a mass of indiscriminate entertainment dominated by some 40 animated program series which in turn are dominated by ugliness, noise and violence. . . . The history of the last two decades of children's television is a history of carelessness and exploitation." Violence, Goulart suggests, should be criticized not so much for quantity as the way in which it is presented.

Comic books — the surviving ones "are not for kids at all" and the ones that came before them were saturated with sadism, sex and racism.

And "empty-calories foods" — the soft drinks, candies, sugared cereals, pastries, and other heavily carbohydrate snacks that, thanks to coaxing, make up so much of the diet of children and teen-agers.

"Every childhood now is in danger of ceasing to be a voyage of discovery and turning into a prearranged tour," Goulart asserts.

"To let ourselves be forced into thinking we can prove our love and concern (for our children) with objects and gifts is . . . wrong," he also declares.

What can parents do to resist these exploiters?

For one thing, Goulart advises, they can complain loud and long — about bad TV programming and commercials, about dangerous and unwholesome toys, about misrepresented foods, etc.

They can become "label readers," especially in the supermarket, making certain before they buy exactly what the contents are inside the package.

"The most applicable means of overthrowing the entire kid business, of minimizing its effects, involves getting our notions about being parents sorted out," Goulart writes. "If we're not sure, if we're impressed by the propaganda of the kid business, then we can't really function as mentors, guides and teachers. We become either casualties or implements of the assault on childhood."

"Don't let the juggernaut of the kid business run you over," the author implores.

In the great outpouring of "muckraking" books triggered by Rachel Carson and stimulated by Ralph Nader, Goulart's "Assault on Childhood!" must be regarded as one of the most important and most convincing. He seems sometimes self-contradictory, criticizing some (the toymakers, for instance) for too much realism, and others (Disney) for too little. He repeats that old saw about newspapers and magazines paying attention to children only when they have done something wrong — an infuriating misstatement to any reporter who has spent hours recording the accomplishments of children and youth for the reading public. But his basic assumptions and interpretations are sound. And he may have put his fingers, in exploitation, on a cause for some of the current unrest among youth that is every bit as important as the much blamed permissiveness in the home.

Ironically, many of the critics of the permissive no doubt rank high among the exploiters.

Technology Has Improved The Eye-Appeal Of Siding

It's no longer possible to take a quick glance at the outside of a house and tell the nature of the material used as siding.

Sometimes even a close inspection doesn't instantly reveal whether the "overcoat," as builders call it, is made of wood in its natural state, plywood, hardboard, asphalt, asbestos-cement, aluminum, vinyl or whatever. New advances in coatings and finishes have tended to bring together the appearances of the various materials so that one resembles the other.

THIS INABILITY to distinguish which is which is of no real importance, except perhaps to some home owners who choose one material but want it to seem like something else. In much the same way, a householder will often select something like a coffee table because it has a laminated plastic top — provided it has a wood-grained finish.

Two examples of siding which come in a large variety of styles, finishes and colors are aluminum and hardboard.

Aluminum now comes in many colors, among them deep browns, green, gold and earth tone. Patterns and designs are many, including textured wood grains that you can actually feel. These are embossed directly on aluminum sections. In some cases, the metal and coating are embossed at the same time; in others, only the coating is embossed.

TEXTURES RANGE from smooth marble-like finishes to rough-sawn lumber to wood clapboard.

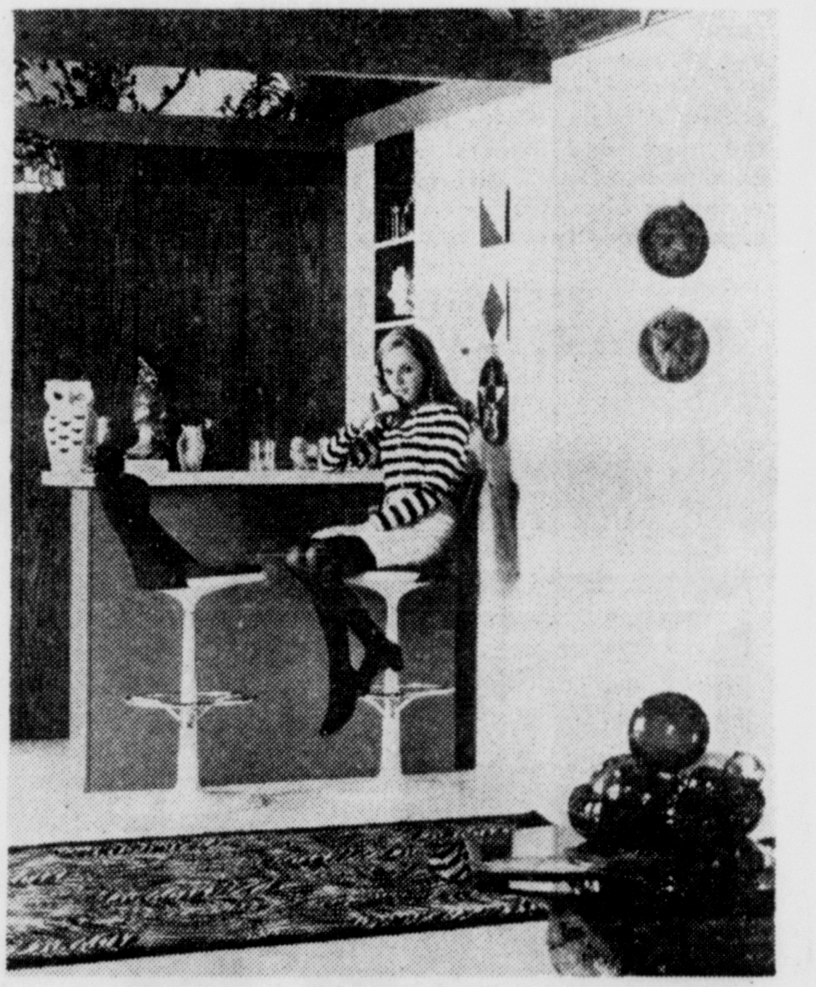
Hardboard sidings are available as horizontal lap and vertical panels, with V-grooved surfaces embossed with wood grains and other textures, or in plain panels for board-and-batten applications. Pre-primed hardboard sidings take and hold finish paint exceptionally well.

Technological advances have done more than merely provide house sidings with eye appeal.

Again using aluminum and hardboard as examples and not because they are unique: the new aluminum coatings have maximum resistance to fading, corrosion, abrasion, staining, salt spray, humidity, grease and oil; hardboard sidings can withstand hammer blows, hail, thrown objects and surface impacts without denting, won't split or splinter even when nailed close to the panel edges, are moisture-resistant and will not rust or corrode.

THE MATERIAL you select is largely a matter of personal preference — whether you are having a house built, having new siding installed or doing the job yourself — and the amount of money you want to spend.

It is important, in any case, that the workmanship be good. If you are having the project done professionally, which is the more likely eventuality, select a reliable contractor, ideally one who has been recommended by a friend or neighbor who has had similar work performed.



A LITTLE imagination put this corner to work. First a recess was built into the wall so that books and interesting accessories could be displayed in an attractive showcase. Then a small refreshment bar was added. The bar provides the base for other conveniences, such as a "communications center." The stools provide a comfortable spot for a phone chat or a quick letter. Children also will find this a good place for games or homework when their own room becomes boring. Easy maintenance was included in the design. Washable Marlite paneling was used on all the walls — a textured oak on the back wall and a contrasting white on the adjacent walls. Easy to install, the plastic-finished hardboard planks can be put up with adhesive and concealed metal clips over old walls or new framing. Black feature strips between the textured oak planks provide an additional visual interest. The counter also is faced with prefinished Marlite. Cozy corners like this can be included in many new homes or as improvement projects in older homes.

Buying a swimming pool?
Watch out for pool sharks!

During the past 10 years, over 200 California swimming pool companies either went under or changed their names. Hundreds of pool owners were left high and dry with nothing to swim in except a sea of regrets.

The best way to avoid pool sharks and fishy deals is to deal with a pool company whose responsibility is established and documented. Over 40,000 people have made their decision for Anthony Pools. Their endorsement has made Anthony the largest, soundest and most reliable pool company in the entire world, the only pool company listed on the American and Pacific Coast Stock Exchanges. Building pools for 25 years at fair competitive prices and providing prompt service and superb engineering—Anthony's reputation is as solid as its pool foundations.

An Anthony pool is all Anthony—all parts and all accessories are manufactured and assembled at Anthony's 13-acre factory. You deal with a major responsible company, not a small, independent franchised dealer. Over the years—if little problems should develop, you cry on one shoulder only at the local Authorized Anthony Service Center.

Prices? They begin as low as $2,495. Since Anthony builds more pools than any other pool builder, such high sales volume allows for very low competitive pricing.

If you're planning to take the plunge, look to Anthony who makes pool buying absolutely sharkproof! Fill out the coupon. Or phone. Now!

Some Gift Ideas For The Gardening Father

Garden Page

In Marin County the problem of choosing a Father's Day gift is simplified by the fact that just about every man is a gardener to some extent, voluntarily or involuntarily.

Even if he doesn't get a boost in his morale from working with the soil and plants, he is likely to find it necessary to engage in some yard maintenance work from time to time.

Of course, it is the hobbyist, the man who really enjoys gardening, who most appreciates a gardening gift.

FORTUNATELY, Father's Day, June 15, falls right at the zenith of the gardening season.

A plant, a gadget, a gardening book are all possibilities.

When it comes to selecting a plant, there is no real restriction. But perhaps you would be wise to choose from among the more seasonal items on display at Marin nurseries.

Many of them still have container-grown roses in bloom, or dwarf citrus trees that are bearing fruit. One of the newer varieties of rose will be especially appreciated by the rosarian. And the dwarf citrus "availables" range from oranges through grapefruits to the limes.

The gift choices don't stop here. How about a blooming hibiscus or a fragrant gardenia? Or a bonsai plant, which might start father on a new hobby?

MANY nurserymen have newer hybrids of such trees as locusts, ginkgo and liquidambar.

Then there are such distinctive trees as Japanese maples or black pines that lend themselves to container growing on the patio or porch.

Don't overlook tree ferns or other shade plants to add to dad's (and the family's) outdoor living pleasure this summer. There are unusual philodendrons and rubber plant-type shrubs that will thrill the most discriminating gardening father.

For smaller budgets, there are many small pots of blooming plants available, and a good selection of hanging basket plants to be had. These will continue to bloom and remind dad of your thoughtfulness.

WHEN IT comes to garden gadgetry, nurseries and stores are a veritable gold mine. Special shears and clippers for pruning or trimming are a necessity — and some fathers would enjoy having more than just one pair.

Hose reels eliminate many problems and frustrations around the house though some dads perhaps wouldn't yield to the temptation — or the luxury — of buying them for themselves. There are several types of reels on the market and one to fit your pocketbook.

There are many other garden gadgets including lawn sprinklers, pressure sprayers, root feeders and spreaders for feeding lawns.

Smaller items are bountiful — quality garden gloves, trowels, spray nozzles for the hose, plant identification labels, and canvas soakers for effective watering of sloping lawns and banks of ground cover.

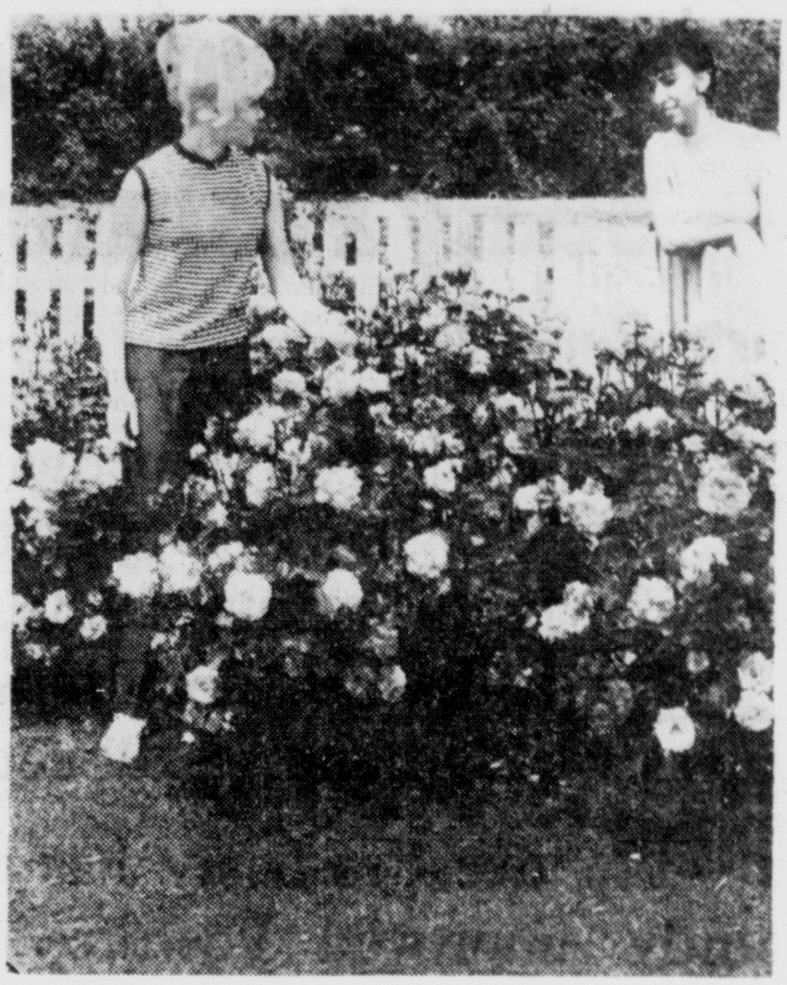
IN THE matter of books, nurseries and bookstores also have plenty of these covering a variety of gardening subjects.

"How to" books will help gardening fathers design a garden work center, build a fence, plant a portable garden or landscape a patio. Hobby-type books will encourage his success with some particular plant, such as roses, camellias, orchids, bonsai, or what have you.

With hobby-type books, it is always nice to include one or two plants described in the books at the same time.

No matter how much dad enjoys his gardening work, he also appreciates an occasional period of rest and relaxation. The gift of some garden furniture then is not at all out of order. Give him an outdoor chair or longue especially suited to his dimensions and needs.

And there are countless other gift possibilities for fathers that garden.



THE CONTAINER-GROWN roses given to dad as a Father's Day gift for setting out in the garden will be enjoyed then, not only by the recipient, but by the family and the neighbors as well. (California Association of Nurserymen photo)

To Cover Those Rocky Areas

Marin gardeners frequently find themselves confronted with rocky areas that are stingy in soil and nutrients and which, because of run-off, resist the best efforts to soak them.

Yet, because of their interesting contours and often colorful stones, they can be converted into garden showcases, if properly planted.

LOOK FOR plants that require little attention — plants that can be neglected and still looked at with pleasure. Some will afford lovely blossoms; others, such as the conifers, are mainly for foliage.

Junipers rate high whenever rock gardens are mentioned. Not the shrubby junipers or the columnar ones, but those that remain low and spread to form a handsome cover. These would include the blue-gray San Jose Spreading Juniper, Bar Harbor or Andorra Junipers.

There are several cotoneasters that lend themselves to rock gardening. Some have glossy green foliage and hug the ground. Others remain low and have branches that grow in rigid, interesting patterns.

BESIDES THEIR texture and distinctive foliage color, contoneasters provide bright red berries.

The native wild lilac family offers several low-spreading varieties of ceanothus, which shows a large amount of small, fragrant, lilac-like blooms in spring.

Books could be written on groundcovers and succulents that are good choices for rocky places. Just ask your nurseryman to show you a few choice varieties.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- ✓Bedding plants can still be set out for quick summer garden color. Here is only a partial list of fine summer performers: Marigolds, zinnias, asters, periwinkles, ageratums and petunias.
- ✓Cut back the old flowering stalks on your delphinium. It will then bloom again in the fall.
- ✓You can plant all types of container-grown trees and shrubs at this time.
- ✓A regular watering schedule is absolutely essential for the health of your lawn for the next several months. Also remember that a well-fed, vigorous lawn conserves water.
- ✓Bush roses can be pruned lightly for shaping after they finish their spring bloom.
- ✓While planning your vacation, also make plans for the care of your garden while you are gone. A couple of weeks or more of neglect can be disastrous.
- ✓Keep up the pellet war against snails and slugs.
